GERMANS IN HOLLAND FACE ENCIRCLEMENT

Two Russian Armies Within 20 Miles of Vienna

32,150 Germans Surrender During Past 24 Hours

Germans Say All-Out Drive Launched Against Stettin

Moscow, April 2 — (AP)—Russian forces battled for Neudorfl, three miles east of the Messerschmitts assembly center of Wiener Neustadt in Austria, today.

Other Soviet columns smashed within 20 miles of Vienna and encountered bitter German resistance in the Stettin area.

Columns of Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's 3rd Ukrainian Army pounded Gap fortifications from the south between captured Sopron of the Neusiedler See and Wiener Neustadt, and pushed into the Lieths mountains further north. The Russians drove within eight miles of Wiener Neustadt, and were only nine miles from the vital railway junction Vienna with northern Italy and Klagenfurt, troops of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian Army were spiving down the Karpaty Mountains, west of Trnava and within 12 miles of the capital of the puppet state of Slovakia.

Another Russian column fought for the railway junction of Lanzhots, 6 1/2 miles due east of Bratislava, and 8 miles west of Sese.

More than 32,150 Germans surrendered in the last 24 hours as Tolbukhin advanced 15-miles yesterday in one of the swiftest operations of the war on the eastern front.

Troops of Russian 4th division driving westward on the south side of the Danube, shoulder-to-shoulder with Tolbukhin's troops, outflanked the Germans, disorganizing resistance and reaching close to Szekszlatava, itself.

Premier Stalin announced in one of three orders of the day yesterday that Russia had wrested Orbo, the citadel of Glogau, 53 miles southeast of Breslau, had fallen with a garrison of 6,000 Germans, and was in a seven-week siege.

The 3rd Ukrainian Army columns pushing up the west shore of the Neusiedler See threatened to cut off the enemy defenders of the Britisava Gap from the rear. Rust, 11 miles due south of Neusiedl, was captured in this drive. Five miles west of Rust, Trausdorf was captured in the closest approach to Vienna.

Other Tolbukhin troops fighting north of the Yugoslav border in Hungary captured Kaposvar, a new 36-mile front between Lake Balaton and the Drava River, capturing at least 80 towns and villages.

Malinovsky's troops on the north bank of the Danube advanced along a 70-mile front toward Bratislava, taking more than 100 towns and villages.

The German radio said 450,000 Russian troops had opened an all-out assault against Stettin, Baltic port on the Oder River, and Berlin's gateway to the north, and declared it had taken up positions opposite Berlin itself.

Lt.-Col. B. Gribble Dies After Brief Illness

Served in Two Wars and Was Former C.O. of Argyll Regiment

Lieutenant-Colonel A. Beverly Gribble, former commanding officer of the Argyll Light Infantry (Theakston and Lennox and Addington) and Mrs. Arthur Gribble, of this city, died in Kingston General Hospital early today following an illness of brief duration.

Col. Gribble suffered a cerebral hemorrhage at his residence, 249 John Street, Thursday last week, and was ordered to hospital by his physician. His condition remained, practically unchanged until early today when he failed to rally from another seizure. He was in his 66th year. Funeral announcement will be made later.

Born in Belleville, the late Col. Gribble received his education here. Returning from overseas after the First Great War he graduated from the Ontario Business College later accepting a position with the Ontario Liquor Control Board. Leaving that office he became associated with the late F. B. Wills and operated an automobile agency for a number of years. Later he joined the staff of the Canada Packers, Limited, company branch here as its manager, a position which he held with the exception of a period of service during the present war until the time of his death.

He was a member of the Belleville Rotary Club, the Belleville Club, Minto Lodge, A.F. & A.M., No. 11, and Metro Chapter, R.A.M., No. 7, and the Bloomfield Church.

Joined Argylls as Private.

Displaying an early tendency towards things military, he in 1911 joined the 2nd Argyll as a private. Possessed of a keen military mind, and one which adapted to ability things rapidly he soon rose to the rank of lieutenant.

Chafing at the delay of mobilization of his regiment during the early months of the First Great War, he, with some regimental friends, worked hard to get it into the regiment and joined a heavy artillery battery at Gananoque with the rank of gunner. Later he served long and honorably with the heavy guns in France.

Returning from overseas once again joined the Argyll with the reorganization of that unit in 1920 with the rank of lieutenant.

A year later he was promoted to the rank of captain and two years later he was given the rank of major.

In 1932 headquarters assigned him to take a military staff course at Toronotto, which he successfully took later, in 1936, he was given command of the regiment, succeeding Lieut.-Col. R. A. Geen.

Promoted full colonel March 18, 1943, Col. Gribble served the regiment as its commanding officer when he was succeeded by Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan.

Outstanding Instructor.

Recognized as an outstanding instructor in the phases of infantry training, the late Col. Gribble was one of the contributing factors to the proud record of the Argyll Light Infantry. He had trained a large number of officers and other ranks to active service units in the Canadian army, and took a personal active interest in this phase of training up to the time of his retirement and even after the official change of command. He gave the benefit of his instructional ability and knowledge.

A mathematician of exceptional ability, he extended his knowledge along these lines of training to officers and other ranks coming under his own unit. He held a well-deserved reputation not only in military circles of his own regiment and dis-

AMERICANS FIND OKINAWA DRIVE NOT VERY TOUGH

Quickly Capture Two Airfields and Push On to Kanagusuku Bay Fleet Anchorage

Guam, April 3 — (AP)—Thousands of U.S. 10th Army troops and United States Marines invaded strongly defended Okinawa 325 miles from Japan proper — Easter morning at little cost and found the going still surprisingly easy as they pushed eastward today toward the important Kanagusuku Bay fleet anchorage.

They went ashore on the west coast and quickly captured two airfields and a dozen virtually-deserted villages and towns.

By nightfall they had carved out a beachhead three miles deep at points on an isthmus eight miles wide, Admiral Nimitz announced today.

Front reports said a third airstrip was under construction — but was not.

The invaders walked inland from the beaches 900 yards or more without having to seek shelter.

Tough fighting is expected, however, as the Japanese reorganize for defence. The enemy, surprised by invasion of Okinawa's western shore near Katena after a 10-day bombing and bombardment of his eastern shore defences, was expected to fight fanatically from prepared positions probably in the low hills in the center of the island. Estimates of Japanese strength on Okinawa range from 60,000 to 100,000 troops.

"Final, decisive battle is not assured," Nimitz declared as he personally read his Sunday communique announcing the landings.

Capture of Okinawa will afford airfields for intensified aerial neutralization of Japan's home airfields and continued devastation of its industrial centres.

"It is difficult to over-emphasize the importance of the occupation," asserted Lt.-Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner Jr., commander of the new 10th Army. His command comprises the 24th Army Corps and the Marine 3rd Amphibious Corps, made up of probably six divisions — all veterans of Pacific fighting.

British fleet units, now co-operating with the U.S. Navy in attacks on the Ryukyus, heavily pounded Miyako island in the southern part of the chain on Saturday and Sunday. Fourteen Japanese warships were attacked and six damaged by British aircraft.

Nakagusuku Bay would afford United naval units a new advanced base.

Virtual control of the east-china sea would mean tighter blockade around Japan's sea lanes to the southward and Asia as in prospect.

Great Operation.

Great Britain's Long Months Of V-Bomb Terror Appear Ended

By HENRY B. JAMESON

London, April 2 — (AP) — Hope that Great Britain's long months of V-bomb terror might be ended was sprung up in London today.

An official announcement said that not a single vengeance weapon had landed anywhere in England since last Thursday night and additional reports poured in of German-launched bombers returning to their Holland, location of the V-bomb launching pads.

The unprecedented lull came after an official declaration that Britons will no longer experience the tremendous explosions of rockets and flying bombs with which the German high command had planned to wipe London off the map.

The lull also considered significant that in the period between dawn Friday and dawn Saturday was the 1st time in nearly 24 hours since February 26.

HOPE TO AVOID SHOWDOWN OVER POLAND'S STATUS

Moscow Presses for Pole Participation in San Francisco Conference

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, April 2 — (AP) — United States diplomats are working at top speed to avoid a showdown with Russia over Polish participation in the San Francisco United Nations Conference.

Hitler officials have told the Polish National Unity government agreed upon at Yalta in February still may be set up in time to resolve the controversy.

Should it appear by the next few days that this hope might be transformed into a probability, the additional time in the opening date of the conference may be delayed two or three weeks, officials said.

The Polish issue involves two closely related questions.

1. Reorganization of the present Soviet-sponsored Warsaw regime to include Polish "democratic elements" from both inside and outside the country. Great Britain and the United States have counted heavily on getting Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk of the London Polish government into the new administration.

2. Representation for Poland at the San Francisco Conference. This became an open controversy Saturday with disclosure that Russia had requested and Britain and the United States had vetoed an invitation for the present Warsaw government.

The Russian action was based on the expressed possibility that reorganization of the Polish government might not be achieved in time for Poland to have any part in the conference. Therefore, Moscow contended, the invitation should go to the administration in power now despite the fact that practically no other United Nations recognize it.

That apparently passed the next hurdle in the Soviet government, and there was considerable speculation here over what Moscow might do. It ranged all the way from the possibility of prolonged debate to a Russian threat to withdraw from the conference.

All indications today are that London and Washington have decided firmly against yielding to Moscow in this case.

BANDITS SECURE $2,000

London, Ont., April 2—(CP)—Three masked bandits robbed Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Talbot, operators of the Commissioners Inn, 2 miles on the Germany road, unable to open them before that channel port fell and the Germans were under.

CANUCKS LAUNCH HEAVY ATTACK IN ARNHEM AREA

First Indication General Crerar's Army Operating as Unit in Offensive

By CHARLES LYNCH

With the 1st Canadian Army, April 2 — (Reuters) — British troops of the 1st Canadian Army today launched an attack to clear the German forces from the "island" between Nijmegen and Arnhem.

Although Canadian troops have been identified as operating within the 21st Army Group during the last nine days, this dispatch is the first direct indication that Gen. Crerar's 1st Canadian Army is operating as a unit in the present Allied offensive east of the Rhine.

Canadian troops beyond Hochelen, on the east bank of the Rhine, have encountered considerable German troop concentrations and there was brisk fighting in Holland in the area due east of Arnhem.

The British attack is on the "island" between the lower Rhine which flows past Arnhem and the Waal which flows past Nijmegen.

The two rivers are separated by a neck of land about 10 miles long which has been held for the last six months half by the Germans and half by Canadian troops who took over in the area shortly after the ill-fated Arnhem airborne landings.

The British attack went in at 8 a. m. behind a heavy artillery barrage and by 10 a. m. it was possible to say the attack was going well.

Under Water Two Months Ago

This area was under flood waters two months ago, the Germans having blown the dykes, but now with the Rhine down to normal level the whole area is above water, although the ground is boggy.

The main attack today was against the German positions on the southeast corner of the "island" where the river Rhine forks to become the lower Rhine in the north and the Waal in the south.

Canadian and allied searchlights, which for the last two months have aimed constantly over this area, were still on when the attack went in just before dawn.

Gun flashes added to the illumination as British troops leaps from silt invasion barges and began to cross the Rhine, met considerable small-arms fire and light flak.

JAP ATROCITIES ON CIVILIANS IN MANILA ORDERED

Captured Documents Show That Wholesale Atrocities Result of Battle Orders

Editor's note: Most of the Manilla atrocity stories herein summarized were reported by the Associated Press as they were discovered during the fighting in the city. The following is a summation as compiled by American military officials and sworn to by civilians who survived them or by soldiers who discovered them. The complete report, with all sworn affidavit form, were disclosed today.

By FRED HAMPSON

Manila, April 2 — (AP)—Captured Japanese documents bearing dates between last Dec. 23 and Feb. 14 strongly suggested today that the wholesale atrocities on civilians in Manila were the result of battle orders issued to the enemy garrison.

The atrocities were not, the reports indicated, the work of isolated groups of Japanese troops but directives into their own hands, although at the time a good many of them so appeared.

Included in the documentary reports of Japanese slaughter of helpless civilians in the downtown battlefield were enemy communications or orders captured by soldiers of the U.S. Army's 14th Corps.

The following is a paragraph from a Japanese battalion order dated Feb. 5, supplementing the instructions by 14th Corps soldiers:

"Enemy troops, if they are to be killed, they must be gathered into one place. In this connection, in regard to consideration that ammunition and manpower must not be used to excess. Because the disposal of dead bodies is a troublesome task, they should be gathered into houses which are scheduled to be burned or demolished. They should also be thrown into the river."

Diary Captured.

A diary, presumably belonging to a member of the Japanese force in Manila and captured by 14th Corps troops contained the following items:

"Feb. 3—150 guerillas are disposed of. Japanese are continually stabbed and killed 10.

"Feb. 4—Killed 164 guerillas newly brought in today.

"Feb. 5—Killed 1,000 guerillas to death tonight.

The pattern of the atrocities as described in the captured reports is so similar as to indicate strongly

Hundreds of Key Canadian Officers Are Soldiers Only in Wartime

By ROSS MUNRO

(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Army in Germany, April 2 (CP) — The 1st Canadian Army has been blessed with the skill of a professional force yet hundreds of its key officers in the field are anything but professional soldiers.

They are in uniform for the war only and will return to businesses, professions, factories, mines, farming—back to the multitude of civilian occupations they left behind.

Like Maj. Gen. Howard Kennedy of Canada's reserve army, calling his division commanders together at Ede before the war, and their conception is a new one to Canada, a section of the army is a remarkable feature of the overseas force which has fought in the Mediterranean and on the western front.

Brigadier Bruce Matthews, Montreal, Toronto; and Bert Hoffmeister, Vancouver, lead the other two divisions. Sixty-seven per cent of the commanders of the infantry and armored brigades and infantry brigaders along, with the great majority of the commanders of the combat infantry battalions and tank regiments.

The chief of the intelligence branch—on whom Gen. Crerar, the army commander, relies for his information about the enemy—is a young lieutenant - colonel from Montreal who was a Montreal business firm.

Gen. Crerar's personal assistant is a Vancouver lieutenant-colonel from the Seaforth Highlanders of Canada's reserve army.

While the chief of staff, Brig. Churchill Mann, of Toronto, is a permanent force, those who work with him on operational planning are practically all reserve.

In the "A and Q" branch dealing with administration of supplies, practically all senior staff officers are reservists and the chief is a confident force chief.

Throughout the list at army headquarters, reserve staff officers are doing a tremendous job, also are the nucleus of regular army officers whose career in the army exclusively.

This is no reflection on the permanent force that the reserve is doing such a big job in the struggle army, for there are not nearly enough "P. F." officers to fill all the appointments. But a feature of the present field army is the fact that reserve officers in reserve staff officers in close co-operation with the permanent force. An old criticism that the permanent forces officers monopolize army certainly is not valid now, if it ever was.

New York, April 2 — (AP) — American invasion forces have started landings on Kume Island, about 60 miles west of Okinawa and west of the Kerama group, a Tokyo broadcast reported by the Blue network said today.

106 MILES EAST OF RHINE

With U. S. 9th Army, April 2— (AP)—This army is 106 miles east of the Rhine today.

Field reports indicated the 1st. Canadian Army today was in action as a unit under command of Gen. Crerar.

To the north the British 2nd. Army drove forward under a accurate artillery barrage. Gen. Dempsey's division made the unconfirmed statement that Lt.-Gen. Dempsey's men had penetrated 35 miles east of Meppen and 15 miles south of Winfield, 57 miles southwest of Hannover.

Deep Thrust by Canadians

Still farther north Canadian troops pushed deep into the area into northern Netherlands while R.A.F. Mosquito bombers covered their fleeting that area, although in smaller numbers than Saturday.

Allied Supreme headquarters said all of Field Marshal Bernard Von Model's Army Group B, strongest left on the western front and containing the bulk of the remaining elements of nine Allied armies east of the Rhine, shaky under the blow of the Ruhr trap, closed yesterday by the U. S. 1st and 9th armies.

From as the rate of this whole fighting picture, Gen. Eisenhower's communique in an unusual statement of the course of the developing campaign declared the Ruhr clean-up will not preclude the advance of Allied armored columns farther into Germany."

There was a heavy sprinkling of American motor cars seen passing through Belleville over the weekend, particularly automobiles from New York and Michigan. When queried regarding the matter of having sufficient gasoline for a return trip, one Yankee motorist informed the reporter he carried sufficient gas purchased at home in the car trunk.

The mitred majesty and thunderous acclaim of organ backgrounding the triumphant voices of augmented choirs ushered in one of the most impressive Easter celebrations in years on Sunday as thousands of city residents wended their way to the various churches of the city.

Churches rang to the glorious music of Easter. In practically all religious edifices special musical services were given, the setting adding to the occasion were heard in all the glory of fresh young and old of the city.

Celebration of Holy Communion was held in many churches and scores of communicants wended their way to the altars in this glad observance of the Easter festival. It was reported today that the largest number of churchgoers in years participated in the Communion celebrations while congregations as a whole increased in size of those attending Easter services during the day.

Several outstanding members of the clergy from various points assisted local ministers in the Easter services while choirs in many instances were augmented by prominent local and district vocalists.

Easter lilies predominated in church floral decorations and the beautiful flowers added a symbolic touch to the reverence and beauty of the services.

Easter Parade Not Up to Other Years Despite Day of Sunshine

Despite weather that was conducive to give rise to the first official formal public showing of what milady will wear in 1941, Belleville's version of the Easter parade, here on Sunday were mildly disappointing. Not that there was up a point of vantage where they could view a pleasing ensemble—

The mere male of the species, who, while outwardly confessing that he has nothing more than passing interest in what the opposite sex wears at the dawn of each year, was out in more or less numbers and taking fleeting observances in shop windows to get a glimpse of their own new Easter styles.

Comparatively Few Out.

But in the main they were disappointed. Not as the sample of Easter apparel that the fair and youngest element displayed but as the numbers in the parade. Not as the gladsome finery of their sex on Easter.

Front Street, usually the mecca for promenading ladies and young girls, was almost deserted. The usual cues, trios and quartets of the fair sex, attracted somewhat by the flash of color flighted up the otherwise drabness of a near dreary main thoroughfare.

Just to be different, a trio of bobby-soxers defied all Easter convention and tripped gaily down the main street in short coats and turned up slacks with the symbolic spray of their generation, the bobby sox, evident in all its plain glory.

However, what few did turn out forty-five years ago he left here to reside in Pittsburgh where he was engaged in the hotel business. TRENTON

Several Minor Crashes Reported

Trenton, April 3—Several minor accidents occurred over the holiday weekend but none was injured and no serious damage done.

On Friday afternoon Reginald McKee struck a bicycle owned by J. W. Woods, Trenton, when it fell from the parked position on Front by directly in front of Mr. McKee's car. The bike was valued at $30.00 and considerable damage was done to it but the damages were amicably settled between the two parties involved.

One Collision

On Friday night two cars collided at the C.P.R. Subway on Front St. doing considerable damage. A chevrolet sedan owned and driven by Teofil Travacik of Batawa was proceeding North, when due to the wrong side of the highway when a car owned by Mrs. Wallace and driven by Leo Coughlin turned under the subway towards town collding with the Travacik car. No damage was done to the Wallace car but the left front fender of the other car was damaged to the extent of $15.00.

On Saturday afternoon a car owned and driven by H. Wilson, Dominion St., skidded out from the curb on Front St. striking a taxi driven by H. LaFleur and driven by Howard Cook, Dufferin Ave. The front fender of the taxi suffered considerably.

About the same time on Saturday, Mrs. F. Graham, driving a car East on Dundas St., opposite Tyler's barber shop, was struck by a car which pulled out from the curb without giving any signal. Considerable damage was done to the fender of Mr. Graham's car and as he went in to a nearby store to call the police the other car sped away. The license number of the car was obtained and it is likely a charge will be laid.

Another Hydro Rate Reduction For All Rural Consumers

A further Rural rate reduction from 4c to 3½c per kilowatt hour on the first block of energy used in any one month by Hydro Rural Consumers, will go into effect on all bills rendered on or after May 1st., 1945.

This Rural rate reduction will mean a saving of approximately $300,000 a year to Hydro Rural consumers.

The New Uniform Rate Structure Will Be:

¾c per kilowatt hour for all additional energy.

No service charge on Farm Service . . a service charge of 56c gross per month on Farm Service.

The more Hydro you use the less it costs on the average per kilowatt hour. Increased use therefore brings lower costs.

The important revisions in Rural rates, made effective in January 1944, have resulted in a greater use of energy, enabling the Commission to further reduce the cost of electricity to Hydro Rural consumers in Ontario.

U-Boat 570 Captured From Germans Takes Heavy Toll Of Ships in Enemy Convoys

Story of German U-boat captured by the British has been turned against enemy craft with great effect, says Donald Sweeny, in an article in the Saturday Home Magazine, New York.

The German flotilla commander was puzzled. His hydrophone apparatus, long sensitive listening equipment, confirmed the report that an unidentified, submerged submarine was travelling in the centre of the convoy. The hydrophone man also reported that — judging from the sound of the propeller, undoubtedly — she was a German sub. They were sure because long years of training had taught them to distinguish between the noise characteristics of the different types of friendly and enemy vessels. But why didn't explain why such a strange U-boat should be accompanying the convoy. The commander's sailing orders said nothing about this strange, developing factor.

Finally, he put it down to the only commonly overworked excuse in a navy ever available warship to the task of protecting this small but vitally important coastal convoy. He ordered the depth-charge crews back to other duties.

Suddenly, there came a yell from the man in charge of the hydrophones: "Torpedoes!"

The commander yelled "Full to starboard!" The warship shuddered with the abrupt turn of the rudder. The evasion order had come too late. Like a sharp knife cut, a white streak sliced through the water. The ship was barely beginning to turn when the torpedo struck near the engine room.

Before he climbed into a lifeboat, the German commander saw another, then another, of his ships torpedoed. He screamed that there would be a court-martial for the hydrophone men who had blundered. No matter what their listening apparatus told them that submarine was definitely not German. Then there was a shout from the lifeboat and men were pointing. The ship had broken surface. She was a German sub." There was no mistaking the outline—even in the half-light of dawn—of Germany's newest model U-boat, the U-500 series.

The flotilla commander was furious. He would recommend the honorable discharge and the firing squad for the U-boat captain, who had stumbled so far off his course that he had attacked one of his own convoys. Once the U-boat crew came to the coming tower and realized the mistake . . .

But when the coming-tower hatch flew open, the crew raced along the deck and manned the guns. Whereupon Home Fleet fired over open sights at the closely packed and highly armed ships of the coastal convoy. The vessels were like sitting ducks. The flotilla commander slumped into his seat in the lifeboat, now comparatively sheltered. Has the entire U-boat crew gone mad? To him there seemed no other plausible explanation.

The true explanation had been started several months before. The U-970 was built at the Blohm and Voss shipyards at Hamburg, and successfully completed her shakedown runs off the coast of Norway. Then, with a brand-new crew of four officers and 36 men on set out on her first patrol, south of Iceland, on August 21, she lay in wait for a lightly-protected Allied convoy which was carrying crucial supplies to Britain.

The sea was rough, with long swelling swells. This made the going hard for the inexperienced German crew-men, who had been chosen for their "Aryan" purity rather than their sea background. They were in the habit of diving to a depth of 25 to 40 feet — the ideal depth for attack—and with no periscope to bring the ship into battle. The captain realizing this, ordered the sub into deeper and quieter waters, as far below the stomach-turning swells as possible. After hours of this, the Nazis were somewhat better, but still unsteeled in stomach and spirit.

At midmorning, the captain decided to surface and check his position. Unfortunately for him, he neglected to take the elementary precaution of leveling off slightly below the surface and checking the sea's temperature. The U-970 surfaced a bare 1300 yards from an RAF patrol plane—a Hudson bomber under command of Squadron Leader J. Herbert Thompson. Thompson had no time. He swooped down and planted the bomber's four depth charges in a neat pattern around the sub.

The Nazis came pouring out through the coning-tower hatch. Thompson flew back and forth over the submarine with every machine gun in his plane blazing. When the German realized they were being strafed, they tried to crowd down the hatch again. But they were pushed back by the men trying to escape from the sub.

It turned out that had panic had started inside the sub. The inexperienced crewmen found the lights out and water gurgling from dozens of gages whose faces had been smashed by the concussion, filling the interior with the most terrifying hissing sound that can be heard inside a submarine. And the deck was littered with overturned supplies and equipment. In less than two minutes, an improvised white flag was being furiously waved at Thompson's plane. Nothing more unambiguous could have been chosen as a surrender signal—the captain's White shirt.

Thompson immediately ordered a radio message flashed from the plane asking the nearest British ship to race to the scene. Meanwhile, the miserable Nazi crew huddled on the bridge and coning tower, where they spent the next 20 hours.

The Admiralty records show that in all that time they made no effort to save their ship from the enemy. They knew that the sea was too heavy for a rescue, since their own tiny rafts would be almost sure to capsize. It wasn't until next morning that HMS Burwell steamed up and the Germans were taken off. The submarine was taken in tow and beached on the south coast of Iceland. The German crewmen told their captors that they had to close in on the ship because the depth charges had released deadly chlorine gas from the abattoir storage batteries, and when British sailors entered the sub, they found only one battery slightly cracked and all the others in perfect condition.

British experts concluded after a thorough examination of U-970 that the inexperienced Nazi crew men were simply frightened and wanted to be rescued. Damage to the ship from a structural viewpoint was superficial. A small three-inch split in her pressure hull was quickly mended, making her perfectly seaworthy. She was brought to England under her own power.

In the next few months, a fat sheaf of typewritten data was collected, giving every detail of the U-970's construction and equipment. Among other things, she had an excellent 3.5 deck gun, with a range of 13,000 yards. British engineers went over her like detectives over the scene of a crime, and there was no secret they didn't uncover. The information they provided has proved of inestimable value to the Allied navies. . . Naturally, much of this data cannot be revealed. But it has confirmed the experts' previous judgment that the enemy had an excellent tool, embodying all the qualities of workmanship and scientific ingenuity for which German engineers are famous.

By far the most impressive single feature of the U-570 was that no less than 70 hydrophones were placed throughout her hull. Sensitivity of her listening equipment was the major point of interest with British experts. Her engine-room of 1400 horsepower and six cylinders each—were the largest that could be crammed into the available hull space. Her surface speed was 17.8 knots, with range of 7900 miles at ten knots. Her full speed when submerged was no less than eight knots.

General consternation reached by the Admiralty was that the U-570 was designed for offensive action only. Her controls were very highly centralized, indicating that she was built for use in hit-and-run warfare. She carried more ratings than the similar British type does, indicating that the plan was to concentrate vital functions into the hands of a few trained men, leaving the purely routine functions to unskilled recruits.

By early October, a new British crew was familiar enough with the German U-boat—now re-christened HMS Graph—to be sent on their first combat patrol. Eagerness of the crew to take the Graph against the enemy was increased by their peculiar joy of being able to attack the enemy with his own weapon. Moreover, they felt that almost any vessel they knew would be preferable to what they had been undergoing in port. It seemed that every admiral, commodore and captain in the Royal Navy had inspected their ship. They were so thoroughly sick of having endless processions of visitors track dirty feet across interior that they wailed for the comparative privacy of the sea.

Young Lieutenant F. R. Marriott —captain of the Graph—took his new ship to northern waters and soon picked up the track of another submarine—a German submarine—with the Graph's excellent hydrophone system. The crew snapped to action stations. For the next 40 minutes, Marriott "trailed" the enemy sub. Key man during this attack was the naval rating who handled the complex multiburst hydrophone equipment. With his eyes fixed on elaborate red and green graduated dials, and a headset firmly jammed over his ears, he seemed carefully but unemotionally interpreted the mass of sounds that came to him into facts about the Graph's quarry.

The enemy sub surfaced — apparently horrified from the very hydrophone evidence that the submarine was another friendly U-boat. Marriott, peering through the periscope, caught two brief glimpses of her in the heavy swell. The commander's coming lower was painted bright green, and she appeared to be flying a pennant on. . . The skipper considered his position: itself he ordered a salvo of four torpedoes to be fired from the forward tubes. Every one was fired, the submarine at the Graph's hydrophones. After a few terribly long moments, he tensely reported two torpedoes had gone. British exploding. Then followed what he described as a great succession of all kinds of metallic noises, and a distinct, high-pitched "whistle." The whistle indicated that large quantities of water were being rapidly displaced, and to the experienced ears of the Graph crew was sufficient evidence that they had sent the U-boat to the bottom.

Lieut. Marriott and the Graph's crew attacked the German submarine a second time. And convoy so continued matter. And convoy so continued matter. And convoy so continued matter that, to addition to sinking a German submarine, the Graph crew had helped to put two German destroyers.

Such is the story of the Graph, one of the most successful ships in the Royal Navy. The secret of the Graph's success lay in the fact that she was captured intact because her crew was too seasick to fight. Secondly, because her crew had given British Navy the key to the secrets of modern warfare. The boat contained more than that from then on, German navy commanders could never be sure but that what looked like and sounded like one of their own U-boats might not have a mad crew fest would turn and attack them.

PEERLESS MOTOR OIL

"Clarkson process important advance," experts declare

B-A Peerless Motor Oil is made by a unique 5-point-process at the most up-to-the-minute refinery in Canada, designed to make lubricants which will stand up in our Canadian climate.

1 High Vacuum Distillation! Heat is bad for oil. High Vacuum distillation means lower refining temperatures; Peerless is refined with exceptionally high vacuum.

2 Furfural Treatment! Ring sticking, "varnish," corrosion, sludge . . . the useless "fractions" in the crude which cause each of these troubles are removed.

3 Wax Extraction! This is most important to Canadians. Canadian specifications on this point exceed U.S. standards. Thanks to M.E.K. solution . . . sub-zero devaxing temperatures, every trace of harmful wax is extracted from Peerless Motor Oil.

4 Catalytic Clay! This fascinating process "polymerizes" out any last few lingering impurities. It is here Peerless Motor Oil gets its sparkling colour.

5 "It's Alloyed!" This is the final step that turns B-A Peerless Motor Oil into the "stainless steel" among oils. By this means we process the natural tendency of all oils to decompose, forming harmful deposits in the engine, is corrected.

"It's Alloyed"

When we've made the finest, most efficient oil known to petroleum refining, we "alloy" it, to protect it against heat and pressure in the engine of your car.

Longer car life, lower repair bills seen with unique, five-point-process lubricating oil, perfected at Canada's most modern refinery

RESISTS HEAT AND PRESSURE
HELPS KEEP ENGINES CLEAN

Just as iron is first refined, then alloyed to make stainless steel, B-A's remarkable new Peerless Motor Oil is protected against oxidation to keep engines clean longer.

This sensational advance means cash savings to you. The most frequent cause of repair bills—accidents apart—is faulty lubrication, arising from the actual decomposition of lubricating oil in the crankcase of your car. It will pay you, this spring, to change to B-A Peerless Motor Oil!

Are you getting full protection from the oil you buy?

Unless the oil in the crankcase of your car is a really modern oil, chances are it won't do equally well all the things an oil must if it is to give full protection.

First, of course, oil must guard the rapidly moving parts against friction . . . often under pressures of 1000 lbs. to the square inch. For this you need an oil that starts "oilier." B-A Peerless is made from selected lubricating crude oils.

Next it has to carry off the tremendous heat—from 400° to 600° F.—generated in the combustion chamber and do this without thinning out or breaking down. One reason why Peerless Motor Oil is "alloyed" against oxidation.

Oil must also carry away impurities formed by combustion. And—more important—it must not add by its own decomposition to these impurities. Again Peerless scores! Because it's "alloyed" it inhibits oxidation, avoids harmful "varnish" or sludge.

Lastly an oil must seal in power! This means it must maintain the right body at all temperatures. B-A Peerless Motor Oil has an exceptionally high V.I. (Viscosity Index)!

"It's Alloyed!" Yes, Peerless Motor Oil is specially treated to inhibit oxidation, keep engines cleaner thus cutting repair costs, keeping your car on the road!

Longer car life is what you get at the familiar B-A sign! This year, change early to the amazing new Peerless Motor Oil. "It's Alloyed" to cut repair costs!

Carstrew driving depends on proper lubrication. Because "it's alloyed," B-A Peerless stands up to modern driving conditions better, keeps repair costs down!

Time to change old, tired, winter grade oil for new, sparkling, "alloyed" Peerless Motor Oil! Drive in tomorrow where you see the "sign of the big B-A."

YOU ALWAYS BUY WITH CONFIDENCE AT THE SIGN OF THE BIG B-A

Greater Than German Blitz

The Germans had a word for their modern war which they hurled at Poland first of the Allies in 1939. It was called blitzkrieg and they boasted of it. It struck with fury at Poland and in the spring of the second year made rapid sweeps over Norway, the Netherlands, Belgium and France. How there has come upon these many lands the dreadful word never have thought possible, the striking power of the Allies, more potent than any German blitzkrieg could be, while the Allied avoided those inhumanities of the German blitz which the Allies refused to countenance and repeat.

In the development of mighty power the blitzkrieg of Germany has been turned back upon herself with many times the strength of the German blitz.

The Allied Powers have turned the tables against the Huns so that present events show Germany staggered by the blows that have hammered upon enemy targets. The United Nations have been thoroughness itself in developing a form of war which overtakes the German blitz decisively utterly. German military power is showing the effects of collapse.

The territory the Germans hold is narrowing down swiftly and their opportunity of movement is lessening. They had the forces would be greatly handicapped by the limitations which Allied victories have placed upon territory and movement.

Prisons and Reformatories

Ontario Prisons and Reformatories report for the year ending March 31st., 1944, shows that the all-time high in the number of persons committed to Ontario jails and the numbers sentenced occurred in 1939. Since that time there has been a year-by-year decline until the summer of 1942, then there was a steady condition during the remainder of that year which ended in March 1943. The following year of which the annual report is now published, showed an increase. This increase in committals was from 25,411 to 25,976 and in the number of sentenced from 18,551 to 19,159.

While in any year there are variations in the numbers of the various categories of crime committed and these variations may not be indicative of any particular trend, however "it should be noted that persons committed for crimes against property increased 1,173 from 8,495 to 7,268. Also the number committed for crimes against public morals and decency increased 413, from 681 to 1,094. On the other hand the number committed for crimes against public order and peace decreased 890, from 16,380 to 15,490, the report shows.

It is stated that "in the detailed categories commitments for common assault increased from 474 to 579, but drunkenness cases decreased from 330 to 214. Breaking, entering and theft commitments increased from 1,184 to 1,611, robbery from 172 to 216, theft of a motor vehicle from 2,537 to 2,826, theft of cars from 496 to 699 and receiving stolen goods from 292 to 375. There was a decrease from 3,693 to 3,381 in commitments for breaches of the Liquor Control Act and also a decrease in committals for drunk and disorderly (not including breach of the L.C.A.) from 7,031 to 5,540, drunk driving from 809 to 717, and vagrancy from 2,833 to 2,409. Commitments for civil offences against Wartime Regulations increased from 471 to 1,223 and those for military offences from 543 to 957. It is noted that the total commitments of 25,975 did not involve that number of different persons, there being cases of repeat appearances as for drunk or vagrant, sometimes under different names and often in different jails. Only those charged with indictable offences are finger printed in the prisons.

The Deputy Provincial Secretary's report states, "With more children having more money and war bonds, and often leaving these and other valuable papers insecure, it is easier for thieves to be about their business." In any year there are many who go to jail as a result of their weaknesses and yielding to temptation. Others try deliberately to live by crime and will not willingly earn an honest living even when work is plentiful and wages are high." Again it is said that "in their own way many prisoners are patriotic to some extent and it should be recorded that they have generously donated blood for war purposes."

Deputy Provincial Secretary Neelands points out that the great majority of prisoners received only short sentences in the jails useful work is comparatively scarce and time for developing the proper attitude, training, rehabilitation and reformation is too short. This is one factor in making imprisonment, says the report. Another is too generous use of probation and suspended sentence without good supervision, of those who have previously been convicted.

"In the present stage of our civilization custodial and correctional institutions of the proper kind are necessary, with steady improvement from time to time as science and other modern influences dictate, but at least as important as institutions, are great extensions in helping ex-prisoners becoming re-established as good citizens. At that time following their return to society from prison, a real effort to give them proper assistance will pay dividends. Always the greatest dividends are at the beginnings. Prevent juvenile delinquency. When it does, detect it in its incipient form and promptly apply proper remedy. Those are the sure, sane ways to eliminate crime and to ensure that our human assets do not become liabilities."

Port of London

(London Times)

A wide impression that since the bombing raids of 1940 the Port of London had been unable to take a major part in military and naval operations. The publication of details of what the port accomplished in preparation for the western invasion of Europe and in supplying the needs of the services for some time after D-Day.

Between the beginning of June and the end of August there were loaded and despatched from the Port of London over 311,000 personnel of the British Liberation Army, over 123,000 vehicles, and over 666,000 tons of general stores, including ammunition. Only a short time was allowed for the operation, the work of normal commercial ships proceed simultaneously. The loading of 2,000 ships was involved, and the tidal conditions of the Thames rendered necessary extensive fine calculation and organization for docking and undocking of the fleet of vessels in order to avoid delay and confusion.

The successful carrying out of this great task was a tribute to the trade unions and to London dockers, who during the worst period of the day-and-night flying bomb assault worked as enthusiastically, handling astonishing tonnages daily to keep pace with the finely cut time table.

Another contribution of the Port of London was the construction of five out of eight and a quarter miles of caissons for the artificial harbors at Normandy. The caissons were built in dry docks, wet docks and temporary riverside basins.

The School Children Carried On

(London Daily Mail)

In the hall of a school in Southern England 150 infants were at "prayers" when a V-weapon fell.

This is what happened, told by the head mistress:

"The windows cracked and broke and, as it blown by a great wind, all the kiddies swayed.

"There was a silence. Then I carried on with the prayer.

"Some of the girls were a little white and a bit shaken as the prayers finished. Then they sang happy, jolly songs which they all knew, and in a short time forgot the explosion."

Fastest Ships in the World

(London Daily Sketch)

Early in the war Britain built four minelayers of a type entirely new in any navy—the size of light cruisers and faster than any ship in the world.

Revealing this in a broadcast, Rear-Admiral R. K. Dickson, Chief of Naval Information, said that because of their speed they were often used to rush urgently-needed troops or munitions about the world.

But they were designed for one purpose only—offensive mine-laying right on the enemy's doorstep.

JUST FOLKS

APRIL FOOL

Was my pocket torn? Oh no!
I pretended it was so,
Thought I knew beyond a doubt
"April Fool!" I'd learn about.

Saw a purse, and with a grin,
I bent down to take it in.
From my hand 'twas snatched away.
"April Fool!" I heard them say.

Grandma, wise and calm and cool,
Chuckled softly: "Such a fool!
Not one day alone, I mean,
Such a fool you've always been!"

"Right," says I. "From sun to sun
I am foolish, but it's fun!
Just to have them laugh at me,
Such a fool I'll always be."

Twenty years ago yesterday, April 1st., 1885, Belleville and the Quinte District awoke to find three spots of rain from the 15th. Regiment and the 49th. Regiment to put down the rebellion in the Northwest.

Chesse Inspectors and Instructors for this county have been appointed as follows: H. Howie, Ballerille; R. W. Ward, Forfarshire; A. H. Thompson, Madoc, and J. B. Lowery, Prankford.

Owing to the fact that at the January session of County Council the report of the committee with regards to the establishment of a House of Refuge was rejected and no action taken, something will soon have to be done in the matter. It is probable that a special meeting of the County Council will be called in the near future to take some action.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

CAPT. BURKE SPENT YEAR IN BELLEVILLE

Editor Ontario Intelligencer,

I was much interested in an article by Captain Robert Thomson, appearing in this Monday, March 26th. edition of the Ontario Intelligencer. This article related to Captain Burke's experience while a captive of the Japanese.

It might be of interest to Belleville readers to know that while Capt. Burke was located at Ikoma, for some time, that immediately prior to his last residence in Canada, he was associated with the Stephens-Adamson Mfg. Co. as an engineering capacity at our plant at Los Angeles, California. He was for about a year immediately before leaving for Manila, associated with our company here at Belleville in the capacity of sales engineer. He left Stephens-Adamson to become connected with the Alsims-Kroll Company, of Manila, which company represents the Stephens-Adamson Company in the Philippine Islands and the Far East.

Rural Hydro Rate Cut to 3½c., Five-Year Plan

Toronto, April 2 (CP) — Hon. G. H. Challies, labor-chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, has announced reduction in the rural hydro rate to three cents to 3½ cents per kilowatt-hour and plans for a five-year post-war rural electrification scheme to cost an estimated $63,000,000.

The new rate, made possible by a program of new services including uniform rates for rural areas instituted last year, is on the first block of energy and is effective May 1. Rates on subsequent blocks remain unchanged, he said.

The province-wide plan had resulted in an estimated saving of $500,000 and the additional reduction would save another $100,000.

The Commission and rural committees will have the direction of the electrification program, to be started as soon as labor and materials become available after the war. Plans call for expenditure of an estimated $22,500,975 by the end of 1949, of which the government will provide 50 per cent, the rural-land in agriculture, and nearly $40,943,970 by rural consumers in wiring fees and purchasing equipment and appliances.

Involving an estimated 24,513 man years of labor or an average of nearly 5,000 men a year, the program calls for:

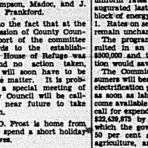
The skipper called Focke and said he couldn't go any farther. Focke replied that he was under "U's only two miles more. Please U."

The skipper answered and said that he couldn't.

And they pulled it off. They went right into the town's mouth, pulled in our pilot, and docked safely. Then, and then only, did Focke and Schmidt start laughing.

They came back to us three hours after all the war had ceased. They had flown six hours on a three-hour fuel tank. Focke-Wulf was an American life by doing so.



That night I lay in my bunk reading a copy of "Flying" magazine. It was the issue of last spring by nearly six months old. It was the first civil publication I had seen.

"It's a mighty good feeling to know that you've just brought a plane down in Tokyo harbor, the Navy says it is to get you."

It had never happened when that article was written. But it has happened now.

Tallpiece—The rescue ship radioed us the next day that Buchanan and Hall were safe. That had just be imparted, they had also rescued another pilot, Lieut. Jim Parker of Jap pilot and a lone bedraggled survivor of a Jap picket boat!

EISENHOWER'S DEPUTY

At the request of General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, Major-General Lucius Clay has been appointed deputy military governor to have charge of civil affairs in Germany when Allied troops take control of that country.

U.S. Flier Pulled From Tokyo Bay By Rescue Ship Directed From Plane

(By Ernie Pyle)

In the Western Pacific—(Delayed) All but six of our planes were back from their strike on Tokyo and safely landed.

The six formed a separate flight, and we couldn't believe that all of them had been lost and for that reason our officers didn't feel too concerned.

And then came a radio message from the flight leader. It said that one of the six was down in the ocean, and that the other five were hanging around to try to direct some surface vessel to the rescue. That's all we knew for hours. When we finally got the story, this is it:

Ensign Robert Buchanan, of Clementon, N.J., was hit by flak as they were diving at Tokyo from some 30 miles west of Tokyo. Buchanan himself was not hurt.

He kept his plane up till he got over water, but it was still very much Japanese water. In fact, it is in Tokyo outer bay—but he got one of the two bays you see on the map leading in to Tokyo.

Ensign Buchanan sat on, with five Jap planes to his credit. He ditched his plane perfectly, and got out in his rubber boat. He was only eight miles from the nearest land, but that land is the bay entrance.

Then the flight leader took charge. He is Lieut. John Focke, of Duxbury, Mass. He is a navy ace, and an old hand at the game. He has downed about 30 miles off the Bay entrance.

Focke took the remaining four of the flight, and started out looking for an American rescue ship. They found one about 30 miles off the Bay entrance.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

ARSENIC AND DEAD FINGERS

Young woman who had worked several years in a flower shop complained with great annoyance of chapped chilblains, likewise itching scaly eruption on the back of her hand which appeared to be worse after a few months, but thereafter each spring she had temporary relief as her skin trouble on the hands each year. Upon questioning the young woman found that from time to time when she was tired and got cold—say driving her car on a cold morning—several fingers would become numb and white and after a half hour or so when the circulation returned gradually they were very painful. This happened even on warmer mornings if it was at all cool.

Dead fingers is the common name for it. Raynaud's disease is the medical name for it.

The peculiar character of the skin trouble that this young woman had before the Raynaud's disease developed suggested to her short physician that chronic arsenic poisoning might be the cause. She had certainly been exposed to arsenic for years in her occupation connecting with the flowershop for arsenic is commonly used in spraying.

So the doctor gave the young woman an injection of one-half gram (about ⅛ grains) of sodium thiosulphate (commonly known as vein.) This caused a marked increase in the amount of arsenic excreted in the urine in the next twenty-four hours. Normally there is a small amount of arsenic in the urine anyway, but such an injection of thiosulfate would greatly increase the arsenic in the urine of the normal individual.

Thereafter the doctor gave the patient similar injections of thiosulfate two or three times a week for several weeks. She soon no longer suffered from either the skin rash (which had long masquerading as "eczema") or Raynaud's.

Any one may take thiosulfate injections. In doses of, say, 5 grains dissolved in at least half a glassful of water three times a week, with sugar and fruit juice, twice a day, after food, for, say, three days each week—preferably alternate days — entails construction of 7,239 additional miles of rural primary lines to serve 97,900 new customers, 32,000 of whom are expected to be farmers. This will increase the number on rural hydro to 85 per cent of the farms that will eventually be on the line.

Reduction In Rural Bills

He said he had noted a reduction in monthly hydro bills of rural consumers from $5.81 in 1941 to $3.39 in 1944 with a cut in the kilowatt-hour rate from 2.4c cents to 2.13 cents. Average monthly bills of industrial consumers increased from $3.57 to $3.98 because of less hydro spurring to the use of power but the rate dropped from 2.03 to 2.48 cents.

AGAINST MEMORIALS

Carlisle, England (CP) — H. H. Bagot, chairman of the Diocese of Carlisle, objects to the placing of personal war memorials in churches. He says: "It is unfortunate to use the walls of a church as a private record office for the cataloguing of genealogical details of those who have given their all or offered to pay for the privilege," he said, for "war casualties occur inde- criminately among all classes."

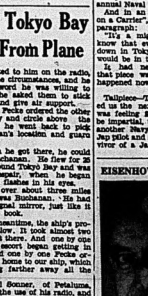
SUPREME COURT JUDGES

There is no constitutional method of removing members of the supreme court of the United States can be removed for mere incompetency.

These officials can be removed only for impeachment which is defined as the only method of removal provided by the Constitution.

Even an insane judge would have a legal right to remain on the bench. It becomes impossible to incarcerate him. In fact there has been one case in which Chief Justice Henry Baldwin, of Pennsylvania, was a member of the Supreme Court from 1830 to 1844, often exhibited an alienation of mind, according to Senator Thomas John Quincy Adams and Daniel Webster.



Notwithstanding his impaired mental faculties Justice Baldwin was permitted to remain on the bench and regularly to take part in the proceedings and decisions until his death. The danger in the course of justice was not great, because the deranged member of the court had only one vote and his colleagues could easily prevent any misconception of his opinion might have on the decisions.

Only one member of the Supreme Court has been impeached. In 1804, during Jefferson's incumbency of the presidency," Associate Justice Samuel Chase, of Maryland, was impeached by the House of Representatives. In 1805 acquitted him on the impeachment. The charges were largely political and that he was been one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Fashion Flashes

MOUNTING COLOR best describes the colorful hats seen lately. Brown and white, navy and white, and taffeta is draped for a bonnet, then trimmed in a flower of the same wide crown. It is trimmed in front with a cluster of tiny green rose buds tips and fuchsia grape clusters.

NO COMPETITION this spring for red. Red is the blue in suits, dresses and accessories. Navy wool is used for an attractive bolero dress with taffeta revers in red and white to match an overblouse with small collar worn outside the suit.

IT'S EASY to achieve the costume look with a belted tunic coat. It was made in navy wool, and ottoman is used for a handsome black coat with high, rounded collarless neckline four button fastening to the swing waist, which has a self belt softly tied. Hem is flared and wide sleeves have narrow turn back cuffs. Nice over crepes, sheers or prints.

NONE TOO SOON to be on the lookout for warm weather cottons. Try some cotton navy striped pink chambray is used for a neat frock, with high, collarless neckline and button fastening all the way down to the waist. Short sleeves; self tie bows at one shoulder and the opposite hipline give a soft accent to a basic, tailored dress.

NOTED about town is the suit of silk dress on soft, tailored lines in shades of navy, beige, grey or their mixture, grays. Some suits are in roughly textured silks, others of smooth ones. Fine examples are Grand under a coat or as a solo. Expensive, but a good, lasting investment.

SLIM STRAIGHT figures take beautifully to the fitted reefer. Especially pretty is a slim navy for in light navy woolen, buttoned the waist with gilt buttons and with two buttoned flaps at the waist.

Old Isle Now

If there is re-knitting to be done for spring, remember that winding (before new tight) has an effect on kinks in twisted wool . . . It is careful winding that straightens it out. When unraveling an old knitted garment wind the wool around a tray, tie into skeins and wash until clean, using lukewarm water and mild soap. Dry, outdoors if possible, and

Belleville Girls' Work Board Holds Initial Meeting

The Belleville Girls' Work Board held its initial meeting in the "Ladies' Parlours on March 19th with thirteen members present. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Toronto Girls' Work Board, was well attended and very successful.

The slate of officers as presented by the nominating committee was accepted by the Board.

Chairman—Mrs. Ralph Murden. Vice-chairman— Mrs. A. Archibald. Secretary-treasurer—Mrs. J. L. Goodfellow. Chairman of Camp Committee, Miss Mary Hobart chairman of Girls' events, Mrs. W. Weir, chairman of Finance, Mrs. S. Wood, chairman of Publicity and Promotion Mrs. R. Seldon, chairman of Leadership Training.

The other members on this Board are representatives from the different organizations in the city, the various city churches, as well as the Girls of Canadian Girls in Training groups.

The object of this board is to provide a medium through which those desiring to do so, and other Christian organizations may participate the Canadian Girls in Training program and girls leadership in the whole field of Christian Education for teen-age girls, 12- 17 years of age.

Miss Robb explained in detail the duties of the Board and answered most capably all questions asked her. It was decided to send a delegate to the Girls' Work Board conference being held in Toronto on April 7th and 8th.

A social half hour brought the meeting to a close.

The second meeting of the Belleville Girls' Work Board was held in the Ladies' Parlours of the Bridge St. Church on March 26th with fourteen members present. Mrs. Morden presided and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Plans were discussed for holding the annual C.G.I.T. Camp in Moffs Lake.

The question efficiently the Board will need funds and ways and means of raising such were discussed.

wind up into loose balls. The new garment should be smaller than the old one, as wool does not go as far when re-knitted.

The Art of Laundering

Sandwiches to be made and the butter as hard as nails? . . . avoid that frustrated feeling, and waste of time and butter by using a simple trick. Fill a small china bowl with boiling-hot water and let it stand until the bowl is really hot. Then pour out the water and invert the bowl over a piece of butter. A couple of turns of the butter is just right for spreading.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Bread-Winning Wife is Constantly Belittled by Unemployed Husband

"Dear Miss Fairfax,

"The situation in my home life borne us to disaster. My husband is a charming person, but for some reason—physical or psychological—has never been able to make good. Before we were married, and my fortune left him by his father — stocks, real estate, government bonds—was not dent, either.

"When I married him I'd been supporting, my secretary to the president of a nationally known organization. So, when the family fortune began to go on the rocks, and the children were old enough for me to employ a properly trained child's nurse, I went back to the old firm and asked for a job. It's not as good as the one I had before I married, but is still adequate.

"My husband has not been craftsed owing to stomach ulcers, and defective vision. He has no job. Well, Miss Fairfax, I've never been one of those women who thought her duty was to refrain from earning a modest livelihood, so I have not resented my duty in bringing home the bacon, though thank goodness I don't have to cook when I leave the office.

"My husband has a maddening habit of lowering me with accomplishments, flattery, trying to make love when I'm weary, but belittling me when he has an audience. This sort of thing is degrading. He'll be to pick at some of our circle for a cup of tea or a highball, and then tries to make fun of me.

"I'm the monitor, the schoolmistress, the old grouch who won't let him have two highballs (having one kidney he shouldn't have any), and there I sit like a fool at the head of the table I furnish.

"When the company goes home, he seems to forget what made a mistake, and is for a sentimental reconciliation. As I say, the situation is driving me up the chimney. What would you do about it?

Bread-winning wife."

The situation you describe is old as humanity. When the husband went forth to the kill in the cave days, he probably resented his wife's skill in tanning the hides, fashioning the clay pots in which the meat was cooked and felt that a doe of bellitting was the easiest way to proclaim his superiority.

Today, when so many of the women are the bread-winners, the same desperate, not to say tragic, desire to preserve the ego of the alleged head of the house persists. I get hundreds of letters to that effect. When the audience has departed, such men shrivel to the role they know in their hearts' bitterness is where they belong. Thank heaven, such men are in the minority, and the American brand of husband is still the best in the world. When he begins his belittling why not leave the room?

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Gift for a Bobby-Sox Birthday Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1. I have been invited to a "bobby-socks" birthday party. Each girl is asked to invite a boy. What do these boys give the hostess a gift, and do the girls give gifts? The boy I invited is not very well acquainted with the hostess.

2. Will you please suggest gifts appropriate to give a girl in Junior high school for her birthday? (Not too expensive, please.)

— S. G.

1. Since the boys have accepted the invitation to the birthday party and since a birthday party really calls for a gift, I think these boys should each bring the birthday-er a gift. Even if the boy doesn't know the hostess very well, or not at all. Some of the boys of the same group might combine and give the hostess a corsage for her to wear at the party, or a box of candy for "party fodder." Others, who don't know the hostess very well, like four bits might send a small pot-pourri. Or an inexpensive favor that will provide fun. Anything is an amusing novelty thing from the five-and-ten.

3. These are suitable gifts, and needn't be expensive; a barrette for her hair, marked with her first name; pocket comb; a charm for bracelet; change purse; some cosmetic article, such as a powder mitt, gaily-wrapped box of bath salts or face powder; small bottle of perfume or toilet water, box of flash-colored powder puffs, powder box, manicure set, and so forth; a supply of memorandum books, or memorandum pads; a book, or an interesting book-mark; a candy container, candy box or book pencil center, or other item for desk; handkerchiefs, embroidered with her first name; bud-vase for her dressing table, or a medium-size double folding mirror; one of those magnifying; sachets; pair of fabric gloves; a box of stationery; a pair of two shoes; writing portfolio.

Duties of Godparents

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1. Please tell me what are the duties of a godmother and godfather.

2. And what should our godchild call us? —G.M.

1. At the christening, the godparents stand as sponsors for the child, and in the service, make the proper promises. Their chief duty is usually the godmother who holds the child during the christening and who gives the child's name to the minister.

It is customary for the godparents to give the child a christening gift, and sometimes make a point of "remembering" with a gift important days in the child's life, birthdays, graduations, school or business or professional promotions and so forth.

Naturally too they take a developed interest in the child's life, and although there is no enduring name "responsibility," they would give advice and help if ever needed.

2. Very often the godchild calls a godparent by the endearing name of "Aunt" or "Uncle" .. "Aunt Grace, "Uncle Jim."

OVER 1,100,000 QUARTS EVERY DAY!

Back in the summer of 1939, it was a big day when the dairies of Ontario "handled" 690,000 quarts of milk from the farms to their customers in town. Then came the war. Month after month, the demand for cream went higher and higher. All through 1944, your dairies were called on to deliver more than 1,100,000 quarts of fluid milk every day!

It has not been an easy task to meet this greatly increased demand—with thousands of farm and dairy employees in the armed forces—with shortages of trucks, tires, repair parts and gasoline . . . and higher costs of operation all along the line. But you and your neighbors can be thankful that your Ontario dairies were ready and able to carry on without a single breakdown in the long chain of distribution from farm to city home.

What we placed the heaviest burden in history on your own dairy. Yet it has carried the load without faltering, thanks to the individual initiative and cooperative teamwork of every employee. Beyond that, and perhaps even more important, is the perfect working of a dairy system painstakingly built up in the years past—and consistently improved to meet every wartime challenge.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 645
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You can always pick a fight over almost anything in bridge. Most of such squabbles need not be. They are merely the rifts that crop up from deviations of standard rules.

All bridge players do not stick to the standard rules. Some are ignorant of what is standard. Some try out nutty ideas of their own. Some flounder in the brainstorms of favorite experts.

One standard rule is: With two suits or equal length, first bid the higher ranking suit. Another standard rule is: When one suit is longer than the other, first bid the longer suit.

Along comes an expert who says: "Reverse that order to show a stronger hand." Another expert says: "Reverse that order only when you hold non-touching suits." And stuff like that.

Consequently, partners, clash. One follows reverses. Another uses a hand-and-hand. Another slips in a phoney. And the first thing they know they are pushing in all directions from the middle.

The main purpose of a rule for the choice of suits is to show your use the reverse.

partner how long they are. Only the standard rules can do that for you. And anything else just clogs the machinery.

Case as deep as you can into this hand:

♠ A Q 10 9 8 5
♣ A K Q T 6

You have two suits to show. They are both of the same length. So, you should first bid the higher rank. It is the spade suit.

On the next round you bid clubs. On the third round, you bid clubs again, showing at least five. Should he bid spades first, your clubs are now longer. So, you must have five spades, too.

But that is not all. If you have five spades and five clubs, you have ten black cards. If you have ten black cards, you must have thirteen red ones. Because you have 16 cards in your hand.

So, look at the picture partner gets of your hand. He learns you have five spades, five clubs, a doubleton in one red suit, and a singleton in the other red suit. Cute?

You may soon need a nurse if you

JUNIOR ROYALS BEAT ST. MIKES IN FIRST GAME

Toronto, April 2 — (CP)—Lorne Wilkie's Montreal Junior Royals, having started the big first game of their best-of-seven Eastern Canada junior hockey finals with Toronto St. Michael's College 3-1, today waited with quiet confidence rearmpiles, of the Toronto squad to leave clash tonight in the second contest.

Royals upset the favored Collegians, defeating only twice previously in 20 league and 12 play-off games, with a stubborn defensive display that held the sticky St. Mikes forwards scoreless for 36 minutes combined with a canny opportunism that resulted in a goal a period, two on breakaways.

no reason why a strong executive couldn't be named Tuesday night. Mr. Jack Kelly is taking an active part in the spring training drills of the Washington Senators....The Ottawa Journal's Jimmy Lawrence who made even more money out of baseball and hockey than out of pitching, still has enough on the ball to be able to write about the kind of rookie that are receiving major league tryouts these days... Schoolboy Rowe, the former idol of the Detroit Tiger fans who is now in the U. S. Navy, figures that his days as an active player are over but has hopes of hooking up with some big league club as a coach after the war is over.....Howard Cobb got another small man that most of the general public gave him little hope of being and probably made a very good coach or manager of a club.

Word has been received in the city from Ottawa yesterday announcing that Jack Kettleby, R.I.C. of Orillia, had been killed while fighting in Germany. Jack, who the writer knew as a boy, was well known in baseball circles in Belleville before the war when he pitched both in the junior and intermediate ranks. It was with profound regret the sporting fraternal element of Belleville learned of his death and the writer wishes the wife and family is extended sincere sympathy.

Cleveland Barons Win Over Hershey 3-2

(By The Canadian Press)

A third-period drive gave Cleveland Barons a 3-2 victory over Hershey Bears last night in the first game of the American Hockey League finals. The second game will be played tomorrow night in Cleveland.

Bears dominated the play in the early stages of the game and went into a two-goal lead on scores by Alex Kazan in the first period and Hal Cooper early in the second. Leo Gasparini tallied Barons' first score late in the second period while Bill Gooden for Hershey in the penalty box.

Tommy Burlington evened the count as Barons staged their final-period rally, and before mid-period Lou Trudel gave Cleveland the lead which they held until the final whistle.

Ed Dugan, Dayton, Ohio, set a new American indoor record of 6.3 seconds in the 70-yard invitational high hurdles, clipping one-tenth of a second off the mark established by Allan Tokaich of Detroit in New York City, March 31, 1940. Governor Dewey of Albany remained the National Women's A.A.U. team championship.

UnconditionalSurrender Or Piecemeal Collapse Only Course for Huns

Washington, April 2 — (AP)— War Secretary Stimson told the nation on the Western Front "makes clear in no uncertain terms" that the German army on the Rhine is "beaten."

He told a new conference it was possible the Germans may find some other temporary defence line but that "the enemy must be absolutely without hope of anything save unconditional surrender or piecemeal collapse." Mr. Stimson added:

"If the Allied armies are forced to fight from villages to villages the destruction of all Germany, the German people must know also that their present leadership and they who tolerate it will bear the responsibility."

The Secretary said the question of how the Rhine could be crossed "with as little difficulty and probably will always be a matter for military study. One big factor, he added, was the fact that from D-Day to March 23, the last day before the big push across the Rhine, the Allies had taken 1,250,000 German prisoners. By now, he added, this number has mounted beyond 1,500,000.

CASUAL COMMENT
By K.J.C.

This is the way we heard it:

Proud of a new sprinkler system that had been installed in his home, the proprietor showed a visitor in the rooms which read:

"This hotel is fully equipped with automatic sprinklers. Stainless bowl." Shortly after the visitor left, a fire occurred in a sprinkled building. In case of fire you may get wet, but not burned.

A traveler, reading the sign before retiring, asked the night clerk: "How I Lay Me Down to Sleep, Stainless Steel My Number Dear, If I should Die I'm Not Concerned.

I May Get Wet, But I Won't Get Burned."

Rallies Out.

After several years in high executive positions in the Red Cross, Harry Rollins is no longer associated with the provincial "mushroom belt" group. Harry, it seems, didn't get too many votes than our Harry at the annual meeting held recently at Hamilton and made it a unanimous decision that the president's chair lives successive years. After the meeting, Harry's old denial race Mr. Rollins withdrew his name further nominations to be signed.

A new executive was elected to the election executive in the person of Gerald Campbell, sports editor of the Toronto Star. Harry Rollins and Art Block of Trenton out of the running. Maybe Gerry Davis from Peterborough and Hugh Saunderson, Kingston, at the next regular meeting of the executive. Matchless Gerald. Incidentally when Gerry was appointed to the O.A.A. he lost a faithful and ardent worker and supporter, but now Gerry Harry will throw his talents to help the revival of baseball in Belleville.

Hockey Surprises.

The hockey experts in Ontario received a severe jolt Saturday afternoon when the Montreal Royals beat the St. Mike's "Majors" by 3 to 1 in Toronto to capture the first game of the Eastern Canada junior finals. Incidentally it was no April fool joke for the Irish supporters as the betting odds were on St. Mikes. Tonight, Monday, the third defeat of the Irish this year. How the Leafs supporters in the Gardens tonight and then switches to Montreal for games Thursday and Saturday in a best-in-seven series.

In the National Hockey League semi-finals the Toronto Maple Leafs again out-shot the Montreal Canadiens to win their fourth game and advance to the Stanley Cup finals. Here was another upset as the Canadiens were betting favorites when the series opened. The Leafs won Saturday night simply because they fired pucks at Bill Durnan from every conceivable angle and whenever possible, proving you can score goals if enough rubber is poured at the opposition net.

Around the Town.

The adjourned baseball meeting, in the interests of reviving the diamond game in Belleville, will convene at the City Hall tomorrow night.... The baseball players like to be urged to attend and voice their ideas towards stimulating interest in baseball and organizing a league for the summer. Last week's meeting was quite refreshing and there's no reason why a strong executive couldn't be named Tuesday night. Mr. Jack Kelly is taking an active part in the spring training drills of the Washington Senators....The Ottawa Journal's Jimmy Lawrence who made even more money out of baseball and hockey than out of pitching, still has enough on the ball to be able to write about the kind of rookie that are receiving major league tryouts these days... Schoolboy Rowe, the former idol of the Detroit Tiger fans who is now in the U. S. Winners Score Goal a Period While Canadiens Score In First and Third.

By FRASER McDOUGALL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 2 — (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs, having ended Montreal Canadiens' two-year reign as monarchs of hockey, today prepared for the final stage of the Stanley Cup task, a battle for the professional hockey championship of the world, in a play-off series with Detroit Red Wings or Boston Bruins.

Leafs killed Montreal hopes Saturday night with a 3-2 victory over the Canadiens. In this semi-final series with the Leafs, third in the National Hockey League standings this season, won four games for eight points. Canadiens, N.H.L. champions this season and last and Stanley Cup winners a year ago, won 2 games for four points.

The Leafs fashioned their series-winning victory with a goal in each period, Canadiens, favored eight-to-five in pre-game betting scored only in the first and third periods.

The 14,400 fans went wild with joy at the Toronto victory, showering the ice with programs and paper as the final whistle sounded. The Toronto players seemed too tired for any boisterous hilarity. The Canadiens accepted their setback in gloomy silence and showed orderly haste to catch a night train for Montreal.

Brief Exchange

There was a brief exchange between the rival coaches — Dunn-vin of Canadiens and Hap Day of the Leafs — who met and shook hands after the game. "Good luck, Hap," said Irvin. "Thanks, Dick," said Day.

Day displayed any tendency to celebration by the Leafs with a warning: "We still have to play Detroit or Boston. We'll have to keep on taking things period to period."

To reporters in the Toronto coach said "We beat a heck of a good team and a heck of a goalie, too."

Irvin said "It was a tough series" and the Leafs deserved it. He added: "The four games they won were taken by single goplas. I have nothing more to say."

Bodnar's Goal Helped

The three Toronto goals were scored by defenceman Elwyn Morris on a first-period breakaway, by the veteran left wing centreing Pressure Schriner, and by centre Gus Bodnar. Bodnar's goal, early in the third period, provided the winning margin. He tipped a blasing shot by defenceman Walter (Babe) Pratt who fired from the boards and it was deflected out of reach of goalie Bill Durnan's outstretched hand.

Maurice Richard slipped away from the close checking with which he had to contend all evening to score the first Montreal goal and the second went to Emile (Butch) Bouchard on a 30-foot shot. Durnan performed in the series, who provided added momentum to a sliding shot by Toronto defenceman Lamoureux, during a third-period Montreal threatene.

BOSTON BRUINS PROLONG SERIES WITH THE WINGS

Defeat Detroit 5-3, Battling From Behind Twice In Final Game in Detroit

Boston, April 3 — (CP) — Boston Bruins today threaten to step over Detroit Red Wings into the National Hockey League semi-finals with Toronto Maple Leafs by the same doggedness with which they clawed their way to the semi-finals over the fritving Chicago Black Hawks in a close race late in the National Hockey League season.

Bruins, stubbornly refusing to accept defeat, last night battled from behind twice, the second time with a three-goal outburst in the second period, to defeat Wings 5-3 and force the eight-point series into a seventh game. Each has won three games.

As they let immediately after the game for Detroit where the crucial game takes place tomorrow night, Bruins were full of confidence. They had come out of the hard-checking clash without injury and with their first victory over Wings since Dec. 26, 1943.

Record Stars on Defence

Gino Romini, who sat out Thursday's meeting with an injured hand, starred on the Boston defence last night and reported his injured mitt in good shape.

But Manager Jack Adams and the Wings, who also were unscathed, were not glum. As they boarded the train the Wing players expressed confidence they would come out on top.

Jud McAtee, who contributed two goals to the Red Wing cause, opened the scoring 45 seconds after the first face-off but Boston Bill Cowley, another two-goal man, tied it up mid-way through the period. Joe Carveth put Detroit ahead again 2-1 in the second and then the storm broke.

Bill Jennings, Herb Cain and Paul Chida rapped pucks behind Harry Lumley in the Detroit nets in rapid succession, before McAtee notched his second. Cowley's third period goal clinched the victory.

Mervyn (Red) Dutton, N. H. L. president, announced without fignre the league had set a new attendance record during the last season and predicted the circuit would have an eight-team set-up after the war.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)

New York, April 3. (AP)—The National Football League will have this week's biggest headline trying to settle the Brooklyn Tigers' situation.

Tuesday at Manhattan Center Dalley claims the Tigers won't return to Ebbets Field, so unless the Giants grant permission for them to use Yankee Stadium, Brooklyn will have a league of operations for 1943 or merge with some other club. And if all 11 teams operate, it will be just as big a task arranging a schedule.

Team in Some.

Team in Some, 18-year-old Cuban catcher trying out with the Senators, travelled from Miami to Washington without a word to eat or drink. He doesn't speak English and was too timid to try sign language on the trainmen.

Service Dept.

When 36-year-old Joe Marino of Staten Island, N.Y., a veteran of 238 fights, entered the recent intra-Allied boxing tournament at Khorramshahr, Iran, the medical officer told him he was too old to fight Marino offered to bet any amount he could lick the medical officer or any heavyweight in tourney. That didn't work so he went to Mental Hygiene, protesting: "If I'm too old to fight in this tournament, I'm too old to be in the army". That did the trick and Joe proved he was right by winning the title.

New Commissioner Will Be Named In Couple of Weeks

Chicago, April 2 —(AP)— Major League baseball's worried look about the prospect of play this season, now apparently is ready to settle down and end its long agitation over a successor to the late Kenesaw Mountain Landis as fifth Commissioner.

President Will Harridge of the American League says it is possible a new commissioner will be named within a couple weeks.

Harridge's statement came after a committee of four club presidents announced Saturday it was ready to recommend candidates for the office. The committee was named soon after Judge Landis' death last November to investigate possible candidates and to submit its recommendations.

Saturday the four committeemen gave no inkling as to identity of the candidates they had chosen, nor did they give the number.

The four—Alva Bradley of Cleveland Indians and Don Barnes of St. Louis Browns, representing the American League, and Sam Breadon of St. Louis Cardinals and Phil Wrigley of Chicago Cubs, representing the National League—said merely:

"The committee on selecting a successor for the commissioner of baseball met today and the members are unanimous in their league presidents that they are ready to report and make a recommendation. Obviously, there can be no enlargement on this statement."

Harridge said he would confer this week with Ford Frick, president of the National League, and they will set a date and place for a meeting of the 16 major league presidents then will ballot on the candidates—if there are more than one—to determine the new commissioner.

Dutton Names Playoff Dates For the Leafs

Boston, April 3 — (AP)—Acting President Mervyn (Red) Dutton of the National Hockey League last night announced Stanley Cup Championship dates.

Toronto Maple Leafs qualified for the best-of-seven games cup competition Saturday night by eliminating Montreal, four games to one.

If the Red Wings defeat the Bruins in their seventh and final game in Detroit Tuesday night, the first two Stanley Cup games will be played in Detroit on Thursday and Sunday, April 8 and 11. Then, the shift to Toronto for two games Wednesday and Saturday, April 11 or 13 and Saturday, April 17. If needed, the fifth game will be played in Detroit Monday, April 16, the sixth in Toronto, Tuesday, April 17, and the seventh in Detroit, Thursday, April 19.

Boston's standing in the Stanley Cup finals would complicate matters, for Bruins' rink will be unavailable to them after April 18.

Dutton said that if Bruins survive, they will open against Maple Leafs in Toronto Thursday and Saturday, April 15 or 17, and return to Boston for games Tuesday and Thursday, April 20 or 22. If a fifth game was required, it would be played in Toronto Saturday, April 24, Dutton said.

At present, however, Bruins' management is undecided about dates or sites for a sixth game. Since Toronto finished ahead of Bruin, Maple Leafs would dictate the time and place if the series went the seven-games limit.

Charlie Gatcum Has Potato Shoots Above the Ground

Charlie Gatcum, Donald Street war veteran, doesn't bother much about what he sees in the papers about hairdryers or Hoovers. Neither may come and go, mosquitoes may hum in sub-zero weather, blackflies may take pary in a rabbit and tortoise race with the mercury, hippos and crocuses may display Spring gaiety, but Charlie bases facts do not bother Charlie one iota.

On the high ground of his property, he goes quietly to work as soon as Old Sol mails the snow. This year he had the weather beaten. There was little or no frost in the ground and the thirsty earth absorbed all the moisture it could get.

The result Charlie, who usually produces the first new spud of the year some time in June, is now chuckling over a two-week advantage in his Spring planting. His potatoes are already above ground, the snouts above the ground and are exchanging kisses with the first shoots of green peas.

Other natural Spring greenery is keeping pace, but Charlie remains point to Charlie breaking all previous records for early garden production.

Police Blotter

Although city streets were free from major motor crashes over the Easter Weekend, traffic scored a number of minor ones that had to direct motor traffic in the downtown area dangerously busy on Saturday. Two minor accidents resulting in property damage, but no personal injuries, were reported late Saturday.

Both crashes reported by the police took place at street intersections, the corner of Brocker Ave. and Pinnacle St. an automobile driven by Wesley Brock, 17, Neal St., while making a lefthand turn when it sideswiped another car driven by Mrs. H. Gilmour, 30 Neal St. Police investigated and held Brant on a charge of careless driving. Fender and running board damage resulted to both vehicles, police added.

At the intersection of Church and Dundas St. saturday evening cars driven by Gerald Hall, No. 4 Dundas St. and Frank Cowan, 33 Forin St. were in collision resulting in fender and body damage, Mr. Cowan was about to pass a bus on Dundas St. as Mr. Hall was emerged from Church St. to make a turn into Dundas St. when the crash was deemed necessary, police stated.

Found sleeping in a public hallway on Front St. Sunday, a Toronto youths were escorted to the city police station charged to "get going" early today. The lads were found by police lodged for the night in their names as Melvin Jones and Allan MacLean, both of Toronto. They informed police they had left home for the Easter weekend and were "thumbing" back.

A fallen tree endangered both motor and pedestrian traffic along the Bridge Street area over the week-end. The matter was brought to the attention of police, who immediately notified employees of the Public Works Department to have the tree removed.

There was an absence of inebriety reported to have fallen into the hands of the city police over the Easter weekend when a lone "drunk" was picked up, but allowed his liberty early Sunday morning.

That swift advance was well underway.

Lt.-Gen. Patton's U.S. 3rd Army of the Rhine, had been caught in the battered gash of Germany's Lt.-Gen. Patch had U.S. 7th Army tanks within 45 miles of the Nazi Congress city of Nuremberg (pop. 421,000) where he could cut one of the two main trunk-lines from Berlin through Munich to the Brenner Pass; last publishable reports placed Lt.-Gen. Alexander's U.S. 5th Army at least 70 miles beyond the Rhine.

German Army Group B was composed of the 6th Panzer Army and the 10th Army, Pocketed along with these were a number of divisions of the 1st Parachute Army as well as thousands of static and organizational troops. The loss of the Ruhr was a catastrophe for Germany. Eisenhower's deputy, Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, said in October that Germany could be defeated within 60 days after that great industrial region was lost.

The Germans' army group in Holland was reported pulling out of that Low Country because of the hourly increasing threat that Field Marshal Sir Bernard Law, Lord of the Ruhr would spring another trap. Dispatches said that army group B the south was reeling back into central Germany.

The British 2nd Army, flanked by Canadians, was moving in a direction which left Bremen, 37 miles to the west, and Hamburg, 60 miles to the northwest, to the Americans. Both these cities are already all but encircled by the British.

they were by general order to all Japanese troops.

Some reported cases rival the most brutal of history's incidents of cruelty and torture. Perhaps the most horrible is contained in the report of Father Cornelius Bantiago, "Beside the Intramuros," sworn to by Dr. Frederick, commander of the 126th. Infantry of the 37th. Division.

Related From Outside.

Probing in the rubble of the destroyed fort, Frederick and his men found a dungeon-like room partially below the ground, the only exits of which were sealed by two seven-foot steel doors bolted from the outside.

Inside, they found the decomposing bodies of between 200 and 300 Oriental civilians. The only window in the five-foot-thick walls was partially sealed.

Through it, they found, most of the victims starved to death, but that some of them suffocated.

Major Vicente Lim, Deputy, of the 37th. Division surgeon's office said, a priest from Manila identified their hands tied, were bayoneted in a group. All wore their petrait frocks.

Brinkley also viewed the remains of 68 victims found in a group at one residence. He said there was evidence of rape in many cases, that several of the women were bayoneted through the genital organs.

DANCE OF DEATH

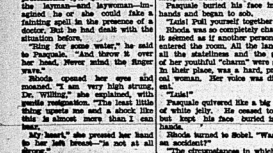
By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 5

Staff manned Rhoda with a cold professional eye. Queer how often the layman's word for nervous disorganized his or she could take a detailed spill in the presence of a doctor. But he had dealt with the situation before.

"Bring the nurse water," he said to Pasquale. "And throw it over her head. That's the finger bowl you've."

Rhoda opened her eyes and moaned. "I am very high strung. Dr. William," she explained, with a pitiful attempt at a smile. "The last little thing upsets me and a shock like this is almost more than I can bear."



My heart," she pressed her hand to her left breast—"is not at all strong."

Pasquale helped her to an armchair. With an ostentatious shrugging of shoulders, indirect rebuke to the others.

All Sobel's suspicions had returned. He faced Rhoda, one hand clenched behind his back, the other extended before him—his favorite courtroom attitude. His voice had the whips it took on when he questioned an adverse witness.

"Before you say anything more, Mrs. Jocelyn, let me say this: I want to make clear. The girl whose body has been identified as that of Kitty Jocelyn did not die a natural death."

"Oh, my God!"

Do functional periodic disturbances cause you to feel nervous, so restless, jittery, highstrung, perhaps tired, "dragged out"—at such times?

When don't delay! Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve such symptoms. It's one of the most effective medicines for this purpose. It's WORTH TRYING!

Pinkham's Compound is what is known as a uterine sedative because it has a soothing effect on one of women's most important organs. Pinkham's Compound HELPS NATURE! Follow label directions. Buy today!

Lydia E. Pinkham's VEGETABLE COMPOUND

It was Pasquale. Sobel turned in annoyance. Then he saw that Rhoda had not noticed the symptoms of the morphine addict.

Pasquale moved his face in his hands and began to sob.

Rhoda was so completely changed it seemed as if another person had entered the room. All the languor, all the stateliness and the ghost of a smile vanished. She sat erect in her chair, was a hard, practical woman. Her voice was different, too.

"Exit!"

Pasquale quivered like a big mold of white jelly. He ceased to sob, lifted his face. Across it was a sneer.

Rhoda turned to Sobel. "Was it an accident?"

The circumstances in which the body was found suggest murder."

Pasquale lifted his tear stained face. It was a greenish white now. "Murder!" he echoed.

Rhoda looked at him with scorn. "Don't let this be the ruin of you," she said, quietly. "It's impossible that anyone should want to murder Kitty. She was only eighteen. She hadn't an enemy in the world. If this body has been poisoned, it is more likely to be the body of Ann Claude.

But Pasquale was not listening. "I don't know nothing about it!" he protested. "I had nothing to do with it! I—I—protested!"

Sobel concentrated on Pasquale, with a lawyer's instinct for the weaker witness.

"The best way to prove your innocence is to make a clean breast of the whole tauth. If you and Mrs. Jocelyn know anything, you must find yourselves charged as accessories after the fact to a murder which, for you might as well suspected of murder . . ."

"Oh, no!" Pasquale spoke eagerly. "How could we be? Don't you see Kitty's death means ruin for both of us? That's why—"

Sobel's blonde eyes were terrible, but her voice was still under control. "I brought you here to advise me—not to betray me!"

"I am advising you, Rhoda." He spoke now as though they were alone. "Don't you see the police will find out everything sooner or later? They always do." His face work. "For God's sake, tell them the truth now! Then, they'll believe we're innocent. Don't you realize it's a murder case and this is our only chance? We can't fight. We're licked!" He sobbed, rose and cracked. "Don't you see it? Licked! And you should Licked!"

"Exit!"

He sank back in his chair, mumbling. "If you don't tell them—I will. I—I'm not going to risk the electric chair for your sake."

"Undoubtedly." They say you struggle against the straps when you vote."

"Softer action," murmured Sobel.

"There's what you doctors say. But you don't know, do you? You have never been electrocuted, have you? Mr. Sobel, I'm going to tell them. God! To think it was all your fault!"

He turned on Rhoda, but her eyes stilled him for a moment. Then he uttered, "It needn't look at me like that. You—you're inhuman, Rhoda.

"I agreed to finance the party, and offered to call Kitty Shoreland and Mrs. Jocelyn and Pasquale. I thought it might be fun. I had hoped for seventy-five.

"Now, perhaps, you are beginning to understand how it came that Kitty fell ill a few hours before her coming-out party.

"Edgar Jocelyn had not given me a check for the thousand. He had merely promised to pay bills up to that amount when they were sent to him. Food, linen, everything perishable had been delivered when Kitty fell ill. Both the orchestra leaders had refused other engagements in order to keep the date free for me and thy had to be paid extra for that. Edgar would have to pay them for all these things whether the dance took place or not. Nothing could be done, whether Kitty was ill or not. And that is why I allowed Ann to impersonate her at the dance."

"Pretty desperate plan," remarked Sobel.

Rhoda turned and looked at him. "I was desperate."

For once Sobel had no answer. It never occurred to me that Kitty was seriously ill. She seemed to have attacks of malaria in Europe with just those symptoms. As a rule, they lasted only three days and I thought I could save the situation by taking Kitty's place at the party. Then Kitty would be up and about in time for the dance, everything would go on as I had planned. . . . Then Ann attracted the attention of Nicholas Denby.

Rhoda extinguished her cigarette and asked Exit for another.

"Ann played right into my hands. dance more brilliantly than I expected. . . . Nicholas Denby's last thing went well until about three in the morning when Ann told me that Victorine wished to see me. I told Greg I would see her in my own private room, but she was taken in the hallway. Her face was a haggard.

"'Madame!' she cried. 'I went into Mademoiselle Ann's room to now to see how Mademoiselle Kitty was resting and—and I found—'

"We were in Ann's bedroom on the fourth floor. The bedcovers were thrown back. Ann's evening gown, flung down on a chair, was not at all crisp with permanents, so she must have left some time earlier, for her illness made her ablutions elaborate.

"I said, 'See if any of Ann's clothes are gone.'

"Victorine looked into the closet and cried out, 'Oh, yes! Her coat is gone. I remember it well. It was from the House of Trifet de Ville. Mademoiselle Kitty must have dressed in Mademoiselle Ann's clothes and left in her coat! It is extraordinary! I don't understand!'

"Kitty's illness had been bad enough. Her disappearance was appalling. If anything happened to her now, all the money that I had invested in her would be thrown away.

"I locked Ann's bedroom door and went down to my own sitting room, then told Victorine to find Luis and bring him to me. He was the only person to whom I could turn for help. When I walked, I could hear the music very faintly. It was nerve-rending. . . .

CANADIANS WITHIN 25 MILES OF ZIDER ZEE

Russian Spearheads Ten Miles South of Vienna

3rd Ukrainian Army Fighting in Streets of Weiner Neustadt

Germans Claim New Drive Started Near Bratislava Gap

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

London, April 3 — (AP) — The German high command today said Russian spearheads have reached the Austrian area about 10 miles south of Vienna, and 3rd Ukrainian Army tanks were fighting in the streets of Weiner Neustadt, 25 miles south of the capital.

Transcocan said the Russians in a bold thrust from the southeast had reached the Vienna area which is about midway between Vienna and Weiner Neustadt but claimed the Germans had "succeeded in halting the crumbling Red Army troops in the area immediately south of the Austrian capital.

The German propaganda agency also reported Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky had started a new drive northward from his positions near Bratislava, capital of the puppet state of Slovakia, probably aimed at Brueno, second city of Czechoslovakia and machine-gun manufacturing centre. At captured Modra the Russians were about 70 miles southeast of Brueno.

May Sacrifice City

The Germans said Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian Army troops were battering at the gates of Bratislava and indicated the Germans were prepared to sacrifice the foreign city on the scale of Budapest.

Under Premier Nevachal Transcocan said "heavy street-fighting continues to rage" as additional Red Army troops poured into the great industrial city.

German propaganda broadcasts said the Russians had stepped up their assault on the Lake Balaton line in Silesia with heavy artillery fire and that "the whole west part of the town is now ablaze from the artillery."

The enemy radio also predicted an early assault on Berlin from the Russian Baltic Coast area, the Germans reporting that "lively activity had been observed" behind the main Red Army lines before the capital.

Is Fighting Zone

"Vienna now is in the fighting zone," said the Transocean broadcast.

Another Russian force was reported attacking in the Sarvar-Szombathely area in the Austrian Alps, 37 miles southwest of Weiner Neustadt, in a drive which outflanked the industrial city and Vienna. Berchtesgaden, Hitler's fortified retreat, is 135 miles west of the pass.

Penetration of the Semmering Pass put the Russians across the main Vienna-Graz railroad and only 140 miles from the Italian border. The Russians also are in a position to cut the Vienna-Klagenfurt railroad.

AIR OFFENSIVE DURING MARCH BREAKS RECORDS

Berlin and Magdeburg Hit With Heavy Loads Despite Unfavorable Weather

London, April 3 — (CP)—Despite unfavorable weather, R.A.F. bomber squiltos last night attacked Berlin and Magdeburg, it was announced today, renewing an Allied air offensive that broke all records during March.

The overnight raids ended Germany's two-day and five-night respite from bombing attacks. Oil installations feeding the battering German war machine were the principal target of the Mosquiton at Magdeburg, 80 miles southwest of Berlin.

R.A.F. night raiders also attacked enemy communications and airfields over a wide area in northwest Germany and Holland.

Seven Ships Damaged

A rocket-firing Mosquito last night by R.A.F. coastal command planes destroyed in the Norwegian port of Egersund a 5,000-ton merchant ships and exploded a large dry dock in the anchorage of Sande Fjord on the Norwegian coast, it was announced today.

The dry dock, 270 feet in diameter of direct rocket hits on a German tanker in the dry dock was followed by a great explosion that blew up both the ship and the dock.

The Canadian Spitfire squadron shot down one German JU-88 bomber, probably another and damaged three downed yesterday for a loss of three Allied planes, one pilot missing, bomber and two coastal command fighters.

U. S. 9th Air Force fighters shot down 17 enemy aircraft yesterday without loss in three encounters with an estimated 150 German fighters over the Gotha, Erfurt and Weimar areas.

Bad weather grounded Britain-based heavy bombers again yesterday. For the first time this year there did not fly a single mission.

Meanwhile, it was officially announced that Allied planes operating from Britain and bases in northern the western front plastered German supply dumps with more than 2 1/2 times the bomb weight the enemy has hurled on Britain by plane and V-bomb since the war began.

YANKEES AHEAD OF SCHEDULE CUT OKINAWA IN TWO

Swift Twc-D y Dash Tck s T:o:pst i E st Shortc flalv dAg i st Light Resist nce

Guam, April 3 — (AP) — Almost 10 days ahead of schedule, U. S. 24th Corps infantrymen were on the eastern shore of Okinawa just north of Nakagusuku Bay today. They bisected the island in a split two-day dash against slight resistance.

Observation planes, meanwhile, moved from two captured airfields, Kadena and Yontan. This indicated that before long land-based planes will join carrier aircraft supporting the invasion of the principal Ryukyu Island, 325 miles south of Japan itself.

The 24th Corps severed the thin waist of South-Central Okinawa by reaching the east coast village of Tobaru in a 1 1/2-mile drive yesterday, the second day of the campaign.

On Kasuyeu Bay

"The invaders were on the shores of Kasuyeu Bay, southern terminus of the extensive anchorage at Nakagusuku Bay — scene a favorite manoeuvring ground of the Japanese fleet.

So far this has been the easiest invasion of the entire Pacific war. Not a single Japanese warplane has been seen more civilians than Japanese soldiers. Not a single prisoner of war has been taken.

Severing of Okinawa cut off the city of Naha, population 60,000, and its large airfield from the many Japanese military installations in the north of the 66-mile-long island. But veteran observers of invasion was cut in two or withdrawn in one main force to the south or north remains to be seen.

Prime Minister May Run in Russell

Ottawa, April 3. (CP)—The Ottawa Citizen in a newspaper story today said it had learned from reliable sources that Prime Minister Mackenzie King may be induced to be a candidate in Carleton County, adjoining Ottawa, in the Dominion-wide election.

Noting that Alfred Goulet, present member for the Russell, will not seek re-election there because he is retiring, the Citizen said:

"If the common knowledge on Parliament Hill that, with the pressure of international affairs, King will be unable to campaign in his constituency of Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, and his political friends have decided that he will run for election in an Ottawa district riding so that he can be on the spot without interfering with his official duties as head of the Canadian government.

Nazi Propagandists Spur German Hate for Allies With Weird Stories

By THOMAS HAWKINS

Bern, Switzerland, April 3 — (AP) —Nazi propagandists are spreading to widespread use of obviously fictitious stories of Allied atrocities in a last effort to spur military and civilian resistance to the enemy in the vicinity of the Russian front and back again, during which more than 7,000 of them died.

The prisoners freed included more than 400 Britons and 70 Americans. Most of the British prisoners were captured in the fighting around Arnhem airborne expedition last September.

A senior American officer said that deaths on the forced march resulted from the ration allowance of one loaf of bread daily for eight men.

Grimmenthal is 50 miles southwest of Dresden and approximately 200 miles from the present Russian line to eastern Germany.

Canadian Frigate Annan Sends U-Boat to Bottom And Captures Prisoners

Ottawa, April 3 (CP)—The Canadian frigate Annan has sent a German U-Boat to the bottom with gunfire and depth charges in a spectacular running battle, naval headquarters announced today, and brought back prisoners today.

The running night battle was fought in the North Atlantic and a navy release said the victory cost seven Canadian wounded. Among the German survivors taken prisoner—including the German U-boat commander and two officers—were two wounded men.

The navy did not give the date of the sinking by the fighting Hull river class frigate. But it told how she detected the sub, brought her damaged to the surface with a depth charge pattern and then threw everything at her—even machine gun bullets—as she closed to short range to finish off the undersea raider.

Annan's Commander, Lt.-Cmdr. Charles Patrick Batley, St. John's, Que., and Lieut. David M. Hewitt, St. John's Nfld., Annan's gunnery officer who was wounded in the action, were awarded Service Crosses.

LEGASPI HARBOR CAPTURED ALMOST WITHOUT BATTLE

Amphibious Operation is Supported by Naval Units in Perfect Timing

Manila, April 3 —(AP)— Encirclement of Japanese in southern Luzon virtually was completed Sunday when troops of the U. S. 14th Army Corps and the 158th Regimental Combat Team, landed through a moderate but ineffective barrage of enemy artillery fire, landed at Legaspi harbor on the southeastern tip of Luzon, Allied headquarters reported today.

They captured the city of Legaspi (40,000) and its airfields almost without a struggle.

Destroyers and smaller units of the U. S. 7th Fleet dueled with Japanese artillery deep in the hills as the landing force went ashore.

Between heavy guns and aerial bombs, Japanese are being silenced by the time troops hit the beach.

The landing was nearly lightly opposed.

No Damage to Port.

Damage to the city, the best port on Luzon's east coast, was negligible.

Meanwhile, other units of the 14th Corps, driving the last of the Japanese in southern Luzon toward deep peninsula on which Legaspi is located, secured a break-through at Libmanan, south of Laguna de Bay.

The fast was the advance of 1st Cavalry troops of Lieutenant-General "Joe" Swing's division that left the defiants for the Japanese fell from a plane asking Americans who had reached the target area ahead of the aircraft.

American civilian troops on Cebu started a number of casualties March 30 when revolting Japanese tore up a hill. Nevertheless, the invasion of Cebu, a key industrial island of Bombon being Formosa, Negros, Annan, Panay and Mindanao, was proceeding on schedule.

MAJ.-GEN. M. ROSE, GIVING UP ARMS, KILLED BY GERMAN

U.S. General's Jeep Meets Nazi Tank, Rcse Climbs Out to Surrender, is Shot

By DON WHITEHEAD

With the U. S. 1st Army, April 3 —(AP)—Maj.-Gen. Maurice Rose, brilliant commander of the United States 3d Armored Division, was killed the 1st Army's great drive from the Rhine River gate into Germany, was hot to death near Paderborn March 30 by a German tankman as the general attempted to surrender his arms after being captured.

Companions said the general was shot through the head as he lifted his pistol holster from his shoulder to hand it over to the German conferring him and his aide with a machine-pistol from the turret of a tank which had knocked out American lines south of Paderborn.

Had Been in Forward Area.

Gen. Rose, who always forward with advance elements giving personal directions to his tank and task force commanders, had gone to the front to direct the 3rd Armored Division's fight to capture an important road junction.

He started back in a jeep with his aide, Maj. Robert Bellinger of White Plains, N.Y., trying to find another of his task force commanders, when he turned a curve and was head-on into Tiger tanks on the road which a short while before had been carrying the 1st Army traffic. An armored car was following with other members of his staff.

The general's driver wheeled the jeep across a field through woods, and the general and Bellinger started to climb out of the jeep to surrender.

As he stood with hands over his head the German holding a machine pistol in the tank turret unloosed a torrent of words.

"I don't understand," the general kept saying, according to Maj. Bellinger.

Then apparently the general thought his captor meant him to surrender his arms and he took his hands down to lift the holster from his shoulder. That was when the German fired.

Maj. Bellinger and other officers and men in the armored car made a dash for freedom and escaped, making their way to the 3rd Armored quarters hours later. The general's body was found where he fell.

Gen. Rose came up the hard way in the American Army. Army as a youth of 17 during the First Great War.

When the Allies invaded North Africa Gen. Rose was with the 1st Armored Division headquarters. Later he was transferred to the 3rd Armored Division.

Gen. Rose, who was 46, lived at Denver, Colo.

Paris, April 3 —(AP)— First Canadian Army troops drove today to within 36 miles of the Zuider Zee and British 2nd Army pushed to within 60 miles of the North Sea in a supreme effort to trap the German Army Group H, just as the U. S. 1st and 9th armies sealed the fate of 119,000 Germans in the Ruhr who were officially termed "ripe for annihilation."

Enemy defences in Holland and northern Germany were being cut to ribbons and escape routes for Field Marshal Kesselring's shattered armies were being severed one after another.

British troops and the U. S. 17th Airborne Division cleared two-thirds of Germany's Westphalia, the 9th Army was mopping up Hamm, eastern exit of the Ruhr and greatest rail centre in Europe. The traffic centre of Osnabruck was within view or British elements fire miles away. The large German citadel of Bremen and Hannover were menaced by Field Marshal Montgomery's columns 30 miles distant.

Several Ruhr Cities Fall.

The Ruhr industrial centre of Recklinghausen (pop. 97,000) fell to the 9th Army, which also seized Sudenwich, Berghagen and numerous unspecified Ruhr localities north of the line of Duisburg and Dortmund-Ems canal.

The United States 3rd Army in central Germany advanced almost 30 miles yesterday to within 160 miles of a junction with the Russians on the eastern front—a move that would bisect Germany.

The Germans said Lt.-Gen. Patton's army was storming Sibiu, 85 miles from Czechoslovakia, and had surrounded Meiningen 12 miles northeast of Weimar, birthplace of the shattered German republic. This would mark 3rd Army advance of nearly 30 miles since yesterday and place the Americans within 25 miles of the way across the waist of Germany.

Seventh Army tanks were said by the enemy to be in the Ochsenfurt area. Crerar's troops had cut Holland in two yesterday with capture of Arnhem across the IJssel River, Ross Munro, Canadian Press War Correspondent, reported today. They had crossed the IJssel at several points — some 30 gallies northeast of Arnhem, and were fighting east of Zutphen.

The U.S. 1st and 9th armies delayed almost 24 hours yesterday prior to reducing the Ruhr pocket, where 119,000 Germans of 4 armies were sealed for destruction or surrender by manoeuvres which cut the Ruhr from Germany and robbed Hitler of any chance of a prolonged "gotterdammerung."

The encirclements of the Ruhr by a wide pincer movement has cut off the whole of army group B and parts of army group H, thus forming a large pocket of enemy troops whose fate is sealed and who are ripe for annihilation," Gen. Eisenhower declared in a special order of the day.

A dispatch from 12th army group headquarters said the 1st and 9th armies still were advancing eastward.

"Germans trapped in the Ruhr pocket have not yet mounted a major effort to break out, but they are probing in several places in search of a soft spot," Tom Tarbrough, Associated Press war correspondent, reported. "Enemy resistance on the whole has stiffened and our advance has been held up at several points by local counter-attacks, all of which are been contained."

Reuters said Monday's counter-offensive a double trap for the Germans carrying in Holland, by sending columns probably toward both the Zuider Zee and the North Sea.

The 1st Canadian Army was spreading northward of the Lower Rhine and nearest the great Dutch water gap. By reaching the Zuider Zee, it would cut off German troops in such cities as Amsterdam, The Hague, Rotterdam, Utrecht, Haarlem and Arnhem to the south and west.

The Germans aware of their peril on the Zuider Zee, Rhine and and the North Sea, were attempting to pull out of parts of Holland and northwest Germany. Great concentration of barges on both sides of the Zuider Zee was reported by planes. Rail yards at Zwolle at the eastern edge of the Zuider Zee were jammed. Much mobile flak and artillery already has escorted westward.

All along the northern front, there was a coherent German defence line, despite some patches of tough resistance.

The security blackout on the 3rd Army front hid the fate of the German cities of Kassel (317,060) and Fulda (30,000), which entered yesterday. Kassel is only a shell, 5/6ths before the 3rd Army came. Kassel was a key rail centre, and its built up area, centred around airplane engine, tank and locomotive plants.

The 3rd Army was known to have shoved two armored columns far beyond Kassel. The northernmost vanguard was pressing southwest of Eisenach, 180 miles from Germany's industrial concentration of Gen. Eisenhower's nine armies.

Eisenach, the hilly group of the 7th Army to the south advanced 12 miles yesterday and captured Bebra, fiercely-contested Autofahrbeug junction. Bebra, 20 miles, six miles from Heilbronn, fell to the 10th Armored Division.

Bebra fell on most of the front and low clouds restricted aerial operations, particularly in the north.

Russian Spearheads Ten Miles South of Vienna

3rd Ukrainian Army Fighting in Streets of Weiner Neustadt

Germans Claim New Drive Started Near Bratislava Gap

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

London, April 3 — (AP) — The German high command today said Russian spearheads have reached the Baden area, which is about midway between Vienna and Wiener Neustadt, to claim that the Germans had "succeeded in halting the onrushing" Red Army troops in the area immediately south of the Austrian capital.

The German propaganda agency also reported Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky had started a new drive northward from his positions near Bratislava, capital of the puppet state of Slovakia, probably aimed at Brueen, second city of Czechoslovakia and another important rail junction city. It captured Modra, the Russians were about 70 miles southeast of Brueen.

May Sacrifice City

The Germans said Malinovsky's 3rd Ukrainian Army troops were battering at the gates of Bratislava and indicated the Germans were prepared to sacrifice the foreign city on the scale of Budapest.

Inside Wiener Neustadt Transocean said, "bitter street fighting continues to rage" as additional Red Army forces join the battle in the industrial city.

German propaganda broadcasts said the Russians had stepped up their assault on embattled Breslau in Silesia with heavy artillery fire and that "the whole west part of the town is now aflame with the fire."

The enemy radio also predicted an early assault on Berlin from the Russians' Middle Oder springboard, reporting that "lively activity had been observed" behind the main Red Army lines "to the capital."

In Fighting Zone

"Vienna now is in the fighting zone," said the Transocean broadcast.

Another Russian force was reported attacking the Semmering Pass in the Austrian Alps, 37 miles south-west of Wiener Neustadt, in a drive which could cut the Austrial city and Vienna. Berchtesgaden, Hitler's fortified retreat, is 125 miles west of the pass.

Penetration of the Semmering Pass put the Russians across the main Vienna-Graz railroad and only 140 miles from the Italian border. The Russians also are in a position to cut the Vienna-Klagenfurt railroad.

AIR OFFENSIVE DURING MARCH BREAKS RECORDS

Berlin and Magdeburg Hit With Heavy Loads Despite Unfavorable Weather

London, April 3 — (CP)—Despite unfavorable weather, R.A.F. Mosquitos last night attacked Berlin and Magdeburg. It was announced today, ending a 1-3-order five yesterday, the second day of the campaign.

Big Returns Say

The invaders were on the storm of Kalkum in Dusseldorf, the center of the extensive anchorage at Makgaunkn Bay for once a favorite Nazi playground in the Baltic sea resort.

So far this has been the easiest invasion of the entire Pacific war. The Americans apparently have seen more civilians than Japanese soldiers. Not a single prisoner of war has been taken.

Severing of Okinawa cut off the city of Naha, population 60,000, and its large airfield from the many Japanese troops defending the south of the 60-mile-long island. But whether the enemy garrison will make a last-ditch stand in ote main force to the south or north remains to be seen.

Damage to the ship, the best port on Luzon's east coast, was negligible.

Meanwhile, other units of the 14th Corps, driving the last of the Japanese in southern Luzon toward Bicol peninsula, on which Legaspi is located, moved to within 15 miles of Albay, south of Laguna de Bay.

So fast was the advance of 1st Corps troops that Japanese leaflets for the Japanese fell from plane among Americans who had reached the target area, ahead of the aircraft.

American division troops on Cebu suffered a number of casualties March 30 when retreating Japanese threw up a hill. Nevertheless, the invaders won their objective—an airfield.

YANKEES AHEAD OF SCHEDULE CUT OKINAWA IN TWO

Swift Two-Day Dash Takes Port; Enemy Split Shortens Flank; Big Fleet Action Light Resistance

Guam, April 3 — (AP) — Almost 10 days ahead of schedule, U. S. 24th Corps infantrymen were on the eastern shore of Okinawa just north of Nakagusuku Bay today. They bisected the island's 1-3-mile waist in swift two-day dash against slight resistance.

Observation planes, meanwhile, operated from two captured airfields, Kadena and Yontan. This indicated that before long land-based planes will join carrier aircraft supporting the invasion of the principal Ryukyu Island, 326 miles south of Japan proper.

The 24th Corps severed the thin waist of South Okinawa by reaching the east coast village of Gushikawa, a 1-3-mile drive yesterday, the second day of the campaign.

Maj. H. Theobald Leads Squadron Of Garrys to Brigade's Support

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Army in Germany, April 3 — (CP) — The northern Rhineland offensive saw the Canadian Army on the move again in action along the Calcar-Goch road south of the Hochwald Forest.

Through all these actions the regiment had extremely light casualties. Only four men in the unit were killed yesterday. Garrys are tremendous support to infantry battalions of the 2nd Canadian Division.

The regiment's first action in the offensive was Feb. 19 when a squadron led by Maj. Harvey Theobald of Brantford, Ont., supported the 4th division's all-Canadian brigade of the division along the Calcar-Goch road. The Garrys' tanks were on the road but were roumier-attacked heavily. The Essex Scottish from Windsor, Ont., were particularly hard hit, with their company positions fired on by enemy machine-guns and armor. The Garrys put in another attack at 4 p.m. and the regiment from Toronto and restored the situation, guns on both sides firing for nearly a day.

In one squadron of the Garrys were Lieutenants Donald Cameron and Sel Livingston, Midland, Ont., and Ted Cryderman, Timmins, Ont.

Lt.-Col. A. D. Elmes, Bradford, Ont., was an N.C.O. tank commander who stayed in the thick of it even after ammunition was gone. He remained on the front for almost a month and then came out carrying wounded in his tank, which regimental headquarters by this time had been written off as lost.

1,000 Allied Prisoners Die on Long March

With the U. S. 3rd Army, April 3 —(AP)— A group of British and American prisoners, liberated when the United States 11th Armored Division overran a hospital at Grimmenthal, told today how they were forced march across Germany to the vicinity of Nazi Leader Hitler's and back again, during which more than 1,000 of their comrades died.

The prisoners freed included more than 600 Britons and 70 Americans. Most of the British prisoners were captured in the illfated Arnhem airborne expedition last September.

A senior American officer said that deaths on the forced march resulted from the ration allowance of one loaf of bread daily for eight men.

Grimmenthal is 50 miles southwest of Weimar and approximately 80 miles from Hitler's mountain lions in eastern Germany.

By THOMAS HAWKINS

Bern, Switzerland, April 3 — (AP) — Nazi propagandists are resorting to widespread use of obviously fictitious stories of allied atrocities in a last effort to spur enemy and civilian resistance in the waning hours of the so-called Third Reich.

The readers of German newspapers find the hate campaign splurged across the front pages. The real war news, now so dismal for the Nazis, is buried on the inside pages except for an occasional guarded and optimistic article in the lower left hand corner of page 1.

A story with a Stuttgart dateline declared Negro soldiers were forcing women in Cologne to clean latrines, asserted American soldiers beat up a German woman who refused to pose for a picture and left her to die, and recounted that an American soldier took aided and was well coffee to a German woman who had gave him a wrist watch in payment for milk for her baby.

Not since the war started has such wholesale material appeared even in the official Nazi organs. To certify well-informed Allied observers here it appears to be a deliberate effort to keep some outward resistance going until the Nazis can form an underground organization with possibly Berchtesgaden as a headquarters.

Meanwhile, the "last ditch wolves" and other guerilla bands which the Germans say are operating behind Allied lines were seen as part of this projected operation.

The Lausanne Gazette commented that German resistance after the armed forces are broken is impossible because the population "despair abandons every hope of the point where it will be capable of an act of high energy; its will to resistance will tumble with the disorder of the armies."

The National Zeitung in Basel saw in the "werewolves" a sign that a hopeless "end of the period" mentality had set in at Hitler's headquarters.

The Allied reaction to the werewolves is very simple," said a Lausanne radio broadcaster. "Instructors will be captured, tried, judged and shot."

German Defences In Holland Being Cut to Ribbons

Muenster and Hamm Almost Cleared of Enemy

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 3 — (AP) — First American armored drives today were to within 26 miles of the Zuider Zee and British 2nd Army men were within 60 miles of the North Sea in a supreme effort to trap the German Army garrison in N. Ijssel Ijsselborn March 30 by a German tank-man, the general started to surrender his arms after being captured.

Companions said the general was shot through the head as he lifted to ribbons and secure route for Field Marshal Johannes Blaskowitz's forces were trapped in the area after another.

British troops and the U. S. 17th Airborne Division cleared two-thirds of Wesel, important capital of Westphalia. The 9th Army was mopping up Hamm, eastern exit of the Ruhr and greatest city in the Europe. The traffic centre of Osnabrueck was within view of British elements five miles away. The large Ruhr industrial capital of Essen and Hannover were menaced by Field Marshal Montgomery's columns 60 miles distant.

Several Ruhr Cities Fall

The Ruhr industrial centre of Deckinghausen (pop. 57,000) fell to the 9th Army, which also seized Sudwirch, Berghagen and numerous unspecified Ruhr localities on the east bank of the Rhine.

Hitler's order that Wesel be held at all costs, according to Maj. Bellinger.

Then apparently the general thought his captor meant him to surrender his arms, for he took his hands down to lift the holster from his shoulder. That was when the German fired.

Maj. Bellinger and other officers and men in the column at once made a dash for freedom and escaped, making their way to Allied infantry quarters hours later. The general's body was found where he was shot.

Gen. Rose was killed on the day—having enlisted in the Army as a private in the early days of the First War.

When the Allies invaded North Africa Gen. Rose was with the United States 1st Armored Division. Later he commanded the 3rd Armored Division.

Lt.-Gen. Hodges of the 1st. Lo breakthrough, Gen. Rose was put in command of the 3rd. His armor was the spearhead of the powerful drive across France. It was the first Allied unit to reach the German country, first through the Siegfried defences and helped stem Field Marshal Von Rundstedt's Ardennes offensive. It was first into Cologne.

Lt.-Gen. Hodges of the 1st. Lo breakthrough, Gen. Rose was put in command of the 3rd. His armor was to lead the break-through from the Rhine.

Gen. Rose, who was 46, lived at Denver, Colo.

Unfortunately yielding soon nets from the river banks two youthful fishermen netted three dozen $12, while another fisherman claims he earned $48 over the week-end, selling his catch on the demand at 13 cents per pound.

Kinsmen Hear Descriptive Story Of Jamaica Island

Members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club were taken on a descriptive trip to Jamaica, the island of their regular fortnightly dinner meeting Monday evening when they were addressed by Rev. Major J. Dyke, padre of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, which regiment early in the war was stationed on the tropical island.

Major Dyke, padre for Military District No. 3 and stationed at Kingston, has had many years of colorful historical account of Jamaica, told of his regiment's activities there and also spoke of its political and industrial background. He was introduced by Kin Fred Fridwell with club appreciation being expressed by Kin Caroline Duff.

Stated by the speaker to be the largest of the West Indies group of islands, it is only 144 miles long by 40 miles in width. It is densely populated, with over 1,000,000 inhabitants, whose livelihood is dependent largely on the sugar industries. These are sugar cane, cocoanuts, citrus growing and bananas. Each of these industries is practically subsidized by the government. There are also large deposits of bauxite to get the produce on world markets.

Only Three Centres.

Colorful relics of Spanish occupancy are still existent on Jamaica and there are many historical sites for tourists, while the terrain of the island further enhances this aspect. There are only three cities on the island, the first being Kingston, a modern city of 100,000 souls, whose latter could hold the entire British fleet in its harbour. Other centres are Spanish Town and Port Royal, the latter a ghost town which was destroyed by earthquake and which pirates brought their ill-gotten gains for safekeeping.

A strange oddity of the island's climate is that while it receives approximately 97 per cent black, almost perfect Oxford English is spoken by the natives. Major Dyke concluded his address by stating that slavery was abolished in 1833, the forty years largely took the names of their masters.

Important Coaling Station.

With Jamaica being an important coaling station for the British Navy, early in the war the Island was threatened by the Nazis, particularly as the Empire's second line of defence should Britain have been taken before the German onslaught. British garrison stationed there were augmented by 2,000 troops, and among other regiments, the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders of Canada (Princess Louise) were chosen to guard the island.

It was during the height of the submarine activity in the waters of the Atlantic coast when the regiment made the non-stop trip convoying 30 ships. Two of the convoy ships were then being sunk by the Nazi U-boats, which were then active in the West Indies islands for refuelling purposes. The regiment lost everything in the sinking of the ships were a common occurrence.

Splendid Training.

The regiment received splendid training at Jamaica despite a mean climate, according to the speaker, for most two years on the island they were in the mountains for four weeks at a time by themselves at Palaise and other "hot spots" on the Western Front.

Prior to the introduction of the guest speaker by Kin Fridwell, and at the meeting with two local instrumentalists, Kin Ferris and Kin Stebbings, recent award winners at Toronto, delighting the members while Pianist Phil Huddleston rendered the ever-popular "Kitten on the Keys" and Harry Rollins presided at the meeting.

4th Canadian Armored Division Now Operating

By ROSS MUNRO
(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Army in Northern Holland, April 1 (CP) — The 4th Canadian Armored Division, spearhead of persistent pursuit of the Rhine, it can be disclosed today.

The 2nd Infantry Division and the 4th Armoured Brigade already had been identified in the general region, while the 3rd Infantry Division also is in three charges and was subsequently remanded in custody four days later. Tuesday Lennox admitted to stealing the ignition keys and the car belonging to George A. Dafoe, 56 West Moira Street, and also to failing to observe regulations of a two-year suspended sentence imposed upon him by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here adian Infantry was closing up to the Neder Rhine without meeting any enemy elements.

Strong Defences.

British troops took the towns of Arnhem, Nijmegen, Venlo and Tilburg and were attacking Zand.

Opposition was patchy along this Dutch front and the Canadians were maintaining their full momentum of their headlong advance. Even the Twente Canal was not likely to present any significant check for it was not believed to be defended along its entire length.

On "Arnhem Island" between Nijmegen and Arnhem, the battle of Arnhem, the Rhine, was entered Saturday by the Royal Canadian Regiment, from Estevan, and the Royal Highlanders of Canada (Black Watch) of Montreal (both 2nd. Division formations as of February). The 6.S.H. also has Etten, two miles west of Terborg.

First Rhine Town.

Before that attack, Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal, 2nd. Canadian Infantry Brigade, 2nd. Division unit as of February) captured Gendringen, four miles south of Zevenaar, first Rhine town. Sergeant Major Hollands of the 6th Armoured Regiment (1st. Hussars) of Toronto, was killed on April 1 when his tank struck a mine.

Whatever memories March 1946 may hold for the average individual it was a month which for many years before temperature records for the city were kept, will be known by the thermometer soaring to heights unprecedented for the month in the season, residents all but forgot they were living in the season wherein snowfall might very well be expected.

High point in temperature recorded for the Bay of Quinte district as noted in the report of the Dominion Station Plant was 72.3 degrees, according to the official report issued by the city, while the low for the month was 19 degrees making a mean temperature of 45.8 degrees above zero.

It was an entirely different story in March, 1945, for example. The high temperature for the corresponding month a year ago was only 57 degrees while the mercury dipped to as low as 6 degrees for a mean temperature of 25.5 degrees.

During the last month there was an even three inches of rain with a total for the year of 5.87 inches, while precipitation was 3.16 inches. Last year's precipitation for March totalled a .57 inch of rain but this was balanced by a snowfall of 28.5 inches making a total precipitation of 2.78 inches.

Possibly the greatest indication of the wide difference in temperatures between March of 1945 and 1946 was the fact that the average this year never fell below 19 degrees, while a year ago there were four days of zero weather.

Graduating with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in June, 1939, he joined the Canadian Active army as a private, and trained in Canada during July and August, 1940, when he was transferred overseas during the latter month. He was in the first contingent of his life was his promotion to the rank of Lance Corporal on arrival in England.

While in Britain he was attached to the Canadian Light Infantry and was selected to attend a course at the Sandhurst Officers' Training Centre, from which he graduated last. His standing was such that he was awarded his "pips" upon graduation.

The twenty-four-year-old officer is a brother of Miss Mary Butler, J.P. and Mr. E. Ormonde Butler, barrister, of this city.

V-2 Communication Route Threatened By Canadian Drive

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 2nd Canadian Army in Northern Holland, April 3 — (CP Cable)—Within 48 hours — at the longest — the spearhead of the Canadian Army will have cut practically all German communications between The Hague and Rotterdam from which southern England has been bombarded.

Once the main east-west highway crossing the Hague at Rijswijk-Delft is reached — and advance Canadian elements are but seven miles from it last — the principal V-2 communication route will be sliced.

The Germans could use the long, winding road skirting the Sulfer Sea — the only other route — to be called by the Netherlanders — but it is more likely that priority over it will be given to the flow in the further withdrawal of enemy troops west of Arnhem. Any substantial storm right across Holland somewhere east of the Hague.

The Germans possibly have stored V-2 rockets west of Arnhem. It is under that city that the Canadians encountered their most determined opposition.

It was with sincere regret I heard of the sudden death of Col. Ormond Butler, which occurred in Belleville yesterday. Having been associated with him in military life for the past twenty-five years I was shocked at the news. He had been a friend of a shock to me. I feel this court should extend to the widow our deepest sympathy" stated Crown Attorney B.C. Donnan at the opening of court today.

"It was most regretable Col. Ormond will be sadly missed by a large circle of friends," added His Worship.

Buenos Aires, April 3—(AP)— Austrian Fritz Mandl, former munitions magnate, was reported under arrest today only a few hours after the Argentine government announced it was seizing his big metal and plastics manufacturing company which had been on the Allied blacklist for six months.

The seizure by Mandl's reported detention were not immediately confirmed but has created fear in utilization of his factory called Pampa Industrial, a development which the government is authorized to take control of under a law designed to put persons whose activities are deemed a menace to the security of the state or the war effort of the United Nations.

The official reason given for seizure of the concern—the industrial Metalurgica Plastica Argentina, better known as IMPA—was that the factory was unable to operate because of the shortage of raw materials and its closing would entail serious economic repercussions, such as the number of its employees.

AS FIRST ALLIED AIRBORNE ARMY LANDED TROOPS EAST OF THE RHINE

Paratroopers extricate themselves from static lines in one of the many hazards encountered by the First Allied airborne army at the start of the big offensive.

Oblivious to the sound and the fury about him, a medical corpsman who joined with his buddies of the First Allied Airborne Army during the "big heave," renders first aid to a paratrooper who was wounded as he landed.

Punch and Judy Show Delights Rotarian Guests

Rotarians turned back the pages of time at their weekly luncheon at the Hotel Quinte on Monday and with their children and grandchildren laughed uproariously at the antics of a modern Punch and Judy Show, and its witty repartee of talking dolls.

For it was the occasion of the annual children's day and a large number of the kiddies enjoyed a tasty luncheon, the show and favors, which was distributed by a number of the clubmen.

On a specially erected stage in a corner of the main dining room of the Hotel Quinte, Mr. Robert Clarke, of the T. Eaton Company, Toronto, an amateur ventriloquist of splendid ability had his audience both young and old in paroxisms of laughter with his clever manipulations and witty comedy of his dolls.

The adventure of poor Punch at the hands of the wicked police and other childhood characters provided an hour of amusement, while a smart Irish doll aided by a "wolfish boy" and a girl friend brought out the "Bergen and McCarthy" accomplishments of Mr. Clarke to the fullest.

The small guests were officially welcomed by President "Pink" Hendrick, and the program later turned over to Chairman Joe Shortt of the special service committee. In his remarks Rotarian Shortt bid welcome the club president paid a sincere tribute to the late Notarian Lt.-Col. A. B. Cribbie who died in Kingston early Monday morning.

The children joined the clubmen in various song numbers led by Notarian Sandy Burrows with Mrs. John Deacon graciously assisting at the piano. Later John Deacon sang "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling".

During the show, candies, chewing gum and other gifts were presented to the children guests by Notarians Archie Cameron, Dave Martin, Stan Hagerman and Art Young. Notarians Bill Turner and Harry Ackerman were on the reception committee.

German Terrorist Organization Threatens All Who Collaborate

London, April 3 (CP)—The Nazis officially claimed that the assassins of the mayors of occupied Aachen and Metchede were members of the "Werewolf" underground terrorist organization, which Berlin said is organized to resist Allied occupation forces. A radio describing itself as an underground werewolf station took the air with claims that werewolves had murdered some American Army officers, including three of high rank, and had been active in Frankfurt and Heidelberg.

A D.N.B. broadcast quoting official Berlin said: "The first appearance of the werewolf was made to guard national honor by executing death sentences on the buergermeisters."

The German radio said last week Aachen's mayor was sentenced to death by a "German honor meiters of Aachen and Mechede."

DNB's report said the werewolf developed spontaneously when "courageous men and National Socialists could not bear to look any longer while murder hordes of the Western powers terrorized the civil population and Allied bombers hit residential areas."

Eye for an Eye.

"Werewolves will not give in to enemy terror, but prefer to settle accounts eye for eye," the report said.

The Moscow radio commented: "The wolf hunt is on—good hunting."

Berlin officially disclaimed connection with the organization, saying "official and party circles in Berlin had nothing to do with its organization," and that it "possesses its own authority."

But Nazi propaganda made it plain that the group was the chosen medium for the Reinrich Himmler-enunciated "knife - in - the - dark" scheme to fight occupation forces and murder officials who join Allied-controlled administrations.

British observers saw a Nazi trick in the claim that the organization was not directed by State and party authorities.

Plainly, the claim was believed designed to protect the party and SS officials in occupied areas against precautionary or reprisal measures.

Secondly, it would leave "werewolves" free to continue their campaign of murder in the event of official German capitulation.

Propagandist Dr. Otto Kreigk on the German radio exhorted Germans to resist through the military as long as possible "to aggravate and capitalize on the Allies' political difficulties."

Parcels for Prisoners Of War in Germany

The prisoner-of-war liaison officer of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross has received the following communication and wishes to direct the attention of next-of-kin of prisoners from this district.

"Our Red Cross Enquiry Bureau in Ottawa has cabled to the International Red Cross Committee in Geneva regarding the present situation of individually addressed parcels from Canada to prisoners-of-war. For reply they have received the following:

"We confirm that owing to transport difficulties and lack of rolling stock, transmission from Switzerland of all individually addressed parcels carried by postal services from Canada or anywhere to any prison camp in Germany is impossible at present."

"The above of course, means that as from this date, next of kin parcels, said parcels sent to prisoners or other than next-of-kin can no longer be sent."

The War Today—

Hitler Continues to Sacrifice His Nation Despite Hopelessness of Cause

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(AP War Analyst)

Faced with the certainty that time and the Allied tide won't wait even for the Fuehrer of the superrace, Hitler will have to move fast if he is to carry out his desperate scheme of holing-up in the Bavarian Alps with picked Nazi troops for a final stand against the invaders.

The way things are going the Nazi dictator and his fanatical minions will be hastily booted before long in their death cell in the mountains. The Allied armies are rapidly cutting up northern Germany into jigsaw sections within which Hitler's men and resources are being trapped for annihilation.

The great Ruhr, keystone of enemy war industries, is surrounded and there are perhaps 100,000 German troops in the trap. A Canadian drive northward into Holland threatens to enmesh another enemy army. Still other of the enemy's fighting men are being cut off from the south by the several Allied thrusts eastward, especially the whirlwind drive of the U. S. 7th Army which is slashing Germany in two at the waist and is headed for a junction with the Russians.

While Zjiller is being separated from his armies and supplies in the north, two Red armies are rushing against Vienna — from Hungary and Czechoslovakia — thus threatening his Alpine stronghold from the east. Meantime the U. S. 7th Army, a flying column of the 3rd Army and the 1st French Army are heading towards Munich and Vienna from the Rhineland.

One would think Der Fushrer would get fresh impulse to crawl into his Alpine hide-out from the announcement by the United Nations War Crimes Commission in London that he heads the list of war criminals. If he's smart he will keep under cover as long as he can and then shoot himself — not an unlikely end to the drama, one would think.

Signs multiply that the head Hun and his captains have no present intention of surrendering. Every day we see fresh moves calculated to drive the German fighting forces and civilian population to battle to a finish among the ruins of their once handsome and prosperous cities and towns. Hitler is sacrificing his country and his people to serve his own ends. The result will be directed — perhaps even now is being directed — from the Alpine fortress.

The latest scheme is the launching of an intense propaganda campaign of fear, through allied troops with horrible atrocities against both German troops and civilians. Hitler's newspaper, Volkischer Beobachter, is leading this drive and is hammering not only at the atrocity falsehoods but is holding out hope in alleged differences among the Allies.

Retribution Falls on Germany

Typical retribution is falling upon Germany. She is not only defeated in those evidences of power in which she trusted, her army and her air force, but also is through the continuance of her anti-social and warlike mentality allowing much of her wealth to become rubble and dust. Germany is like the typical gangster defiant and ready to be destroyed rather than to yield to right.

At this time the Allied movements of fourteen armies have a deep-seated grip upon Germany so long as she exists. Analysts they will be effective in tearing this aggressor power asunder and wearing down the enemy armies to the state of inability to resist.

The forces that Germany had so long been developing and which she gloatingly flung against the world in 1939 are being broken and cut up. It is believed there is now little central authority in the land for the invasions by the United Nations' armies have penetrated deeply and disrupted communications, while the Allied air forces continue to pound away by day and night the war industries and in breaking down communications.

Onward from many quarters sweep the Allied divisions with one goal, to prove deep into the heart of Nazi militaristic Germany. The deadly tightening hold they have obtained upon the enemy gives the confidence and hope that the proud, stiff-necked, cruel despotism, tyranny and aggression of Hitlerite Germany will soon come to the conditions in which she will no longer be able to resist.

Day after day the Allied operations continue, those on a section of the west front being kept from public knowledge for the sake of security but the movements that are being carried out. Meanwhile there are rumors afloat saying that Hitler and his gang leaders have made for Berchtesgaden, the scene about Hitler's mountain self in the Alps with the hope that there he can then hold out and wage a guerilla war in the fanatical hope of reviving beaten Nazism. Allied armies are uniting through Germany from east and west which will interfere greatly with every German plan.

At this time the world is witnessing one of the great events of history, the power of free nations destroying the enemy of freedom. No such strength of armor, of guns, of infantry, of airmen, as well as of the spirit of unition has ever before been thrown into the conflict to beat down to earth the pride and arrogance of a tyranny and to destroy his power to do evil. There is being decided not only a great military victory, the greatest in history of the Allied cause, but also what is involved in a struggle waged on the principles of democracy and justice, a great moral issue. The world of free men and nations who wish to live their lives without molestation from those who would interfere with the growth of democracy and justice, and would enslave mankind, is achieving victory for a great and just cause and principle. The acts of Hitler and his kind all reveal at every turn the course of the outlaw. Inevitably the Allied ideals of freedom and liberty demands progress are being strengthened and developed on the grandest scale ever witnessed in history.

D-Day II

The preparations for and the scale of Field Marshal Montgomery's Rhine crossing are comparable to no other operation but D-Day, June 6, 1944.

One remarkable aspect of the Twenty-First Army Group's success is that it was accomplished in a sector where strategic surprise was impossible. The Germans knew it was coming and were ready for it. The assault was made on the most heavily defended part of the Rhine Front, where the Germans have concentrated their main strength. Once the elite troops, for they never know that, once seriously breached, the Westphalian Plain would be an open road leading straight to Berlin over very good tank country.

Such surprise as there was was tactical. This was achieved by the airborne forces. Apparently the Germans expected the pattern of Arnhem to be repeated, with the airbornes dropping first, followed by the infantry assault driving to join up with them. The reverse order was adopted, with the infantry crossing at night and the airborne dropping twelve hours later, in a glider and parachute operation that dwarfs anything that has gone before, including D-Day and Arnhem. The complete and rapid join-up of infantry and airborne is the best testimony that this was not what the enemy expected.

Another remarkable aspect is the speed with which the British Second Army was re-formed for this great assault, so soon after winning the west bank of the Rhine. It will be remembered that only a short time ago many of its divisions had been transferred to the Canadian First Army for the Maas-Rhine battle.

Special training of the naval, commando and airborne forces has been going on for some time, and vast quantities of supplies and ammunition were being assembled on the west bank while the re-grouping was proceeding.

The reports that Field Marshal Montgomery's tanks have broken through indicate that an incredibly fast build-up on the bridgehead has been achieved in the midst of a fierce infantry battle.

The build-up began immediately, and a good deal more men and supplies crossed the Rhine on the first day than the original plan provided for. The British aircraft and gliders delivered 3,090,000 pounds to the bridgehead, and the Americans 2,724,000 pounds—a total of 5,814,000 pounds. Satisfactory as optimistic as pinpointed, but the really exciting and critical events are now coming.

The British have now swept forward more than 100 miles out from the bridgehead on the Rhine.

Prisons and Reformatories

The criminal history of prisoners committed to Ontario Reformatories and Industrial Farms in the year ending March 31st., 1944, shows that 954 had been convicted for the first time, 584 for the second average of 2.5 for the third time, 1,626 for more than the third time and 43 had no available record. As to education the record was 83 illiterate, 2,634 with elementary education, 839 with high school training and 26 with first year college training. Of education, 689 were listed as abstainers, 1,271 as temperate and 1,622 as intemperate in the use of intoxicants. As for the use of drugs 1,535 were abstainers, and 47 addicts 1,131 were married, 2,317 single, 107 widowed and 27 divorced.

Boys and youths in the age class 14-19 years numbered 983 and those in other age groups followed: 20-24 years, 780; 25-29 years, 396; 30-34 years, 296. Then the numbers run progressively downward for five-year periods. In the 65-69 bracket there were 31 prisoners admitted and for 70 years over 31.

At the Ontario Reformatory intelligence tests of prisoners showed 10.53% mentally defective, 12.11% borderline intelligence, 35.85% dull, normal intelligence, 39.33% normal intelligence and 2.28% superior intelligence.

Tests given 737 who were above borderline cases showed that 1.48% had educational score equal to their own claim, 1.22% had educational score superior to their own claim, and 94.30% had educational score below their own claim.

No Exits to This Trap

(The New Yorker)

The Germans, after a lot of preliminary experimentation, have at last succeeded in getting themselves into the largest military trap in all their glorious history. Ilies between the Rhine and the Oder, and there are no exits.

Carrier Pilots Are Colorful Group

(By BERNIE FEILE)

In the Western Pacific. (Delayed) —On our airplane carrier, we are all wondering what day Mr. Spedid had her baby. Here is the story we wonder.

Her husband is Lieut. John Spedid, who pilots a torpedo plane from our carrier. He is only 22, and naturally was excited by the prospect of becoming a father. His wife lives at 416 East Montana Street, Pasadena, Calif.

Now Lieutenant Spedid isn't so young that he doesn't remember the date of arrival which the doctor gave several months before the baby put at least it's something to shoot at.

And so it came about that that date and Lieut. Spedid's secret mess on his first mission over Tokyo coincided. He thought what a wonderful double event.

But at the last moment the mission was cancelled, and the carrier task force counted its planes and headed south. The double went disappointed.

Next day we were within flying distance of Japan, somewhere ahead to the south, and we suddenly got orders for a special reconnaissance on them. Lieutenant Spedid went. And he came back safe and sound. He was lucky to get back at all. He had a hole in his wing a couple inches big right at the end and his airspeed indicator was shot out. It seemed impossible that he could get at all.

He made two trys at it. Both looked disastrous, and he was waved off. But on his third attempt he made enough. So they sent him over to one of the big carriers with only a deck room, for his plane was all right over there. It was quite a day.

Now some of us older heads realize that a baby may be born the day before the doctor predicts, or the day after. So we wonder if Lieutenant Spedid might just possibly have had his two big days in one after all?

Editor's note—Mrs. Spedid reports the baby came early. He was a boy, and the first father to see him was the Jap Islands. The baby's name is John Jr., and he's a big fine, So is Daddy, they say.

The boy with the fly with Lieutenant Spedid are Al Earby, radio man from Woodbury, N.J., and Gunner William Cropper, of Avoca, Iowa. Everybody interested in what happened too.

Remember the boys we wrote about yesterday — Ensign Robert Anderson who was shot down into Tokyo Bay, and Lieut. John Pocke, who went down to rescue him.

Well, it wasn't the first time those two had been seeking those together.

Last fall off Formosa a flight of Jap planes approached the fleet. Our gunners shot many crippled. Others got away. A flight of eight, of which Anderson was one, chased eight, took on the 70 Japs. They shot down 26 of them, lost only one plane, broke up the attack and saved the fleet.

Pocke and Anderson each got credit for a plane in that one force. And each got the Navy Cross for job. Ensign Bill Tyree Day incidentally didn't rattle them.

When I first saw Lieutenant Pocke I said to myself, "There's a Westerner." He said has that weather-beaten, cowboy look.

And then he fooled me by turning out to be a New Englander, Massachusetts-born, and a Navy Academy graduate, planning on a business course at that. He's 24 now.

But he has the Westerner's knack for understanding. He is very quiet and modest. He answers you to the things he never gets excited. He has shot down seven planes.

The others describe him as the man they would like to have along if you ever got into trouble. To which Ensign Buchanan would undoubtedly say 'Amen!'

The night after our strike on the southern islands, everybody was relaxed and felt that wonderful sense of relief over a dangerous job being finished.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Appeals to Dog Owners To Control Their Pets

179 Dufferin Avenue,
April 2.

Editor,
The Ontario Intelligencer,

Will you give space and a free appeal to dog owners in this city? I have no doubt that there are many dogs people, and certainly many parents, in the whole of the City of Belleville.

Our street is Dufferin Avenue, but probably residents of Charles Street would be in the same boat as we. We have the same trouble here. Within a half dozen doors from where I live, there are a number of Collie and other dogs that race and leap through the neighborhood in a pack without any control, the majority of the packs at the least of their depredations. To my certain knowledge the following incidents have taken place within the past two weeks:

1. The front garden door has been leaped at and badly frightened when she was standing in the open doorway.

2. I was almost knocked from my feet on my back porch. Our cat was the object in this instance, and it might be added, the cause of my small children as I who stood there.

3. Our half-grown persian kitten was torn to pieces by two Collie dogs.

4. Our neighbor's dog that is one off the leash was badly torn while trying to protect his master's property.

5. Their two-year-old daughter has been knocked over and badly frightened while she was on the street in front of her home. Fear is born her on our own lawn.

I know that Dufferin Avenue has the same problem as many other streets in the city. Surely we have a comparatively minor strain or incentive to keep dogs under control, or it may be due to local infection of the disease. Anyway it is always susceptible of great pollution

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

WHAT TO DO FOR CHRONIC RHEUMATISM

There is no use if all this seems mysterious. If I could squeeze a study and research memory for each of you into the life called rheumatism I'd do so without concern about the size of medical attire. But, as so many of you cannot do that, and are not even willing to understand, no one knows what "chronic rheumatism" means. Not even the medical profession. Certainly not the patient. Nor the druggist or Wheezers who pretends to know and gives a dissertation on the cause of misery or cure for it to sufering himself or to the sufferer.

FOOLING THE PEOPLE

The authorship of the oft-quoted saying, "You can fool some of the people all of the time, and all of the people some of the time, but you cannot fool all of the people all of the time," has long been the subject of debate.

Popularly it is attributed erring to P. T. Barnum, famous showman of the days of circuses and side shows. Others credit Abraham Lincoln.

There is sufficient evidence to determine definitely rebellion Lincoln was the author of those straightest the famous saying.

John G. Nicolay, secretary to Lincoln, and his biographer, Albert-ward H. Rosford, appointed Lieutenant Colonel by Lincoln, and General Stward R. Stagg, all credit the quotation to Lincoln, and Mr. F. Kellogg and Richard Price Hobson, in front of Shakespeare's plays, credit the quotation in a speech at Bloomington, Ill., on May 29, 1856. Other authorities credit the quotation to Lincoln's address at Clinton, Illinois, September 8, 1858, in a speech at Freeport, Ill., on August 27, 1858, with Douglas, and others attribute the quotation to Lincoln's address at Cooper Institute.

The philosophy of the statement is characteristic of Lincoln, rather than of Barnum, but it occurs in many of the speeches of these men, and no positive evidence has been found to credit the saying to authorship beyond question.

In his pamphlet "Judge," Pilgrim the Great" Lincoln," Mr. Lincoln over declared everybody, nor long everybody of the people all the time," of the Masters of Lo Rochefoucauld reader, the celebrated moralist, had said all the others."

U-Boat, 12 Planes Destroyed In Attack on British Convoy

London, April 2 (CP) — A German submarine and 12 enemy aircraft were destroyed in the latest battle along the northern convoy route to Russia, the Admiralty announced today.

In the attack, which occurred on the return trip from Russia, the Admiralty also suffered some losses, including H.M.C. Corvette Bluebell, sunk, two other ships damaged and two aircraft lost.

H.M.C.S. Sioux took part in the convoy operation and although the destroyer has been making convoy runs to North Russia since D-Day last June, Skipper Lt.-Comdr. F. G. Boak, of Victoria, B.C., described this as "the most exciting one."

Continual gales, snow and squalls combined with the unremitting U-boat, torpedo and bomber attacks made the trip one to remember, said the Sioux' first officer, Lt.-Comdr. Doug Bruce of Vancouver.

"We set out with a considerable escort force," said Bruce, "but we weren't out many days before we were shadowed by enemy aircraft. An attack developed and a Junkers dropped a torpedo yards from us."

"Minutes later there were some 15 Junkers swarming over the convoy. Our fire was so hot they didn't attack, and the result was a 30-minute scrap was 4-0 for our side."

After this fight the Sioux joined the Royal Navy destroyers, Zambesi and Zealous to rescue 400 Norwegians from Soroy Island.

The return help was made against a heavy gale. A portion of the escort force, sweeping ahead found a U-boat, sank it and picked up one survivor. But other ships in the fight and one escort vessel and a merchant ship were torpedoed.

"Later that day," said Bruce, "there was a tremendous flash on the port side and later learned the Corvette Bluebell had been hit. She has seemed to disintegrate."

The Junkers harried the convoy area on its return trip and also other two enemy attacks were beggred, but a straggler, beaten from the convoy in the storm, was sunk by a lone aircraft. Survivors said their ship put up a valiant fight alone against 19 bombers before she was sunk.

"And that is about all there was to it," concluded Bruce. "But it was quite a trip."

Large Crowds Attend Churches On Easter

St. Paul's Church

There was a full congregation at St. Paul's on Sunday morning when a choral celebration of Holy Communion was taken by the rector, Rev. J. R. Brownell, assisted by Rev. Wenda Ann. The altar and organ were adorned with Easter lilies and snapdragons. In addition to leading in the singing of bright Easter hymns, the choir sang Gounod's Choir Gloria and anthem "How Is Christ Risen from the dead." The solo part was taken by Rev. J. M. Brownle. The impressive Easter message was based on St. Paul's words to the Romans: "Christ both died and rose again." Mighty-eight persons partook of Holy Communion. At 4 p. m. a children's service was conducted by the Rector who gave an appropriate address to the children. Mite boxes were brought in and deposited in a large pyramid. The amount, over thirty-one dollars as in other years, goes to the Mission Funds of the Church. At the opening of the service, Wenda Ann, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Neal received the sacrament of Holy Baptism.

St. Andrew's Church

The Easter service of St. Andrew's United Church, held in the Town Hall on Sunday morning by the pastor, Rev. E. M. Codigan, lacked nothing of its usual brightness. A large congregation joined with a full choir in the rendition of favorites Easter hymns. The choir also rendered the Easter anthem. The Sunday School scholars who joined with the congregation for the first part of the service, were given a short Easter talk and later the congregation dismissed to a fine ing Easter message. Among beautiful flowers donated by members of the congregation, was a gift phoned from overseas by Private Joseph Smith.

Sacred Heart Church

Easter Sunday was observed at the Sacred Heart Church with High Mass at 10.30 followed by Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The altar and sanctuary were decorated with snapdragon, ferns and blooming potted plants. Rev. H. J. Farrell, the celebrant gave an appropriate sermon to a large congregation.

Women's Association

Circle No. 1 of St. Andrew's Women's Association held its regular monthly meeting on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. H. W. Sine. The convener, Mrs. Gregor Murray conducted the business period and Mrs. E. C. Prentice was in charge of the program. It was decided to hold a rummage sale on Saturday, April 20th and a shower on the home meeting. Following the regular routine the meeting took the form of a farewell party for Mrs. Clifford Chambers, a member of the circle.

Representatives of the W.A. and W.M.S. of the Church were also present and at the end of the party Mrs. Chambers was presented with an electric toaster, from the W.M.S. a glass cake tray and from the W.A. a picture. She very graciously thanked the members of the different organizations and invited them to call in her new home whenever possible. Refreshments were served and a social hour spent.

EASTER AND CHRISTMAS TOO

Philadelphia, April 1 —(AP)— Pvt. Jimmy Liatiks, back after almost two years' service overseas, was glad to be home for Easter, but blinked in astonishment when he walked into the living room—it was Christmas too. Jimmy's parents had kept their Christmas tree alive and green since last December because they wanted him to be the one to take down the decorations—as he always had done.

Great Goose Bay Airport Will Likely Serve as Stop-Over Point After War

(This is the first of a series of three stories on the big Goose Bay Airport written by a Canadian Press reporter who flew into the area recently and spent several days at the base.)

By JACK BRAYLEY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Goose, Bay, Labrador, April 3— (CP)— This gigantic $50,000,000 snow-clad Canadian air base feeding fighting fronts with a supply of aircraft at a rate of at least 1,000 a month, is the answer to one of the most pressing questions of post-war aviation.

It will become a great air service station at the cross-roads of the world, providing an economical stop-over spot for commercial planes which will thus be able to place passengers in Europe, otherwise would be needed for gasoline.

Outside of this important task, service repairs and civilian stations see little else in its immediate post-war value.

Labrador is drained by great rivers with limitless Hydro power possibilities for developing unmeasured mineral resources and a fair lumber plant and commercial aviation undoubtedly will play a role in this development.

Persons speculating on the post-war possibilities of the big base also are not overlooking its potential for tourists seeking something different. The combination has a wild natural beauty with well-stocked fishing lakes and streams and forests sheltering caribou, birds and ptarmigan—an Arctic partridge. The crisp nights of good-weather days are splashed with the northern lights. Construction was started in 1941 with the purpose of providing a close-weather North American landfall that could act in the wide role of defence base and stop-over point on the bomber ferry route to Britain.

An enormous sand plateau, 150 feet above Goose Bay and more than 50 miles inland from the Atlantic coast, was selected for the site. It had first been reported by Canadian pilots before the war.

The base handles fighters following the Dorval-Goose-Greenland-Iceland-Scotland staging route and bombers flying from factory to Goose and then directly to Britain. It also acts as a weather station auxiliary to the more direct staging point at Gander Lake in Newfoundland but this airport has a less favorable weather record.

Australian Letter

By J. E. BOLDSWORTH

(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, April 3 —(CP) —During the last few days Australians have been spared with the world in asking how long it will be before Germany surrenders.

Australia has had her rumors of the European war being ended but she shows a calm resembling that of the peacetime Australia in the face of such premature reports.

Prime Minister Curtin and other ministers have emphasized that the end of the war in Europe means only intensified war activity in the Pacific area, in which all future Australian campaigning will be centred. The daily reports of successes against the Japanese in the Pacific are welcomed with sighs of relief by every citizen of the country, which not long ago regarded invasion as inevitable.

Cables published here this week said the United States is planning after the war in Europe to send 1,000,000 troops to the Pacific war theatre but this has been followed by a warning that this process would take about a year, during which time there can be little relief from Australia's share of blood, sweat, toil and tears.

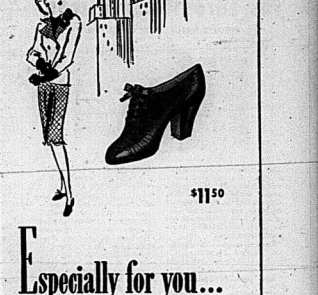
Imperial Force:

Meantime the daily papers have been giving much space to matters affecting the Australian Imperial Force and its part in the Pacific campaigns. This took place in the Federal Parliament with strong complaints by Opposition members. These complaints were as follows:

1. That Australian Imperial Force now engaged in the difficult work of clearing out the Japanese from the jungle islands north of Australia, is inadequately equipped compared to the Americans.

2. That the A.I.F. should be used in bigger Pacific military operations as the island mopping-up task is not urgent.

3. That Australia is full of A.I.F. units which cannot be used for land tasks and are being let get going on bigger jobs.



Prime Minister Curtin's reply is that the island forces are adequately equipped for their present special job in which American mechanized equipment cannot be used and that the A.I.F. before the Japanese are beaten, would undertake bigger and bloodier tasks. However, the time and place of such tasks depending on Gen. Mac-Arthur. Allied Southwest Pacific Commander, at whose disposal they had been placed.

Meanwhile, Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey, commander of Australian military forces, said in a statement in Bougainville, after touring Australian battlefronts in the islands, that "nothing is further from the truth than to suggest that the A.I.F. is merely engaged in mopping up."

He added: "The environment, terrain and foe are the same as in the New Guinea campaign and the risk is relatively the greatest. Liberation of these islands has an important bearing on, the immediate strategy of the war. If we had all the equipment in the world, much of it would be useless at the present stage of the campaign."

Bleaching and Dyeing Hair By Professional Means Only

Irene Dunne has beautiful natural hair.

By HELEN FOLLETT

YOUR GOOD-looks reporter is told by a top-notch beautician that white hair is fashionable. A good many of the dyed ladies are going through the unpleasant experience of getting heads back to normal.

It's not easy for the untinted ones to say "Why doesn't she stop dyeing, why not let her locks go grey?" Only they know the pain of the transition period means. The best way to get through with it is to have the head shaved, wear a bob-wig for three weeks about half an inch a month, one has a fair length in less than a year.

Professional Treatments Needed

During the last three years, women have had less and less time for beauty treatments, and the dyed head calls for frequent professional attention. New shafts, forcing their way out from the scalp, are visible to be touched up every six weeks if the beauty game is not to be advertised to an inquisitive world. These treatments call for the services of skilled, expert operators and cannot be hurried. Don't fancy that you can get the color of your hair changed and that is the end of the whole business; it is not even the half of it.

If by chance you have had contact with the hair tonics, busy on using the same medium. To change colors the agents may be to pour troubles on your head; no telling what a mixture of chemicals you've been the way of tints and tones.

Hair Bleaching

Bleaching is hazardous. Ammonia is added to peroxide when bleaching treatments are given and too much ammonia will burn the hair and scalp, makes them as jute-like that soap suds will run off them like water from a duck's back. Bleaching can be perfectly accomplished, giving the tresses locks a golden glitter, when not something that should be done at home.

One application of bleaching fluid must be given each week if it does, the color will be streaked. Only the new, dark growth next to the scalp must be touched up.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

LITTLE DAUGHTER AND THE LIPSTICK

A new romantic law has been established. On the day when a girl graduates from grade school no male, old or young, may tell her that her lips with the rosy glow. Now this law came to be enacted we cannot tell you, but there it is. It is a fact, and a good one.

A girl of fourteen believes that she has come into women's estate. She is entitled to the pleasures and privileges of the make-up kit. Maybe so. Something is sure: she is more intelligent, more self-possessed, more versed on the state of the world than her mother was at the same age. No doubt about it.

A father, seeing rouge upon the lips of his young daughter, expressed himself:

"I have believed and always will believe," he remarked sternly, "that painted lips are vulgar and disgusting. I never imagined that the daughter of mine would use a lipstick."

His mother spoke up. "The trouble with you, dear, is that you're behind the times," she said. "What kind of a world do you suppose we live in? Don't take a chance of losing your little love. Don't be the party of the disagreeable. Be a jolly sport and fly sawy."

The father who uses her head for the purpose for which it was intended will remember that in her younger days, she had to do as other girls did. Young and middle-aged are miles apart unless the mother has understanding. If it be fair for older person to bridge the gap, to hold forth the guiding hand, to be tolerant and sweet. You can't love a child too much. Any child responds to love and understanding. No mother should stand firm, be harsh, unyielding, when she has a daughter in her teens. Youth will always find a way.

Neither is there a discussion on dress, make-up and appearance, let it be a tender, friendly one. No mother should take a chance on the development of hard feeling, of give the blues.

"Dearest," the wise mother will say, "if you want to redden your lips, lets find a becoming, neutral color, so that your lips won't be too startling. Your eyes are lovely and nothing must detract from them."

Parents are forever proclaiming "I love my children." Much more important is that their child should proclaim them. Youth is headstrong, won't be shoved around, but youth is also very easily touched, when approached tactfully and with deep affection.

The wise mother takes it for granted that her daughter is as fond of beauty aids as she herself is accordingly. There is then a close bond between them, no illusions, no lies. That is as it should be.

The Marry Go Round

WHY MEN STAY YOUNG

The thing that any thinking woman strive a man most of all is his ability to escape BOREDOM. He is born with a healthy determination NOT to be bored!

Marie Bellyin Ray, in her book "How Never to be Bored", names Boredom first as one of the causes of chronic ills. And I imagine it was one of the primary causes of Feminism. Women got tired of spending three-quarters of their life just permitting themselves to be bored. That's why women now have jobs, the vote, a seat in a sausage-car, and lots of other fascinating privileges — and diversion.

But we are not by nature as resentful of boredom as are men. A woman will go on washing the neck, practising his piano lessons and doing his home work. He rebels at the dodgy dullness and lack of interest him.

For men will allow ANY woman to bore them. Before marriage a girl will bridge a dull, tiresome or uninteresting girl as he would the plague or a creditor. He agility in strolling a "pal around" is a positive gift! After marriage if he finds his bride-to-be monotonous or tiresome he promptly invents excuses for getting out of the house—business, golf, the boys, the boys' pal, a fishing-trip—anything to escape boredom.

A woman on the other hand, deliberately lets herself in for boredom. A girl will encourage the attentions of a lot of men who may bore her to tears, just in order to give the impression that she is popular. She will be sweet and OH-so-cordial to the dumbest lump of manhood that ever made a fraternity if she thinks it Will rate her a bid to the dance. And she will dance with a bumpkin who walks all over her satin slippers, just in order to have another "date" on her list.

Why, why this! Women have invented all sorts of inquisitorial rites with which they can bore THEMSELVES when no man is around to bore them. Catch a man, standing for hours on end, trying to hear a sermon—or even an angel—sing! Catch HIM sitting four or five hours in a beauty parlor, having his hair permanently waved and his face massaged with cold cream. Or prop on a starvation diet in order to take a couple off his figure! Not while he's conscious!

The men only brew the boredom a woman may sometimes for love sometimes for policy and sometimes just for sheer charity—they would probably be astounded to learn that they understand why any thinking reasoning creature should be BORED for a moment in a world full of diverting escapes.

And that's why I sury a man his philosophy! That's why men are healthier, happier and may young so much longer than most women! They do not let boredom and tiresomeness get them. But if they can help it. They never do anything they find boring UNTHINKINGLY then if they can avoid it. They may do it over-exertion—but they do it after fatigue sickness! They LIVE while they live!

Fashion Flashes

A BIG LIFT can be given a dress or a skirt by the right little jacket. Ready to do the job is a bolero jacket of gold wool with collar an waist-length, notched, shawl revers edged with narrow black and gold braid.

ITS WONDERFUL how a blouse can alter a suit. Ready to turn a simple suit into a festive costume is a blouse of soft gray chiffon with a wide lattice design worked in lipstick-red sequins.

LUXURY FASHIONS are nice to look at once in a while. There was a time when such a notion was a little envy—at a recent show, for instance, the sensation was the sheath-like, intricately draped dress in banana yellow crepe, and with wide beads of fine-dyed to tone-edging all but the collarless neckline and sleeves.

No Nylons—Even With Victory

Washington, April 2 (AP) — No, girls, victory in Europe will not produce nylon stockings.

Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes regretfully described to reporters Saturday his chances to funnel nylon into hosiery when the demand for parachutes tapers off.

"I would like it very much," he said, "I thought there still might be some left over."

"But they told me it was needed for mosquito netting in the Pacific, when cotton gave out. I thought we could provide that and still give the ladies some."

"Then they told me it must be used for knapsacks instead of cotton duck, because duck was, so heavy.

"I retired. That was my fight for nylon stockings."

New Map Shows Proposed Changes In New Driveway

As result of discussion at a recent meeting of Front Street property owners and members of the local city council, plans for the construction of the proposed Riverside Drive along the east bank of the Moira River north of Bridge Street have been further brought up to date by City Engineer Chas. Mott. A new detailed map of the area clearly showing the changes proposed has been drawn and it is expected a further meeting of property owners will soon be called for approval of the plans.

Most striking in the change of plans as compared to the original is the proposed continuation of the drive north along the river bank to emerge onto Front Street at the present fire hall instead of through the alleyway north of the Belvedere Hotel. The latter idea was objected to by hotel owners because of the disturbance which would be created by trucks using the drive at night.

According to plans brought up to date by the city engineer the Riverside Drive would continue north along the river west of the Fruit Machinery property. If this procedure were followed a fill in the river would be necessary at the Fruit Machinery property, also the razing of a metal clad frame structure to the north. The present fire hall would also have to be razed.

As suggested at the property owners' meeting held some time ago revised plans call for construction of the drive closer to the river, south of the footbridge gangway, than had originally been intended. This procedure would call for less land at the rear of Front Street lots being used.

"The 64 Chevrolets in our Wartime Fleet are the Best Automobiles we have ever operated"

SAYS THIS CHEVROLET OPERATOR

Here is another wartime operator of Chevrolet who has taken time out to place on record his opinion of this great car's dependable, thrifty performance under war driving conditions! What he has to say about Chevrolet reliability and the quality service maintained by General Motors dealers during the war years, will prove a familiar story to Chevrolet owners everywhere in the Dominion. Canada's most popular car in peace, Chevrolet has won a new reputation by its ability to stand-up under tough, punishing war driving conditions. Thank you, Mr. Wallace, for your tribute to Chevrolet—"The standout car in peace and war!"

De Luxe Cab Limited
Toronto 2

"Our company switched to Chevrolets in 1933 and the fleet has been 100 per cent. Chevrolet ever since. Our higher mileages vary from 100,000 to 125,000 miles. In many cases these cars have never had the valves ground, major motor work or piston rings replaced. Most of the rear-ends have not been overhauled. The 64 Chevrolets in our fleet--1941 and 1942 models--are the best automobiles we have ever operated. We have learned that regular check-ups coupled with an exceptionally good automobile have resulted in amazing performance. Our average miles per gallon of gasoline is as good today as when the cars were new--and this is true over the entire fleet. All our major mechanical work has been done by GM dealers, because we believe that they render the right kind of high quality service work at a fair cost. In fact, it costs no more than if we did the work ourselves--and the results are more satisfactory.

50-AS-YOU-PLEASE SOCCER PANNED BY ENGLISH CRITICS

Sports Writers Just Don't Like the Idea of "Guest" Players Gathering in Cup Honors

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 3 (CP)—A wartime regulation permitting professional soccer clubs to borrow each other's players according to the locality in which they are stationed with the forces brought criticism after guests' stars did most of the scoring in the League South Cup semi-finals.

In these days of practically no qualification rules in the various leagues, it's often impossible to tell who is in the lineup until the teams go on the field. And when Chelsea beat West Ham 3-1 in one semi-final March 17, none of the goals was scored by a regular member of either team. On the other semi-final lively Millwall scored the only goal of the match as their borrowed goalkeeper, Threlfall (the best Arsenal scoring efforts.

Such goings-on prompted outright rebukes by the London Evening News and Sporting Record, and some satirical fun-poking by other sports writers and more than a few fans.

The Evening News said that success of the several "eleventh-hour-to-the-rescue" star guests revealed in its true light the insanity of this "go-as-you-please" wartime soccer."

"It is too late to do anything but protest this season," he added. "Next season the clubs may have to depend on their own players."

Millwall and Chelsea meet for the cup at Wembley Stadium April 19, and the News columnist said that although public enthusiasm for the final being turned into a "rent the final being turned into a "farce," there was nothing in the rules to prevent the teams from "borrowing" one another's players for the final. "Why not borrow the services...with outstanding members of the two teams they beat in the semi-finals."

Not a Glamorous Final.

L. C. Manning writing in the London Daily Mirror, said: "Many will be bitterly disappointed that a match billed as the 'final' should be so completely labelled Millwall and Chelsea" might be a good football game, but it will not be everybody's idea of a glamorous Wembley."

In the Chelsea-West Ham game, guests Tommy Walker of Hearts and Dick Whittingham of Bradford scored for the winners, while Joe Townsend of the Chelsea club scored the West Ham tally. Guest goalie Stan Burton, called on for "impossible" saves in holding Arsenal scoreless while two of Arsenal's guest players also achieved fame but of a different character.

In the Millwall game Matt Gardiner, Blackpool and England forward, and Tom Bell of Bolton had failed to take advantage of penalty kicks that would, if converted, give Arsenal to 0 at with a 2-1 victory.

Millwall's triumph provided one of the big surprises in wartime soccer. During the regular schedule, Millwall didn't win a game until Dec. 30. The club still is at the bottom of the South League but since the Cup ties began last month it has lost only one game and won' five.

For the Wembley final, a police limit crowd of 90,000 is expected. All tickets have been sold and total receipts are estimated at £130,000. Of that the Exchequer will receive £60,850, largest amount of entertainment tax ever to be paid from a sporting event in Wembley Stadium.

The clubs—Millwall and Chelsea—each receive $18,000 and the same amount goes to the League South. The 22 players involved in the final receive £25 each.

DETROIT WINGS AND BRUINS MEET IN SEVENTH GAME

Possibility Game May End in Tie and Eighth Game May be Required

Detroit, April 3 (CP)—The Detroit Red Wings and Boston Bruins clash tonight in the seventh game of their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series with the score tied at a tie it will decide which team shall face Toronto Maple Leafs in the professional classic.

The teams are deadlocked at three victories apiece, or points each in the eight-point series. Jack Adams of the Wings said "I think we can beat Boston tonight." But Bruins were full of confidence after their victory at home Sunday night when they defeated Wings 5-3 in their first victory over Detroit at Boston since Dec. 28, 1941.

Adams said he would make no change in the Detroit line-up tonight although he intends to "juggle" some of the lines as the game progresses.

Boston places high hopes in its ace forward line of Cowley-Cain-Jennings, which accounted for four of the five Boston goals Sunday.

As regards the possibility of a tie-game, Detroit's curfew law would automatically take play at 11:46 p.m. N.H.L. rules call for successive overtime periods in event of a tie at the end of regulation time. Thus there remains the possibility of an eighth Detroit-Boston play-off.

CARDS HAVE SAME TEAM AS LAST YEAR TO START

Cooper, Marion and Lanier Accepted for Military Service Later

St. Louis, April 3 — (AP)—Manager Billy Southworth of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals today picked his 1942 world series line-up, as if:

1. There is a 1945 world series;
2. The Cardinals win in the National League.

Last year Southworth's choices for the first spring series contest were the same as a man as his choices for the world series and for the fall classic against the Browns.

The Red Birds might not be so fortunate this season. Captain Walker Cooper, shortstop Marty Marion and pitcher Max Lanier have been accepted for military service. Their 1944 outlook is gone and one of the phenomenons, Al Schoendienst, is a shortstop by trade and has never played the outer gardens in professional competition.

However, the world champions will still open with a formidable aggregation. Last year's infield is intact — Ray Sanders at first, Emil Verban at second, Marion at shortstop, George Kurowski at third.

Rookie Jim Mallory and Augie Bergamo will be Schoendienst in the outfield where the line will be emphasize speed. Walker Cooper, Ken O'Dea and Del Rice, a good-looking newcomer, will handle the catching.

For starting pitchers Southworth has Morton Cooper, Ted Wilks, Lanier, Blix Donnelly, Sod Byerly and Al Jurisch plus some likely rookies

Training Camp Notes

Muncie, Ind. — Southpaw Al Gerhauser, obtained by Pittsburgh Pirates in the deal that sent Vince DiMaggio to Philadelphia Phillies, arrived in camp Monday night and reported he was in "top" condition. Lloyd Waner, veteran outfielder who spent all but two of his 18 years in the major leagues with the Pirates, is back in uniform.

St. Louis — Shortstop Marty Marion joined St. Louis Cardinals Monday for his first workout this season after playing Mar 1940 contract during the interim.

Frederick, Md. — Connie Mack, owner of Philadelphia Athletics, says "It looks as if Ursuhla Shyrer will do our catching this year." Shyrer, who set an American League record of 136 games caught in a season, is a big boy Mueller's record of 217 consecutive games caught last season.

Toronto, April 3 — (CP) — A sad note was sounded to close the Canadian skiing season today when Herman Gadner was buried at Lachmeter cemetery in the heart of the Laurentian Mountains he loved so well. Beloved and unforgettable by those who knew him, Herman lost his life in a snow slide while skiing on Mount Richardson in the Rocky Mountains a week ago.

It was irony that this young man — he was killed on his 26th birthday — should die doing that which was his whole life. To Herman Gadner, Rhodesign of snow conditions and second nature. He came from the Austrian Tyrol where expert craft is bred in the natives.

His influence on Canadian skiing was great because everybody accepted his authority willingly. As head instructor of the Canadian Ski Instructors' School, he set a high standard.

His clean living, quiet manners and efficient teaching gave the young instructors an ideal to strive for, an ideal which manifested itself in the rising standard of teaching all over the Laurentians.

Tribute paid by one of his closest friends, George (Montreal Gazette) Cuthbert, said that his silence in speech was made up by the eloquence of his skis on the snow. It was also typical of him that in his competitive years he did not seek the easier laurels of downhill or slalom, but concentrated on the gruelling tests of cross-country races.

Rookie Cookies:

Clarence Marquess, the Moose Jaw Canuck star who comes from Medford, Oregon, learned to skate only three years ago. In Calgary-his present home — he was only a "rookie rail" and no one gave him a tumble. When an opportunity came to try out with Tmil Rocke Major under the tutelage of Roy Bentley, he jumped at the chance and made good.

So good, in fact, that he has been placed on Boston Bruins' negotiable list as of last year.

Odds-and-Ending:

The Quebec section of the Canadian Swimming Association has just completed its third year of progress-ive swimming meets which have developed top-notch swim stars for the eastern province . . . CANUCKS HOPE TO WIN TITLE IN STRAIGHT GAMES

Ace Line Will be in Action Together for First Time in Over Two Weeks

Winnipeg, April 3 — (CP)—Modest Jaw Canucks hope to win the Western Canada Ice Hockey Association championship, can establish a record for junior play and record tonight of 14 consecutive victories by beating Trail Smoke Eaters in the third of the best-of-seven western finals.

Canucks, confident of whipping the Manitoba champions in four straight games, established the achievement of Portage La Prairie Terriers, 1942 champions, who won a string of straight play-off triumphs last Saturday at Moose Jaw with a 6-5 win. They took Monarchs 6-4 in the opener.

Referee of Dick Butler, formerly of Trail Smoke Eaters, 1944 western champions, will send Moose Jaw's ace line into action for the first time in almost two weeks. Butler paired Bill Mosienko with Frank Ashworth at centre and Clarence Macgregor, former Trail star player, on the right wing. Butler suffered a leg injury in the opening semi-final series with Edmonton Canadians.

Whether Mosienko do not anticipate any lineup changes. They are still starting Bill Gadsby at centre Marchant, a wartime replacement, who sparked their offensive against Port Arthur. Ted Brutton in the other semi-final series. Marchant suffered a groin injury.

ST. MIKES TURN ON POWER AND WHIP ROYALS 7-1

Had 7-0 Lead Before Montreal Squad Scored Late in Third Period

Toronto, April 3 — (CP)— Return of Nelson Pyatt to St. Mikes Majors to the form that carried them undefeated to the all-Ontario junior hockey title was as surprising as the lapse that cost them the first game of their two-game series with Canada Junior final series with Montreal Royals.

A crowd of 11,611 fans, one of the largest to attend junior hockey game last night turned out to watch the Collegians tear the head-strong Montrealers to shreds, as they registered a 7-1 victory. Saturday Mikes had won by 2-1.

St. Mikes dashed into a 3-0 lead in the first period then put the steamp of authority on victory with a four-goal outburst in the second period. Jimmy McCormack, Mikes' defence star, led the Mike scoring.

Tommy O'Connor slapped a pass from Cliff Malone past Pat Reinhart in the St. Mikes net at the six minute mark of the third period to make the only Royals goal after Majors had built up a 7-0 lead.

Leo Gravelle led the victors with a pair of goals, two passing plays with Bob Paul and the third on a smooth effort in the second period. Johnny McCormack, Mike defence star, and Joe Seider accounted for the other St. Mikes goals.

The teams meet in the third game here tomorrow before travelling to Montreal for the fourth game.

Be Quiet.

The employer remonstrated when one of his employees requested an increase in salary on the ground that he worked "like a horse."

"Why," protested the employer "you're late every time. Look! There are 365 days in a year. Eight hours each day you sleep. That's 122 days you're not here for work. Eight hours of every day you have for meals. That's 122 days more. 52 days, I give you an hour for lunch each day, that's 52 days more. 52 more days, leaving 52. You do not work on Sundays, so more days off. Saturday half a day, another 26 days more off—another 26 days, leaving 26 days. Then two weeks' holiday every summer and you take off another 14 days, leaving 14 days. Seven days a year to work—and Christmas Day, Boxing Day, Good Friday, Easter Monday and other Bank Holidays are yours. Why should I give you a rise? You owe me money!"

Baseball Chatter.

Frank McMillan, who played a lot of first base for the Oshawa Generals one, a decade ago, was elected president of the Oshawa Baseball League. The Motor City baseball men have been interested in the promotion of the game since the war started and have proposed to advance the age to 18 years and under on May 1st, 1942. The Baseball Association of Greater Oshawa ball loop and the promotion of the game in the east, the veterans of yester-year are taking an active part in the re-invension of baseball. Besides McCallum, there's Cy Dell, Al Tyson, Jack Rundle and Bill Hall who are taking an active part in the activities of baseball.

"Tonight at the City Hall here a baseball meeting will be held in the interest or reviving the diamond pastime in Belleville and it's to be hoped that everybody interested will put forth an effort to at least attend tonight's meeting and maybe lend a few suggestions for organizing.

Correction Please.

Three veteran players training with the Cleveland Reds have entered corrections regarding their age in the directory.

Horace Lisenbee will be 44, instead of 43 as first reported.

Guy Bush will be 40, instead of 39, and August 23.

Walter (Hack Wilson) Beck will be 39, instead of 37, next October 7.

Lisenbee says that when the Washington Senators trained here Washington in 1926, someone connected with the Southern Association baseball league had signed the pitcher's name to a contract. He really was, he says, being promoted on cut two years from his age.

Wilson joined the Chicago Cubs in the fall of 1923, he was only 23, but his fellow declared he might be a prospect. He was 27 when he first league officials learned he was that old. Bush declares he was only 19 when he was 31. He was born in 1900, not 1902. And Lisenbee was born in 1901, instead of '02.

Each player's account for his age having been improperly carried, but merely says he was born in 1906, not 1902.

Will be Missed.

It was with profound regret the news of the death of Dr. Harry Blakely was told this week-end and the central part of Hastings County. But 79 years of age Dr. Blakely has served in the past and for the past three years had served with the R.C.A.M.C. at the Kingston Military Hospital.

Harry Blakely came to Belleville from his native Thomasburg first in 1896, but it was in 1898 he rose to baseball heights when playing shortstop for the Belleville Nationals, 1898 senior district champions of Ontario. It was said and believed, denied at times, that when Harry Blakely literally carried the Theatre. It's called "The Great Miller" and though it's a somewhat combination of a boy, his dog and his girl friend, there's enough comedy plenty of punch as these scenes are taken at the famed San Anita race track. Jimmy is billed as the lead, but the kid (Rusty Henry and his trick dog) steal the show and rour heart.

Remember When . . .

The New York Rangers, whipped the Toronto Maple Leafs 6-2 five years ago tonight to take a two-game lead in their Stanley Cup final series. The Leafs bounced back to take the next two games and level the series, but the Rangers won the fifth and sixth games as well as the old mug. Today the once mighty Rangers would be out of place in many an amateur loop, while the Leafs are still the class hockey and the Maple Leaf Gardens in the current Stanley Cup semi-final series. Boy, I bet you never met the winner of the Detroit-Boston series, which should wind up sometime tonight. After all it was only a few days ago that "Al Ross" Boston (the worse team I ever saw) Bruins swamped ye ed the Stanley Cup in 1929.

Two Sides

Here's what Syracuse's Lew Andreas, who has devoted considerable thought to the subject, has to say about post-war transfers: "I believe it will be to the interests of intercollegiate sport to apply the transfer rule strictly. It will work some hardship in some cases and perhaps these could be handled by special board representing such groups as the Eastern Intercollegiate Football Association. Unless the transfer rule is applied strictly, I believe we shall witness the greatest carnival of proselyting in the history of sports. There will be a delegation of bowl-hunting organizers at every game to meet every returning ship". . . Oklahoma's Dale Arbuckle takes a more liberal view which reaches almost the same conclusion. Dale believes any service man sent back to school by the G.I. Bill of Rights should immediately become eligible for athletics. He says it's not their fault they weren't eligible sooner.

HOCKEY SCHOOL OPENS AT REGINA

Regina, April 2 — (CP)—Thirty-one potential National League hockey stars skated in at the Chicago Black Hawks hockey school here yesterday and soon, according to the plan, will be in two brisk sessions. The school, expected to be an annual affair, will continue all week.

President Bill Tobin, along with his coaches and scouts Johnny Gottselig, Paul Thompson will know exactly what they have on Friday when the school winds up with a big game between the two squads, each staging an east-west game with Tobin acting as referee, Thompson the role of final coaches.

The Hawks make no secret that they are looking for a defence marker and are building a farm system to keep a steady supply of talent flowing to Chicago. In a few months they have already signed Bob Chrystal, Ian Cushenan and Moose Jaw Canucks as junior farm amateur team and the latter are now in camp but from as far west as Toronto and as far west as Vancouver.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop started to smoke the first half of his 2nd cigar, saying to me, "Benny, I'm feeling so good I'm so old comfortable pretty back, it seems too good to be true.

Pop will be in charge of our glee room being empty again and Cousin Oscar being on the job in his fancy porral's uniform on his way home. And me said, I feel like constantly pinching myself to find out if I'm really awake and not in the midst of a pleasant dream. I can hardly wait to go to bed so I can drop smilingly off to sleep knowing that I'm not going to be startled awake half a dozen times during the night by that gawky snoring. My, what a relief, I only hope we'll really be spared it. I mean we're so apt to be forgetful of our blessings so that it's only appriciating the sunshine as soon as the shadow is removed, she said.

By golliss you're right, we'd better make sure finally into our old easy way of living, pop said. It might be a good idea to put a sign in the front window, Rooms For Rent, so then we could count on an irritating call at the doorbell every time we start forgetting how we appreciate it, me, he said, and ma said, Well I hardly think he'd care to go to that extreme, for land sakes.

Well then O, ma, I've got an idea to help you out, I said. Us fellers are talking about getting up another league and it's not sure anybody will be allowed to have it in their house, so why don't you just keep everything here, ma, because we can help being partly noisy even when we're supposed to quiet, so after every meeting you'll appreciate all over again how nice and quiet it is around here with Cousin Oscar out of the house. What about it, pop, all the fellows? I said, and ma said, Tell them, No. Thank you very much with all due thanks for kind suggestions, but I'm sure I can count on my usual daily little irritations to keep me from forgetting that life isn't an uninterrupted bed of roses, she said.

Being the end of the subject.

U.S. Readers Like Stories Told by Boys Back From Front

New York, April 3 —(AP)— Interest in national and world news has spurred since the outbreak of the war but American readers like to read about what happens "around the corner and down the street", the American Newspaper Publishers Association's Bureau of Advertising reported Monday.

From the mighty panorama of world conflict, however, a wholly real till it comes home . . . in stories told by boys returned from the front . . . is busily detailed dispatches about the combat exploits of hometown lads we know . . . or in the daily doings and quenos of the daily casualty list," the Bureau said.

Based on 8½ years' findings of the Continuing Study of Newspaper Reading in a comparison of men's and women's reading of top war stories and local news and features, the report continued:

"No matter how vital to us are the acts of Hitler, Mussolini, Churchill and Chiang Kai-Shek—no matter how vitally great the ever-sway places like Lingayen and Bastogne may be—the stories of what happens in our own town, around the corner and down the street, is still of intensely personal interest to us all."

Only in newspapers, the Bureau concluded, "can people satisfy this ever-present hunger. No other medium possesses the facilities essential to presenting the quantity, diversity or in the wealth of detail and illustration to local news which people everywhere demand."

SPRING MOISTURE RAISES HOPES OF WESTERN FARMERS

Manitoba Only Prairie Province With Precipitation Above Average. During Fall and Winter Months

(By The Canadian Press)

Precipitation on the grain belt of the Prairie Provinces during the fall and winter months has been generally normal in Alberta and Saskatchewan, but heavy August rainfall in Manitoba brought that province's record to 16 per cent above the average.

March rains further improved the situation in Manitoba, Mining Gazette reported as scattered points. A late snowfall in Saskatchewan brought needed moisture to that province's grain fields.

Statistics issued by the Dominion Meteorological Service, Toronto, for the period from the beginning February, 1945, indicated eastern Manitoba was in the best position in the West with 97 per cent more precipitation than normal. Most of this surplus however, was piled up during the heavy rains last August and could not be expected to have a major effect on the spring grain prospect. Total moisture in the western portion of the Association's Bureau of Advertising reported Monday.

From the mighty panorama of world conflict, however, a wholly real till it comes home . . . in stories told by boys returned from the front . . . is busily detailed dispatches about the combat exploits of hometown lads we know . . . or in the daily doings and quenos of the daily casualty list," the Bureau said.

Based on 8½ years' findings of the Continuing Study of Newspaper Reading in a comparison of men's and women's reading of top war stories and local news and features, the report continued:

"No matter how vital to us are the acts of Hitler, Mussolini, Churchill and Chiang Kai-Shek—no matter how vitally great the ever-sway places like Lingayen and Bastogne may be—the stories of what happens in our own town, around the corner and down the street, is still of intensely personal interest to us all."

Only in newspapers, the Bureau concluded, "can people satisfy this ever-present hunger. No other medium possesses the facilities essential to presenting the quantity, diversity or in the wealth of detail and illustration to local news which people everywhere demand."

Precipitation was low in October throughout the grain growing areas. Only about half the normal rainfall was recorded in Alberta, northern Alberta and in Saskatchewan generally, ranged from 60 to 75 per cent. In central and southern Alberta only 20 to 35 per cent of the normal fall was reported.

During November there were sufficient falls to increase the 75 per cent in eastern Manitoba, and 60 per cent in northern Alberta. Smaller excesses of 35 per cent were reported in southern Alberta and 15 per cent in northern Saskatchewan, but there were deficiencies of 15 per cent in western Manitoba, 20 per cent in central Alberta and 60 per cent in southeastern Saskatchewan.

Snowfall for the winter months of December, January and February was from five to 25 per cent above normal in northern and eastern Alberta. Deficiencies were throughout the western grain area and overfall was from 10 to 30 per cent below the average.

ART KING EASILY DEFEATS SHEARS

Toronto, April 2. (CP)— Arthur King, Toronto featherweight, won the Golden Fleece Trophy in Montreal in the five-round feature match last night on an amateur boxing card at Mount Royal.

Shears did his best to make the bout a wrestling match, using flying tackles, headlocks and arm bends but King made every round a stiff going one.

George Fort, Sudbury, and Fred Kenney went three rounds to a draw at 130 pounds. Fighting at 115 pounds, Dave Chilchoff of Toronto won the decision over Billy Claridge of Fort Coborne.

Larry Johnston of Port Coborne, won the decision over Jimmy Richards of Guelph in a five-rounder at 126 pounds.

CANADIAN PLANES HAD BIG ROLE IN MONTY'S DRIVE

Air Preparation Reduced Losses and Enemy Resistance

By FLT.-LT. TED FARAN, R.C.A.F.

London, April 3 —(CP Cable)— Canada's many bombers and Continent-based fighters played their part in the success of Field Marshal Montgomery's drive toward the heart of northeastern Germany.

It became January and February saw the full force of the land offensive and co-ordination of the air assault succeeded in reducing casualties and enemy resistance to a fraction of what had been spitted.

The fact that, at the beginning of the crossing of the Rhine the Germans failed to organize a counter-attack against the Canadians can be attributed in large part to the work of R.A.F. United States and Canadian Army bombers in blasting rail yards and enemy troops and supply concentrations opposite Field Marshal Montgomery's front.

Now, with the offensive well under way, the fact that the movement of German troops and the return has been restricted can be put down in a measure to the 1,500 tons of bombs that were made by R.C.A.F. Spitfire and Typhoon squadrons since October.

Destruction of R. R. Stock.

As part of their unremitting onslaught against enemy communications, Canadian squadrons' massed on the Continent also destroyed 312 railway cars and damaged 1,501, wrecked 42 locomotives and damaged 213 in the same period.

Meanwhile the record of the R.C.A.F. Bomber Group were blasting unconcerned numbers of other rolling stock in attacks on enemy rail yards along the length of the front.

Diving on enemy trucks, staff cars and other transport staff highways, Typhoons and Spitfires of the R.C.A.F. Second Tactical Air Force destroyed 1,196 damaged to the farce in this direction alone.

Protection of Airborne Operation.

The R.C.A.F. heavily screened attempt aforaft and many Canadians in the R.A.F. participated in the greatest airborne operation of all time which was effected in connection with the Rhine crossings March 24. If the Luftwaffe wasn't severely routed by this army, it was because Allied airmen kept the enemy fighter forward airfields from which the Germans might have sent up opposition.

The steady destruction of German fighter planes and pilots in the months preceding the grand assault —216 since Oct. 1 by Canadian day fighters alone—helped, in liquidation of enemy air opposition.

When the surge over the Rhine developed, R.C.A.F. Typhoon and Spitfire fighter-bombers served as ringed artillery for Canadian and Allied ground forces. They hammered and strafed enemy gun positions, transportation and bridges, shattered enemy communications and dived on retreating troops.

COLUMNIST ANSWERS PRAVDA

New York, April 3—(AP)—Walter Lippmann, columnist, in a reply to criticism by Pravda of his article on Russia, said Monday that the Soviet book, "U. S. War Aims," belies the western powers have as much right to invade Russia as the reverse country against Germany. Mr. Lippmann acknowledged a "misunderstanding" and a Moscow answering an article by G. Cyrgalov published in Pravda, the Communist party newspaper.

BIG THREE MAY AGAIN MEET

London, April 3 (CP) — The Daily Mail in a front-page article today said there were indications that a new meeting of President Truman, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin might re-place, or at least supplement, the San Francisco World Security Conference, scheduled to open April 25.

GERMAN CIVILIANS SURRENDER TO ADVANCING ALLIES

German civilians who defied the Nazi orders to evacuate are now surrendering to the Allies by the hundreds. They are seen as they emerged from many homes holding hands high in sign of surrender as Allied troops occupy Lindforth, Germany.

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 2

"When Victorine came back with Lola, she said that Rapzo, one of the housemaids, had mentioned seeing 'Miss Claude' leave the house by the front door some time after ten o'clock wearing her black coat and hat. Neither Lola nor Victorine could suggests any reason why Kitty should leave the house wearing Ann's clothes. Her high fever, the laziness of the hour, and the snowstorm made it all the more bewildering. Lola cried out, 'It's madness!' We stared at each other as he repeated more slowly, 'Madness. . . Can that be it?'

"We both recalled cases of people who suffered with nervous breakdown. All of Lola's jobs about Kitty's being imaginative and introspective was quite true. She was underweight and not particularly strong. We had had an unsettled time the last few weeks opening the house and getting ready for the party. Ever since Kitty had had a long series of dress fittings in Paris. She was always tired after a fitting. It seemed possible that her nerves had broken down under the strain. Perhaps her collapse that afternoon had been more nervous than physical.

"At this point I realized for the first time what a harrowing public city can become. Thanks to me, Kitty was a celebrity. If I asked the police to find Ann Darrow, the newspapers would get hold of the story. Such a scandal would ruin Kitty and me with her. A girl whose mind is tainted is scarcely likely to make a brilliant marriage. And if the papers got hold of the impersonation story, or unearthed anything about the true state of our finances, it would be still worse.

"I decided then and there that the whole thing must be suppressed. Rest, we will not call in the police. We will get a discreet lawyer or a private detective to find Kitty.'

"But Victorine pointed out that Kitty's photograph had been published so widely that if she were wandering about the city in a dazed condition some one might recognize her before we had time to find her.

"For a moment I was at a loss. It was Lola who—

"No!" cried Pasquale, springing to his feet. "It was she who did it—not I! That woman is like Lady Macbeth—she's abnormal! She has noticed me, nagged me, bullied me! It's all her fault! I am innocent!"

He collapsed in his chair, sobbing again. Rhoda looked at him. A slight smile flickered at the corners of her mouth.

"Really, Lola. . . ."

"She—she died away."

"Well, then, "murmured Rhoda, incidentally, "it was, of course, I who pointed out that no one could identify a wandering girl as Kitty Jocelyn, so long as Kitty was still living at home and appearing in public places. The impersonation had succeeded. Why shouldn't Ann go on with it until we found Kitty?

"If Kitty were to disappear from public view and cancel all the engagements she had made for the next few days there would be gossip, no matter what excuse we gave. But if Ann were to disappear it wouldn't cause a ripple. She was a stranger in America and she had absolutely no money. She had no close relatives on her father's side, and she had lost touch with her mother's family so completely that her uncle, Edgar Jocelyn, had not recognized her that afternoon when he dropped in for a cocktail. She had only one friend in New York—some school friend who kept a bookshop. But this friend did not know Ann was in New York. There was no one who would notice her absence.

"All we had to do, was to tell the servants that Ann had gone to some far-off place—Canada or California. They would believe that, since one of the housemaids had mistaken Kitty for Ann when she left the house in Ann's clothes. We could send Ann's luggage by express to some option to wait until called for.

"The first day after the party it would be only natural for Kitty to rest, so Ann could do the same thing in Kitty's room. The day after that Ann could appear dressed as Kitty in some public place, not too well lighted—the opera would be perfect. And by the third day Kitty might be found.

"We were gambling on the hope that we would be able to trace her before she fell into the hands of the police. Kelley and Reinold, the private detectives we consulted, were sure they could find Kitty before scandal in a few days."

"But they didn't." said Inspector Foyle, abruptly. "Why didn't they look in the mortuary—where she was? That's routine in disappearance cases. And you knew she was ill when she left the house."

"I'm afraid we all assumed Kitty was alive," Rhoda answered a little too smoothly. "You see, we didn't take her physical illness very seriously. She was subject to sharp colds and fevers, and ever, but as a rule, they lasted only a day or so. I had hoped that she would be able to take up her old life after a little rest without any one knowing what had happened."

Basil thought she's lying. I wonder what is the real reason they "assumed" Kitty was alive?

"We were faced with one difficulty," continued Rhoda. "What if Ann should refuse to go on taking Kitty's place? She's not a shrewd girl. When I took her on as my secretary she hadn't sense enough to insist on a salary in addition to her board and passage to America. But she is one of those deceptively docile people who turn restless at the most inconvenient moments—as I found out when she first showed a quite impractical question of right and wrong arises.

"With so much at stake, we could not risk a refusal, which might lead to the very thing we wished to avoid—scandal. It was Lola who overcame this difficulty."

Pasquale lifted his head and moaned.

"It was really very astute of Jim," went on Rhoda, imperturbably. "He pointed out that it must be a rather peculiar experience to impersonate some one else in public. Ann had been through a great mental strain. We might be able to take advantage of her suggestible condition, if we played the same game Ann was in New York played on Christopher Sly.

"In other words, when Ann woke the next morning, we would all speak and act as if we sincerely believed that she was Kitty. When she insisted she was Ann, we would regard she was suffering from a delirium.

"No one in the house, except Lola, Victorine and myself, had ever seen Ann and Kitty together since Ann's transformation. With her hair cut, she looked exactly like her cousin. The servants were sure to be deceived and treat her as if she were Kitty. Of course Kelley and Reinold, the private detectives, had to know that a cousin was taking Kitty's place to conceal her disappearance, but they need not know the cousin was doing so involuntarily. When it was all over, we could get Ann to take the whole thing as a hoax—with a little persuasion—and—"

There was a sharp crack. Detective Duff swore under his breath. He had broken the nib of his fountain pen.

"There's another pen there!"

Impatiently, Rhoda swept across the room to the little marquetry desk. She snatched open a drawer. Its doing so her elbow struck the inkwell. It toppled and a great spurt of black ink splashed across the peacock blue silk of her dress from waist to hem.

Rhoda dabbled at the stain on her skirt with a wisp of handkerchief, disgusted as a pampered and fastidious cat splashed with mud.

"Look what you've done! Go upstairs and change my dress!"

Foyle looked at Sobel, and Sobel shook his head.

"I'm sorry, ma'am," said Foyle. "But I'm afraid we haven't time for that now. I want statements from Mr. Pasquale and the servants. And I'll have to see Mrs. Jocelyn's room, and go over the house. She was taken ill in this house. There may be some clue to her poisoning here."

Rhoda stared at the inspector for a moment. Then she shrugged. "As you please, I'll do anything I can to help."

Pasquale's confidence was sobbing again. "I—I'm not under arrest?" he cried hoarsely.

"Not yet," returned Foyle.

Rhoda looked at the change in the inspector's manner. At the beginning of the interview he had been a little reserved. But now he had heard Rhoda's story, she was just another "case." He opened the door and strode to the head of the great staircase as self-possessed as if he were at headquarters, and called loudly "Bill! Casey!"

Gregg, materializing out of the shadows in the lower hall, said, "I will inform Mr. Casey that you desire his presence, sir."

"I want you, too," responded Foyle. "I've got the phone Headquarters for some more men—this place is as big as Madison Square Garden! I want you to round up all the servants in one room and hold them until I send for them, Casey." I want you to take Mrs. Jocelyn and Mr. Pasquale into this next room and don't let 'em out of your sight or hearing."

"Yes, sir," said Casey.

"Well, what's the matter with you? Get going!"

"Begging your pardon, sir, but—has Miss Kitty been kidnapped?"

Foyle eyed the man for a moment and then decided to trust him.

"Not kidnapped. Murdered."

"Murdered!"

"Yeah. And don't spill it to the other servants until I've talked to them."

Basil and Sobel were left alone in the Murillo room. Sobel paused and looked at his watch. "Gosh! It's nearly midnight! We've been here four hours." He helped himself to one of Basil's cigarettes. "Funny to think of a woman like that talking so frankly. . . . Or was she putting on an act?"

Basil stared into the fire. "People will say anything when they're suspected of murder. Even the truth . . . or part of it."

"Then it's possible Kitty Jocelyn left the house in a sort of sleep-walking state—"

"Yeah. But I mean—"

"Certainly in such cases, The technical name is fugue. All mental diseases are a form of flight from reality—usually a mental form. In cases of fugue there's physical flight as well. But it's equally possible that Kitty left the house in a perfectly sane condition, for some reason of her own."

GRATEFUL TO BE RID OF PAIN THAT TROUBLED HER FOR YEARS

Pain Located in Side Would Extend Upward to Neck and Head. Tried Many Different Things, But Got No Relief. Now Gratefully Tells How Dystuss Helped Her.

MRS. IDA WELCH

Convincing proof of the good results obtained by men and women who have taken Dystuss Herbal Compound is found in the many splendid reports that are being received almost daily. These people feel how they have suffered with stomach disorders, sluggish kidneys or liver, nervousness, backache or rheumatic aches and pains. In nearly every case they tell of the splendid relief they have obtained simply by taking a short treatment of Dystuss. They are anxious to make their experiences known in the hope that it will be the means of helping others.

For instance, here is the experience of Mrs. Ida Welch, 718 Talbot Street, London, Ontario, as reported only a few days ago:

"For several years I have been troubled with severe pains in my side that extended up to my neck and head. At times the pain was so bad I would scream with agony. I could get no relief in any way. I tried many pills and mixtures of many kinds, but nothing helped me.

"A few weeks ago a friend told me about Dystuss and the good it had done her. I thought I'd try it, too, and I am certainly glad I did, because this medicine seemed to be made especially for me. I wasn't taking it long when the pain began to lessen until now there is no trouble at all. I feel fine in every way, have a better appetite, enjoy my meals, I sleep more soundly at night and everything seems so much easier for me, because I have gained more energy.

"I do this pure herbal compound help you as it has so many of my friends and women. Dystuss is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN'THE DRUGGIST.

Developing and Printing Business Has Expanded Greatly During War

Making allowances for relioning of film and other necessities involved in the hobby, amateur photography has attained a little of the glowing the war years.

As a matter of fact, according to a local photographer, had film not been rationed, his business would have climbed to commensurate heights unheard of in the pre-war years.

With the war momentum, work of developing films and printing of negatives zoomed practically overnight, and photographers doing this work, awakened to find their figurative hands full, and little extra help available.

Last year was one of the best of the war years in the district despite the fact that a number of active persons have left the area.

But 1945 may not prove so lucrative a year as that just passed. For with the beginning of the year, a governmental edict announced the rationing of printing paper. This will naturally will curtail the development and printing business to a certain extent.

However, it was intimated that the rationing is only a temporary nature and may be lifted when the war in Europe ends.

resigned as House Leader at that time, and he followed that three days later with resignation as provincial leader. Many felt he became apparent that Aitchi would succeed as leader of the Liberals in the province. Mr. Hines had told the party caucus that he felt he was personally want Mr. Hepburn as leader and Ontario will again have "a man to lead it in the next opportunity."

It was Mr. Hepburn who precipitated defeat of the Progressive Conservative administration of Premier George A. Drew in the Legislature in the early hours of March 26 when the government was defeated by a vote of 46. The 38 Liberals joined the 21 C.C.F. members, two Labor-progressives and two Independents in overthrowing the government. The Premier announced dissolution the following day and stated that an election would be held "as soon as possible." Setting of the election date is being held up pending arrangements for the overseas vote of Ontario citizens now on active service.

The fact that congratulations for the victory came from British home station might indicate the action took place in waters in that area. The fact that the wards list was available might indicate the action took place several months ago or it usually takes the Board of Inquiry of such a list to be considered and approved.

Played Lone Hand

The Annan played a lone hand in hammering out her victory over the submarine. The U-boat was blasted with 54 rounds of four-inch gunfire and 1,080 rounds of Oerlikon fire, topped off by depth charges.

At no time during the action was the sub more than 6,000 yards away from Annan's port. Actual fighting didn't start until Annan had closed to within 3,000 yards and at that "kill" the range was down to 1,000 yards.

Commissioned only a few months before the action, Annan detected

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, April 3 (CWP) — A Chatham flying boat pilot, by Flt.-Lt. E. C. Lawrence of Ottawa, attracted by a cluster of dinghies over the mountainous island off the African coast, rescued Chatham airmen from the crew of a ship who had been stranded on the island more than 18 weeks.

"We circled around and could see the men waving," said Lawrence. "We dropped them some food and water and a note saying we would arrange for their rescue."

After a navel vessel had been dispatched to the island by Flt.-Lt. John Kitchen, captain, from Penticton, B.C., ship was on the way and they were picked up soon after.

Aboard the flying boat with Lawrence were Flt.-Lt. D. G. Lyall of Halifax, navigator; WO. 2s. Dorman, (Charles Dirks) Vancouver; and five Britons.

The Chatham reported that after their ship was torpedoed they made their way to the island by life-rafts. For first 4 days they lived on salt water and shellfish, turtles, wild poultry and wild goats. An evaporator to make fresh water was delivered by plane. The men, after a dinner, from two buoyancy chambers and piping in the raft.

A small group of Chinese put to sea on a raft after six weeks but were never seen again.

Flt.-Sgt. Bob Higgs of Bourlamaque, Que., is one of the luckiest fellows in the R.C.A.F. He sat in the rear turret of a Mosquito fighter-bomber when it was shot down by another plane and a few seconds later watched part of the tail assembly, including the fighter fire—and he didn't get a scratch.

More than that, he and Flt.-Sgt. Glenn Bishop of Regina, mid-upper gunner, downed the attacking Junkers 88 with 1,900 rounds from their guns.

"We'd let our load go successfully and were about to close the bomb doors when another aircraft bounced into our rear turret," said Flt. John Kitchen, captain, from Penticton, B.C., while we were on the way and they were picked up soon after.

DECORATED FOR BRAVERY DURING SUB ACTION

In one of the outstanding anti-submarine actions of the war the Canadian River class frigate H.M.C.S. Antaeus forced a German U-boat to surface and sank it after a fierce gun battle. During the battle Antaeus closed to a distance of 2,000 yards, before the enemy U-boat was destroyed. Lieut.-Cmdr. John Stubbs, of Alameda, Sask., and his gunnery crew were wounded in the action and most of the U-boat's crew were taken prisoner, including the captain. Lieut.-Cmdr. Stubbs, commanding officer, Lieut.-Cmdr. C. F. Baltry, D.S.C., R.C.N.R., of St. Johns, Que., and Lieut. John Corbett, R.C.N.V.R., of Bilmeading, Alta. These two officers have been mentioned in despatches for outstanding ability they showed during the action. Lieut.-Cmdr. Baltry received the Distinguished Service Cross and Lieut. Corbett has been mentioned in despatches.

'Most Horrible Sight I Ever Saw,' Says Photographer

By GRANT MACDONALD

TOKAMURI, Ryukyu Islands, March 28 — (Delayed)— An appalling pile of civilian Japanese dead and dying, who preferred suicide rather than face American "barbarians," greeted United States landing forces on this island today.

Cpl. Alexander Roberts, army photographer from New York City, was with the first assault parties to reach the scene which he described as "the most horrible I ever witnessed."

"I saw at least 40 women and children strangled with strips of cloth taken from their tattered clothing. The only sounds came from little children who were wounded but not dead. In all there were nearly 300 individuals . . . .

Japanese who recovered sufficiently to answer questions said Japanese soldiers told them the American would violate and torture the women and kill the men.

YANKS 58 MILES FROM CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Greater Vienna Within Range of Russian Artillery

Wiener Neustadt Taken, Bratislava Closely Pressed

Vienna-Venice Railroad Cut, Nazi Troops Trapped

London, April 4 (CP)—Powerful Soviet tank and infantry forces surging through the administrative district of greater Vienna, smashed today to within six miles of the city proper, now within easy reach of Soviet artillery.

Two massive Russian armies already deprived the defenders of Vienna of the great bastion of Wiener Neustadt, 22 miles to the south, and were closely pressing Bratislava, 24 miles east of the Austrian capital's city limits.

Wiener Neustadt, one of the biggest aircraft production centres in Europe, fell to Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's 3rd Ukrainian army which drove on 16 miles to the southwest, capturing Neunkirchen and Gloggnitz. The Russians cut the main Vienna-Venice railroad and a trans-alpine highway connecting the war arsenals of Austria and Czechoslovakia with German troops in Italy.

At Gloggnitz the Russians were within seven miles of the 3,215-foot Semmering pass and were 137 miles east of Hitler's mountain retreat at Berchtesgaden.

Capitalize on Crossing.

In the drive on Vienna another wing of Tolbukhin's army capitalized on a crossing of the Leitha river and dashed 17 miles through a web of highways and railroads, each an enemy defence line. The Russians by-passed the sulphur spa Baden and captured Velm, within the boundaries of Vienna set by the Nazi party and only six miles south of the metropolitan limits.

Meanwhile, Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian army hurled a 20-mile siege arc around Bratislava, capital of the puppet state of Slovakia, and drove within three-quarters of a mile of the city itself with the capture of the suburb of Prjevos. Bratislava was outflanked on the southwest by a two-day Russian advance of 20 miles along the south bank of the Danube river.

Malinovsky's forces were within 11 miles of a juncture with Tolbukhin's troops as the two Soviet armies squeezed the German defenders of the Bratislava gap.

Capture Parndorf.

Malinovsky's units drove up the east shore of the Neusiedler See (lake) and captured Parndorf, four miles east of Bruck and 15 miles east of Vienna. Simultaneously Tolbukhin's men broke across the 1,575-foot Leitha mountains, and advanced along the west shore of the Neusiedler See to positions within eight miles southwest of Bruck, a fortress city in the Bratislava gap.

Moscow announced that the 2nd and 3rd Ukrainian armies had captured 23,000 prisoners yesterday, boosting to 75,150 the number taken in Austria, Hungary and Slovakia in three days.

Far to the north the 2nd White Russian army took Neuendorf, two miles southeast of captured Danzig on the plains of the Vistula delt. Units of this army also broke onto the Westerplatte sand spit, guarding Danzig harbor, and won Krakau and Heubude.

MORE THAN 6,000 JOBS FOR WOMEN IN TORONTO

Toronto, April 4 — (CP) — More than 6,000 jobs in industrial plants, essential civilian services and offices are available for women in Toronto, it was learned here from Miss Mary Eadie, Women's Division, National Selective Service.

Last week only 1,736 women were available to fill a required list of 7,752 vacancies in these fields, she said.

Most urgent needs are for textile workers, dining room and kitchen help in hotels and restaurants and medium-grade stenographers, she said.

CANADIANS TRAP 90,000 GERMANS IN WEST HOLLAND

Twente Canal Bridgeheads Enlarged and Troops Enter Zutphen

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army in Northern Holland, April 4 — (CP Cable) — Bridgeheads over the Twente Canal have been enlarged by Canadian troops and they have entered the town of Zutphen on the Ijssel River, while British and other Canadian units under Gen. Crerar are lining the south bank of the Neder Rhine opposite Arnhem, where the river is 250 feet wide.

Along a 20-mile stretch running north of Zutphen Canadian infantry are closing up to the Ijssel River and British reconnaissance troops have advanced to the confluence of the Ijssel and the Neder Rhine at Westervoort, one mile southeast of Arnhem.

Canadians Reach Zwolle

(Paris radio said the Canadians have reached Zwolle, 26 miles north of Zutphen and 10 miles east of the Ijsselmeer.)

Once the Ijsselmeer is reached the Canadians will have closed a trap on the bulk of 90,000 Germans in western Holland.

It was not known definitely whether the Germans are planning to defend Arnhem where isolated British airborne troops put up a gallant fight against overwhelming odds for nine days last September. Canadian troops now can shoot up the streets of Arnhem with small arms fire as well as direct artillery fire against the enemy should opposition develop.

49th Clear Arnhem Island

It was permitted to disclose that the 49th Division was the British formation in the Canadian Army which cleared the eastern end of the "Arnhem Island" between the Neder Rhine at Arnhem and the Waal Rhine at Nijmegen. This formation now is with the Canadians opposite Arnhem.

"Lord Haw Haw", Briton who broadcasts over the German radio, refers to the 49th as the "Polar Bear Butchers". Their battle patch is a Polar Bear as a result of service in Iceland before the Normandy landing last Summer.

The division calls itself the 'Nijmegen Homeguard" for it has been manning the defences of the Arnhem Island area throughout the winter without any major action. However, this fine division is on its way now.

SULU INVASION PUTS YANKS 30 MI. FROM BORNEO

Strategic Control of Jap Naval Base at Tawitawi Gained Without Opposition

Manila, April 4. (AP)—Borneo and its great petroleum and rubber resources lay only thirty miles south of the U.S. 8th Army today. Americans won strategic control of the Japanese naval base of Tawitawi at the southern tip of the Sulu Archipelago with hardly a fight Monday.

Elements of the U.S. 41st Division aided by guerillas, also captured two airfields on Sangasanga Island and took possession of neighboring Bongao Island with virtually no opposition, an Allied communique reported today.

Warships of the U.S. 7th Fleet, coursing through waters which once provided the Japanese with a major fleet anchorage and refueling depot, laid down a heavy bombardment prior to the landing while Navy planes provided close support to the landing force.

The daring thrust carried invading infantrymen 230 miles southwest of Mindanao. American losses were reported as small.

Veterans of Biak, Wake, New Guinea and the rapid-fire Zamboanga campaign lost no time in taking possession of the Sangasanga airfields. One runway was 4,000 feet long, suitable for fighter planes and transports.

San Pablo Captured.

On Luzon, 14th Corps troops cleaning out the southern part of the island captured San Pablo, provincial capital of Laguna. With its capture only two large Philippine cities remain in Japanese hands—Davao on Eastern Mindanao and Baguil in North Luzon.

The 158th regimental combat team which landed at Legaspi on Bicol peninsula Sunday, pushed patrols 15 miles north and 21 miles northwest.

Throughout the Visayas American invasion forces were rapidly mopping up the enemy. Gen. MacArthur claimed control of all of Cebu except the foothills northwest of Cebu City. Likewise all of Negros Island was claimed except the northwestern tip and the isolated port town of Dumaguete on the southeast coast.

Panay Island Cleared.

The island of Panay was practically cleared of the enemy, MacArthur reported.

Bombers attacking Formosa's eastern coast pounded three airdromes, hitting fuel dumps and destroying some parked planes. Fighter-bombers belabored railroads, factories and power plants.

SENATE OVERIDES PRESIDENT

Washington, April 4 — (AP) — The Senate overrode President Roosevelt with a crushing 46-to-29 rejection of a bill empowering the administration to freeze workers to war jobs and apply other sweeping manpower controls.

WHERE ALLIES MAY FORM NEW TRAP

As Allied armies continue to make sensational gains, a gigantic pincers appears to be forming around the vital Ruhr area that threatened to trap large forces of Nazi troops. Powerful armored columns of the British Second Army (1) racing across the Westphalian plain and driving toward Hannover may send units around the Ruhr to effect a meeting with armored divisions (2) of Lieut.-General Courtney H. Hodge's First Army which have wheeled north and burst into the province of Westphalia. These spearheads may also be backed up by members of the Third Army following the junction with the First Army which was made in the Giessen area (3).

DRIVE FOR NAHA LARGEST CITY ON OKINAWA ISLAND

American Invaders Overrun 40 Square Miles in Scattered Opposition

Guam, April 4 — (AP) — Twin American drives today moved swiftly southward toward Naha, capital of Okinawa, and perhaps also to the first major resistance by the Japanese defenders since the invaders landed four days ago.

Air observers reported occasional bursts of Japanese fire as well as signs of an elaborate trench system bustling with activity across the southern end of the island near Naha.

Naha, largest city in the Ryukyu chain with a population of 66,000, was only six miles from forward elements of the 77th Infantry Division moving down the west coast. Naha airdrome is the best in the archipelago.

Scores of little towns were overrun in yesterday's sweeping advances all along the line. The invaders have overrun some 40 square miles.

Drive Another Wedge

A strong force of Marines drove another wedge across the strategic island, 325 miles south of Japan itself, by reaching the east coast at the Katchin Peninsula, which was cut off.

Meanwhile 7th Division troops, who first bisected the island Monday, moved eight miles down the shores of Nakagusuku Bay — former Japanese fleet anchorage to Kuba town.

"Resistance throughout the day was negligible," Admiral Nimitz reported.

The invasion was many days ahead of schedule. Opposition was confused but field officers said it was too good to last.

Observers expected that heavy fighting would begin, perhaps tomorrow, when the Japanese —there are an estimated 60,000 or more on the island — may launch a counter-attack.

Refugee centres have been established on Okinawa and Japanese civilians are pouring in by the hundreds. First fright vanishes when they receive food and treatment they say is much kinder than that they received from Japanese rulers.

CRUISER UGANDA JOINS BRITISH PACIFIC FLEET

Navy Minister Says More Than "Mere Token Force" Will Go to Pacific

By WILLIAM STEWART
(CP War Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, April 4 —(CP Cable)— H.M.C.S. Uganda, the Royal Canadian Navy's first cruiser, has joined the British Pacific Fleet.

The warship, commanded by Capt. E. R. Mainguy of Duncan, B.C., is the first unit of the Canadian fighting services to enter the war in the Pacific.

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 4—(CP)—Possibility that parliament may be given an outline of the force Canada will send to the war in the Pacific was foreseen today in the Commons as debate on the war appropriations continued.

A blueprint of the force the Royal Canadian Navy will send to the Pacific was presented yesterday by Navy Minister Macdonald and it was expected that other defence departments would present their plans when their estimates are reached.

Some believed that Prime Minister Mackenzie King might make a statement during the day outlining in general terms the planned disposition of Canadian forces in the Pacific theatre.

Mr. Macdonald, presenting his naval estimates, said that Canada would send more than a "mere token force" to the Pacific. The Canadian cruiser Uganda was already in Pacific waters and she would be joined by a second cruiser, the Ontario, possibly two aircraft carriers and a number of destroyers and frigates.

Will Worthily Represent Canada.

"I am not able to state publicly the exact number of ships we will send, nor the exact number of men involved, but I can say that the Canadian naval unit in the Pacific, while it will not at all compare in size or strength to the British naval force or to the magnificent American Pacific Fleet, will, nevertheless, be a good deal more than a mere token force, and it will, I believe, worthily represent Canada in the Pacific war," said Mr. Macdonald.

His department's expenditures for the next five months were estimated at $140,043,500, said Mr. Macdonald the first minister to present his estimates after Finance Minister Ilsley had presented a resolution calling for authorization to spend $2,000,000,000 on war and mutual aid between now and Sept. 1.

The resolution was adopted on

SURRENDER APPEAL REPEATED

London, April 4 — (CP) — Gen. Eisenhower's call to the German army to surrender piecemeal, first made March 31, was repeated last night.

1,400 PLANES HIT SUBMARINE YARDS AT KIEL, HAMBURG

Others of 3,000-Plane Assault on Germany Strike at Airfields Over Wide Area

London, April 4 — (CP)—United States heavy bombers, estimated to number 1,400, paced a 3,000-plane assault on Germany today and struck submarine yards at Kiel and Hamburg and a number of airfields over a wide area of northern Germany.

It was the second attack on Kiel in less than 24 hours.

Before the American heavy bombers roared in, a strong force of British Lancasters bombed troops concentrations at Nordhausen in support of the U. S. 3rd Army. It was the second British air attack in 16 hours on Nordhausen, 56 miles east of Kassel on the direct route to Berlin.

Last night's Mosquito raid on Berlin was the 47th in 43 nights. The German radio reported about 160 planes participated in the raid.

Strafe Airfields

British Intruders ranged over a wide area last night strafing airfields jammed with German planes being shuttled back out of the way of the advancing Allied ground forces.

The Air Ministry said three British planes were missing from all the night operations and yesterday's assault on Nordhausen. The U. S. 8th Air Force lost one bomber and three fighters in the Kiel raid yesterday, which centred on three shipbuilding yards that had been converted into submarine construction centres.

Declaring the harbor was filled with ships, pilots said that due to heavy clouds they were unable to determine if any of the enemy vessels were hit.

Weather Unfavorable

Fighter-bombers based on the continent were unable to get off the ground until mid-afternoon yesterday.

In the few hours left before darkness U. S. 9th Air Force pilots shot down four German planes, destroyed four others on the ground, shot up 147 vehicles trapped in the Ruhr pocket, disabling 18 locomotives and cut railways in 20 places.

British 2nd Tactical Air Force planes continued harassing Germans attempting to flee east from the Netherlands. More than 200 enemy vehicles were destroyed or damaged.

EARLY FIRE HAZARD SEEN IN FORESTS

Toronto, April 4 — (CP) — An early fire hazard in Ontario forests is anticipated because of the unusually early break-up of ice and snow this spring, Frank McDougall, Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests, said today. There has not been an opportunity as yet to survey the situation, Mr. McDougall added, but bush and fallow burning in rural areas has already begun.

Other Forces Reach Weser River On Road to Berlin

Drive Being Made to Capture Huge Skoda Munitions Plant

(By JAMES LONG)

Paris, April 4 —(AP)— British troops reached the Ems river 48 miles from the North Sea today in a drive to trap up to 90,000 Germans in Holland, and United States 9th Army tanks pulled up to the Weser, next to last important stream on the high road to Berlin.

The 3rd Army fought down the last 58 miles toward Czechoslovakia and for the city of Gotha, 140 miles southwest of Berlin. The Germans said Lt.-Gen. Patton's troops had reached Arnstadt, 70 miles from Leipzig and 110 from the Czech city of Pilsen, where the Great Skoda Munition Works — Hitler's last major arsenal — are located. Arnstadt is 13 miles southeast of Gotha.

The 5th armored Division of the 9th Army reached the Weser at Bad Oeynhausen, 183 miles from Berlin, 57 south of Bremen and 103 southwest of Hamburg. A battalion of engineers rode along to bridge the river. The north German towns of Salzuflen, Dienhide and Hollinde fell on the way.

The Germans said the 1st Canadian Army forces had crossed the Waal Rhine, presumably at Arnhem, in a drive toward the Ijsselmeer (Zuider Zee)—less than 20 miles from Gen. Crerar's vanguards.

Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, said the Canadians have entered Zutphen and have enlarged their bridgeheads north of the Twente canal between Zutphen and Hengelo.

Canadians Co-operating

The Canadians were co-operating with the British forces in the move to trap German forces in Holland. They cut more communications to the rocket coast of the Netherlands from which the Germans have bombarded Britain.

(Paris radio declared Canadian troops had reached Zwolle, 10 miles from the east side of the Ijsselmeer and 26 miles north of Zutphen).

The French 1st Army entered Karlsruhe, capital of Baden and an important communications and industrial centre of 189,000 near the upper Rhine.

The Germans said that American artillery was within range of the north German city of Detmold, 47 miles southwest of Hannover.

Combined blows by the U. S. 1st and 9th Armies closed down the perimeter of the Ruhr trap to 190 miles and 12th Army Group headquarters raised the estimate on doomed German troops in the annihilation zone to between 120,000 and 150,000.

Lt.-Gen. Patton's forces were last reported 160 miles from Russian lines nearly a day ago. Their nearest reported approach to Berlin remained at Gotha, 140 miles distant.

CHURCHILL RECEIVED BY KING

London, April 4 — (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill was received by the King today just before the opening of the Commonwealth Conference. It was the third time the Prime Minister has been received by the King within a week.

REPORT CIVIL WAR IN VIENNA

New York, April 4 — (AP) — The Stockholm newspaper Morgentidningen said today that civil war was reported to have broken out in Vienna.

"Native workers, together with foreign workers and deserters, have started action and fights are taking place both in central Vienna and in the outer fortifications on which the Russians are advancing," said the dispatch, as reported to the Office of War Information. Barricades are being hurriedly built by the Germans in the city's streets, it added.

Many Cities Menaced.

Important cities fell; others were falling; others were imminently menaced.

The U.S. 9th Army moved to within five miles of the Weser River, next to the last stream on the high road to Berlin. Three-fourths of the waist of Germany had been severed by the 3rd Army drive to within 75 miles of the big Saxony City of Leipzig.

Important cities taken included: Muenster, capital of Westphalia, now a burned-out old Cathedral town. The communications centre of 143,748 fell to the U.S. 17th Airborne Division and the British 6th Guards tank brigade.

Osnabrueck, a communications centre of 100,000 some sixty miles southwest of Bremen, toppled to the British 11th armored division which drove eight miles north of the city.

Aschaffenburg (32,000- and Fulda (27,000, Roman Catholic centre, fell to the U.S. 7th and 9th Armies.

Allied troops stormed into Wuerzburg (106,617) Heilbronn (60,000), Hamm (50,000), Kassel, (217,085), Gotha (48,000) and the Dutch city of Hengelo (40,000).

Bielfeld, Eisemach and all the great industrial cities of the Ruhr were by-passed and marked for conqest in detail at the decision of Gen. Eisenhower's nine armies.

6,747 Planes Cleared From Goose Bay Airport in Last 6 Months of 1944

By JACK BRAYLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Goose Bay, Labrador, April 4 (CP) — A bomber flying upside down and a ferry pilot dangling head first and plunging to almost certain death are part of the drama of the spindly control tower at this big R.C.A.F. base.

Chief customers at the base are the R.A.F. and the U.S.A.A.F. Transport Commands and in the last six months of last year, 6,747 planes cleared the broad 8,000-feet runways. Some nights more than 200 bombers are cleared for eventual action in the European war theatre. Daylight departures can be handled at a much higher rate.

On a recent night this reporter watched a crew of young Canadians headed by PO. Jack Frith, of Toronto, coolly direct nearly 100 bombers into the air at three-minute intervals.

They were United States army planes—mostly Liberators.

They were green crews in the sense they had completed their instruction but now were on their first operation.

Just Off Training Lines.

They had come off training lines just as their aircraft had come off assembly lines. By this mingling of aircrew and aircraft production Uncle Sam is at the same time solving a ferry problem and giving his combat crews some valuable experience.

But this drama of controlled air power taking off for the fighting front is not always without serious incident. Sqdn. Ldr. Bill O'Reilly, peacetime CBC announcer, and now control chief at Goose can tell some exciting stories.

There was the bomber with dead instruments that was flying thru soupy weather, its young American pilot sending out distress signals. O'Reilly put the base's radar equipment to work and told the pilot he

33,000 Starving Russians Use First Hours of Liberty in Hunt for Food

By WES GALLAGHER

Tuetoburger Wald, Germany, April 4 — (AP) — Freed from one of Germany's largest prisoner-of-war camps by an American armored column, some 33,000 starving Russians used their first hours of liberty in wild hunt for food.

While hardened Americans looked in horror at conditions that brought death to an estimated 30,000 other Russians during the last three years, the emaciated survivors rushed to almost empty storehouses, crammed their mouths with raw flour, scraped food bits off the floors and dug with bony hands for potatoes in nearby fields.

"These men must have rich food for a long time if they are to live," commented a Russian doctor who had been held at the camp for more than three years.

When one of the German guards was asked if he would be content to be kept prisoner under the same conditions the Germans kept these Russians, he almost turned white with fright and refused to answer.

The camp, on the outskirts of Tuetoburger Wald (forest), south of Bielefeld was liberated by the 82nd Reconnaissance Group of the 2nd Armored Division under command of Lt.-Col. Wheeler H. Merriam, Framingham, Mass.

"There were some guards in towers around the camp who were afraid to come down until we had quieted most of the prisoners," said Lieut. Charles Fink, New York.

What cigarets and food that could be spared were given the prisoners by the reconnaissance group. Yesterday more permanent arrangements were being made by the 30th Division which had come upon some of the starved Russians pillaging farms nearby.

The doctors said they had records showing that more than 30,000 Russians died during that time from typhus and starvation or were shot to death trying to escape.

One non-commissioned German officer, offering an excuse for the conditions, said: "There were too many Russians."

MUSKRAT SEASON CLOSES THURSDAY

Although the current muskrat season has been one of the leanest in many years, according to district trappers' reports, the season for taking these fur-bearing animals terminates in this area on Thursday, April 5th., Game Warden Fred MacDonald reminded today. The early break-up of ice in rivers, streams and even along the marshes of the bays and lakes in this district is the attributed factor in the fact there were fewer muskrats trapped this spring than in many years past.

James Melton Will Head Artists To Be Heard

A truly "superb" program is promised Belleville's Community Concert members in next season's concert series, when the artists will be presented at the Collegiate Auditorium and will star such artists as James Melton leading tenor of the Metropolitan Opera; Zadel Skolovsky, pianist; Jean Watson, contralto; and the Bee Hive Quartette of Gertrude Bary, pianist; Mara Schoen, violinist; Lorna Wren, flutist, and Virginia Wren, harpist.

James Melton is the popular tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Association, concert, stage, screen and radio, whose popularity as well as his voice is known to audiences all over the world. He has also epitomized music in this country for since he scored his first success, for he has a charming personality, unaffected, beauty of voice and livelihood for long years as a singer, and his combination of talents and personal qualities which he has endeared himself wherever and whenever he appears.

A new pianist of high promise has appeared on the American concert stage this year in Zadel Skolovsky. His recitals in the past have received high praise from the people and watched with interest. According to those who have heard her she should soon take his place among top ranking pianists.

Jean Watson, Canadian contralto, presents the rarest phenomenon in the music world, a voice combining fullness beauty and a silm figure with personality and charm to complete the voice. Honors are easily won by Jean Watson, known for voice quality, tone with production and musicianship flawless.

Extraordinary, as a musical unit and unique in performance is The Bee Hive Quartette, composed of two flute, violin and 'cello. This group adds a wide variety to concert and musical ensemble offering programs of the finest musical music combined with solo members.

Death Accident Verdict of Jury

A verdict of accidental death with no blame attached to any or the principals involved was returned by a coroner's jury at an adjourned inquest held at the police headquarters Tuesday evening into the death of three-year-old Marguerite Boyd, who died on Archie Boyd, 286 Albert Street, who was killed March 19th.

The Boyd lad was crushed to death beneath the wheels of a George Clough coal truck when he was knocked off his tricycle as the truck backed into the Boyd home way to unload coal. The preliminary inquest was held at the Belleville hospital and after identification of the body adjourned until last evening.

Besides James Reich, driver of the truck, Constable Jack Lewis, helper, only four witnesses were called by the jury, Dorothy Thorn, Charles Reid, city engineer, who drew plans for the sidewalk and Mrs. Ethel Peacock, police photographer. Inspector Clare Hayes and Sergeant Detective Foster investigating officers.

In his evidence Reich indicated that as he had stopped on the street in front of the Boyd residence four or five children had been observed playing on the boulevard while Constable Lewis was directing. He had moved the truck approximately 10 feet down the sidewalk and as his helper had gone up to open a gate at the rear of the driveway had backed his truck over the sidewalk.

As the rear dual wheels passed the sidewalk Reich stated he heard a crunching noise As if he truck had backed into snow. He immediately stopped and was informed by his helper, who came running back that he had run over a child.

Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson was in charge of the inquest with Bruce Fraver resting in Victoria Hospital, London, Ont., after his trying experience.

Did Nai Want to Trade.

The speaker showed that no one wanted to trade with Germany therefore that country was unable to pay. Britain's investments and Britain also was unable to pay the United States. "This time we must see that the peace is lasting terms and "rehabilitate states to forever stop wars," he said. "It is the hope of world economy." The last peace worked against business and trade, he said, and the country was driven into the arms of militarism by fear and the spread of fascism. Preparations and plenty of good. From which came nearly four years of death." He said miserable portions of bad and built into a disastrous war, making necessary the rebuilding done to stop the growth of Nazism. "What must we do in the post-war world? We must rehabilitate the veterans, we must carry out reconstruction through public works and we must have world security.

Introduced by Dr. Hill Manning, the speaker's subject was "Social Security." Dr. Hill Manning said the club was indebted to the Ladies' Auxiliary for the excellent effort on their tag day on April series. A cheque was presented by a representative of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Wing Cmdrs. Carling-Kelly And Stephenson Liberated From German Prison Camps

Both Officers Served at Trenton Air Station and Well Known in This City

London, April 4 — (CP) — Wing Cmdr. F. G. Carling-Kelly of 96 Chatsworth Dr., Toronto, and Wing Cmdr. J. G. Stephenson of Windsor, Ont., served together with the RCAF in Canada and flew across the Atlantic together.

They separated when they went on operations in Europe, but both have been released from German prison camps and they told in interview of appalling conditions in prison camps.

The Germans "are terribly afraid of the Russians and perhaps with reason" at Allied air raids," both Carling-Kelly and Stephenson said.

Captured by Civilians

Carling-Kelly, in a day-by-day diary, said the Americans arrived in Moosburg March 28 and "I didn't know whether to cry or shout that was just about the happiest moment of my life."

Stephenson said he was attached briefly after 3 German guards told him: "Your troops are here."

"I looked out on the street and saw two O.J.'s and a Sherman and correspondents walking toward me. They looked exactly like G-eats."

He said miserable portions of bad food, including acorn coffee, and many of them would have been in a bad way but for Red Cross food parcels. No clothing was provided and there were days at a time when there was no running facilities.

Just before his liberation, Carling-Kelly added, the prisoners were aroused early and forced to march all day because Allied troops had reached Moosburg at night the march continued at 9 a.m.

Unfit to Travel

Then seven men, including Carling-Kelly were declared unfit to travel by a German medical officer and left behind when the others were ordered marching off. During the war for the Germans Wing Cmdr. Carling-Kelly was awarded the D.F.C. and bar and Wing Cmdr. Stephenson the D.F.C.

Stephenson's plane was shot up by a German fighter on his second operation. The crew baled out, but Stephenson, who was wounded, had to do his parachute pot tangled on the inside of the hatch, leaving him dangling for two miles and then banging against the fuselage. An explosion ripped the plane in mid-air, freeing him. He injured his leg in landing and was captured and taken to hospital.

The hospital staff was evacuated

Spring Festival's Grand Opening At St. Michael's Academy Draws Large Crowds by Variety of Appeal

A very enthusiastic crowd of men, women and children packed the auditorium of St. Michael's Academy on Tuesday evening for the opening night of the St. Michael's Spring Festival. The festival, an annual event of St. Michael's, provides a fine evening of entertainment for both old and young.

A delightful program, prepared and arranged by the Catholic Women's League, was served from four-thirty to seven o'clock. Between hours, a steady stream of people came and went, enjoying the delicious supper served by members of the league.

Following the supper, a stage program was presented at eight-thirty o'clock. Mr. Allen Meagher, as master of ceremonies, introduced the guest artiste of the evening. He expressed his thanks to all the performers for their contributions to the success of the concert, not only on Tuesday but for the two nights to come.

The program began with two fine numbers by the St. Michael's Band, under the direction of Bernard Jones, and favored their listeners with a number of specialties. There were Diane Rose in Billy Rose's song "The Wedding of Jack and Jill"; Marie Hash and Barbara Rose were doing "The Highland Fling" to music played on the bagpipes; Paul Russell in an "Eccentric Dance"; and Dennis and Maurice Smith in a tap dance number.

Pupils of Barbara Donovan were also represented on the program. Shirley and Jean Astley in a tap dance made a very pleasing appearance. Marlene and Joan Donovan, all dressed in navy skirts and white and blue soldier outfits, tapped out a very pleasing number. Anita Dulmage also gave a tap number, this being her first appearance in public although she has contributed to the program by little Marie Hash. Miss Donovan and Belleville's very popular songstress rendered two vocal numbers accompanied by Bill Navin at the piano. Miss Donovan's first was called "The Boogie Man" was given by Peggy Grant, assisted at the piano by Mrs. Bill Navin. Miss Helen Grant then gave a Xylophone solo.

The R.C.I. quartet of Bill Bancher, Gordon Cole, Bill Navin and Sylvester Kavanaugh, with their vocal music were very well up with their audience. An excellent tap number was given by a favorite of long standing, Jimmy Cahill in the person of Ronnie Donovan. Impersonations of the Irish comedian Gracie Newton from Mrs. Bancher and Mrs. Cole and Mrs. Navin completed the program of the night's entertainment.

Tonight the "Festival" continues with a new and different stage show and supper which will be served again at four-thirty o'clock. There will also be a chance for old and young dancing to provide a fun-packed evening for everyone.

J.O. Herity Addresses Holloway St. Y.P.U.

Members of Holloway St. Y.P.U. were privileged on Monday evening to hear J. O. Herity, who told the many interesting incidents of his trip to United States and Mexico, from Montreal, Canada on a Rotary International Committee on which he represented Canada on a few months ago.

In his very humorous manner, Mr. Herity gave an historical account of the history of the activities while there, and showed many pictures and souvenirs. Mr. Herity was introduced by Ray Cronkwright in a fitting tribute to the contribution he has made to the life of the city, the province, and the Dominion.

The meeting was a very social affective and was centred around the Easter theme. Leona Morton read the Easter story and Lois Hicks led in prayer, and Ray Gunsolus led in song.

Thank You!

We wish to extend our very sincere thanks and appreciation to everyone contributing to the success of our recent Rock Show at the Capitol Theatre. The fine sum of approximately $2,000 for Belleville Boys Overseas and Milk to Undernourished Children in Britain was materially assisted through the generosity of our many friends.

Sky Skewered with Wreckage.

Last summer the tower crew were talking with a veteran R.A.F. transport pilot—"Tex" Roberts of Dallas, who was testing his Mosquito above before taking off for Britain.

Suddenly his engines stopped and there was an explosion. Pieces of the plane showered out of the sky and buried themselves in the sand near the runways. In the largest section Jack Brown, an English engineer, fell to his death.

Behind the debris came "Tex" Roberts dangling upside down at the end of a tangled chute. The explosion caused him to lose consciousness and he dropped 7,000 feet before reviving. He got clear of the debris and pulled his ripcord. The chute failed to open so Roberts clawed at the shrouds until his nails were broken and his hands bleeding.

Finally in a last desperate bid he managed to release the chute but the shrouds were so badly tangled they caught in a leg and suspended him downwards. He was headed for almost certain death when he came in sight of the base staff.

Lieut. Willis Canuteson of Minneapolis, ran forward and by making a sort of football flying tackle, swung Tex so he landed on his side. "Tex" came back on the ferry route as good as new.

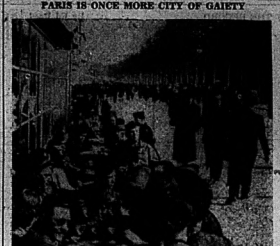
Station Personnel Inaugurate Sales, Advertising Club

A keen interest in rehabilitation problems of the post-war era insofar as they affect men of their own calling and those desirous of taking up their work as a life vocation has prompted several young men of the Trenton Air Station personnel to inaugurate and organization known as the R.C.A.F. Sales and Advertising Club.

Sanctioned by R.C.A.F. headquarters at Ottawa, and with the wholehearted approval of the station commanding officer Group Captain A. D. Bell-Irving, the newly formed club has adopted as its aims and objects, assistance for repatriated and ex-service R.C.A.F. personnel who have decided to turn to the sales and advertising field for their life work.

These aims and objects have received the approval and co-operation of the Dominion Association of Commercial Travellers and well-known publications which are closely allied to sales and advertising.

Co-operation of business and industry of the city and province will be sought by the club executive through the media of well-known advertising firm speakers, and representation at weekly meetings proposed to be held by the club. In the near future the general public who are interested in the movement will be accorded an invitation to the club gatherings.



While organization is still in the tentative stage, a permanent slate of officers will be elected in the immediate future.

Mr. Walter Kiehn, of the J. J. Gibbons Sales and Advertising firm of Toronto, will address the club at its inaugural meeting on Wednesday night, at Astra Theatre, Trenton Air Station.

The club and its activities are creating much widespread interest at the air station.

Notes From St. Petersburg, Florida

By NELLIE ARTHUR

One thing about St. Petersburg which is attractive to strangers is the waterfront. From the municipal airport at the south end to Snell Island on the north, there is always something interesting to see as you drive north on Shore Drive. There is saved with just the breakwater with green benches here and there for the use of pedestrians and a row of high smooth-trunked palm trees, three in a bed, paved drive-way then a row of Australian pines with wide spreading crunches on the edge of the many parks which extend back to First Street. The airport extends out into Tampa bay and at its outer edge a new runway has been added this winter out of sand dredged and sucked up through long pipes from the bottom of the bay.

Next to the airport is Waterfront Park in the centre of which is a number of wide spreading rubber or banyan trees under the shade of one someone is filling a jug to carry away. The water is very healthgiving. It cures sinus affections, rheumatism and arthritis and purifies the blood. It is truly a Fountain of Youth.

It Wasn't Baseball!

Next to the Waterfront Park is the baseball grounds. Here amateur games are played now though formerly one of the great league teams always practised here every March. I saw a game played here last Saturday between the Kids and the Cubs, teams of the 3-4 Century Club. The grandstand was well filled with spectators and the seats and bleachers at either side. The waters of the bay sparkled and, although the sun shone down hot out of a clear sky, yet the cool breeze made a delightful freshness. The announcer told each man's name and age and also as he stepped to the bat. If he were from New York, all the New Yorkers on the band stand clapped, and so on with the other states. The players were white summer suits; the Kubs wore red caps and the Kids blue. Each man was either 70, 76, or 77 years old. Some could run very well but a couple of the ones confided that more than a little trot from base to base. One batter hit a ball, but with a goatee who was a doctor, was a fine runner but he couldn't stop at the base but slowed up, several yards beyond it. The old man out in the field couldn't hold the ball when they caught it; it slipped through their fingers. There were a great many runs, all of which made the game interesting, but as Mr. Hunter of Toronto said afterwards: "It was a lot of fun, but it wasn't baseball."

North beyond the baseball field are the shuffleboard Courts of the Sunshine Club then the Yacht basin on the bay side and another park with benches on the city side of Shore Drive. Tied up at the various small docks or slips there are at present only a few small yachts belonging to St. Petersburg people but formerly many rich and beautiful yachts would be here for the season. Here also are the fishing boats and now only a few small sight-seeing boats. Along the northern side of the Yacht basin is the broad causeway" leading out to the pier. To the left as you drive out to the pier, you pass the museum, the tennis grounds, the children's play ground, the Solarium, where people take sun bathing for health, the indoor bathing pool called the Spa, and the wide bathing beach of white sand.

Lovely Scenery.

Passing over the highway leading out to the pier and driving still north, you pass another park called the Vinoy Park which is very beautiful with flower beds and shrubs of bright foliage and then you pass the big Vinoy Hotel. As you drive on up the north shore you pass many large residences of the wealthy, many of them painted a dazzling white and surrounded by bright red and green shrubbery. Then you drive about the winding shores of the Coffee Pot Bayou so called because of its irregular shape and pass over the short bridge to Snell Island.

Snell Island is named after Perry Snell who in boom days owned this island and laid it out in paved streets and sidewalks and residential lots. He brought over many beautiful statues from Greece and set them up here and there at street corners and on wide boulevards. The depression came and he lost everything. The city took the statues back and these now adorn Vinoy Park and Mirror Lake Park. Since this time some rich homes have been built on the island at from a few every year but recently a very active boom has grown streets and pavements have been cleared and the jungle growth which had never been cleared have been built on. The finest homes, mostly bungalows in the Spanish style, belong to Billy de Beck, the creator of Barney Google fame and a home here also Harry Playford. Harry Playford came here as a poor young man. He was fortunate to marry the daughter of a County family, the makers of thread. In fact, it is said, he bought his wedding clothes. Recently he sold a large city building on a prominent corner for a large sum of money which he invested in the Alaskan Airways believing in the future of that part of the world since the building of the Alaska highway. Mrs. Perry Snell, in whose name is now most of the Snell property, recently sold a valuable building lot on Snell Island.

Most of the finest buildings on Central Avenue was built by Perry Snell years ago. It is made of white cement and is built at the top in three tiers, each smaller and above the other, like the different parts of a wedding cake. Each tower or tier is ornamented with carved pillars, nacles and scroll work. It is only one of the many buildings in St. Petersburg built in this ornamental style. Some are of yellow brick, some of pure white cement or stucco, some of yellow brick trimmed with white cement pillars. They are all so bright and untarnished by smoke of the self car that I love to sit on Central Avenue with a green bench and look up and down the street and up above at the palms and down on my lower and then gaze inland past the palm trees and the pines up the long avenues. Here now, the live oak have taken on their bright glistening green leaves and the oleander trees and bushes are bright with flowers. Trees are being weighted down with red clusters of the small rose shaped ones, and others being heavy with the white blooms.

On Tuesday evening March 27 the last meeting of the Canadian Club was held in the Tourist Centre. Those present from Belleville and district were, Mr. and Mrs. Dafoe of Madoc, Mr. and Mrs. Pinkston, Mrs. Fawn Fisher, Mrs. Edith Donaldson, Mrs. Annie Blackburn, Miss Nellie Arthur of Belleville, and Mrs. Peacock, formerly of Tweed, now of Toronto, and Mrs. George Weiler, formerly of Trenton, now of Essex.

Mr. and Mrs. Pinkston attended the picnic at the pier of the Half Century Club on Tuesday evening, March 27. They were present also at the banquet of the Lyric Society of St. Petersburg at the Detroit Hotel on Monday night, March 26. This society, of which Mr. Pinkston is a member sang the Crucifixion at the North Side Baptist Church on Thursday evening, March 29th.

For the past month Mr. P. Hayes and the Misses Hayes have enjoyed the visit to St. Petersburg of their brother Mr. John Hayes of Rochester, On Monday evening, March 26, and on Tuesday evening, March 27, he entertained his father and sisters to dinner at the beautiful Soreta Hotel facing the Yacht Basin Park. On Wednesday morning he left for Rochester.

Lake Trout is Not Landlocked Salmon

The angling season lies just ahead of us. One of our most popular fish that may be caught by trolling is the lake trout, or, as it sometimes is called, the great lake trout. Queries concerning its proper name and status are directed sometimes to the Royal Ontario Museum. The lake trout occurs in the Great Lakes and in thousands of lakes throughout Northern Ontario and other parts of Northern Canada. In some lakes it never grows larger than 14 or 15 inches in length; whereas in a number of large lakes, particularly in the Northwest Territories, it reaches a weight of 50 or 60 or even 70 pounds. It also varies in color from pale to dark green and sometimes almost to black. The flesh, too, varies from a pale cream to a deep orange pink. These wide variations have given rise to many common names; salmon trout and grey trout are two of the commonest, but local color variants have been called brown trout and red trout. The practice of calling them salmon and landlocked salmon appears to be growing. We are very much afraid that in some cases, at least, this is a deliberate attempt at deception. Atlantic salmon, native to our province only in Lake Ontario, have been extinct for many years. Landlocked salmon, however, have been introduced from outside the province into a few Ontario lakes and have led to the catching of a number of genuine landlocked salmon. The fact remains that if you catch a "salmon" in Ontario the odds are that it is a lake trout dignified by a locally bestowed name.

TAXATION AND PROSPERITY

"Heavy taxation and national impoverishment have a definite affinity. Low taxation on the other hand has helped create the unparalleled record of progress and high living standards found on this continent. When taxation lessens initiative it must decrease the national chance of building a sound economic security.

"War has, of necessity, brought taxation to a point that would have been intolerable in times of peace. Its destructive forces in times of war are offset by the people's willingness to pay any price for victory. The situation will entirely change with the passing of that anxiety, and public antagonism to a heavy tax load will increase. When war ceases, the tax structure, as a result, must be revamped.

Both Enemy Nations Weakening

Every form of Nazi military power is being ceaselessly pounded by the United Nations. Hitler's armies which have been the main source of his strength have been for a long time since suffering under steadily growing casualties in killed, wounded and large numbers of prisoners taken, are at this time fighting in what promises to be the last phase of the Second World War in Europe.

But on Tuesday the Allied blows fell on Germany and Japan as Kiel naval base shivered under the terrific pounding by about 750 American heavy bombers. It may be mentioned in connection with this raid that the United States Army Air Force spokesman recently referred to the result of reconnaissance flights which showed that there were many naval craft berthed in the great harbor at Kiel. A London story said that "it has been speculated here that the desperate Germans might attempt to launch V-bombs against England from U-boats to replace their North Holland sites."

The Luftwaffe has been mastered long since and while German planes appear at times, news of them is very rare. On the Allied side the air offensive smashed through all records early March with Berlin receiving a hammering and this and strategic points and other targets being forced to undergo what seemed like endless pounding.

Just as Germany is showing the steadily growing effects of attrition so is Japan being forced to endure the tearing away of important island bases after island base from the which the Nipponese gathered in the early days of the struggle. The cords are being tightened around the Jap mainland and the strangling process proceeds with grim certainty.

This is another proof of the power that is being used now against the faltering and failing aggressor nations. The Allies in spite of the tenacious tasks they have undertaken in connection with bringing the German menace to defeat and destruction, have also been able to halt Japanese expansion of her tyranny in the Pacific after the joint attack on Pearl Harbor when Japan has long since been forced to defend islands after islands and mainland territory as in Burma only to lose them. So Japan has been sinking as Germany has been sinking.

When Germany is finished, the Allies will throw the might they have been using in Europe against the Japanese to strengthen the forces on land and sea and in the air that will whip the Nipponese back to their island home.

Japan has been forced to face an offensive which has been redeeming territory after territory.

The victory that is drawing near in Europe assures the coming intensification of effort when all power is to be used to crush the Japanese tyranny in the Pacific theatre.

Toward Berlin relentlessly move the Allied armies as from island to island with the same methodical movement, the island-hopping operations are carrying the war closer and closer to Tokyo.

The March Record

March record in 1945 is now sealed and by many it will be recalled when other years' March records are being considered, not so benign as that which reigned last month. One day the temperature reached 73.3 degrees, a temperature which resembled that of a summer's day.

March did upset the regular weather's course. Rain was far more plentiful than in other years. Actually last month there was a greater depth of rain than there was of snow. Had all March's rain been snow there would have been over thirty inches of snow but had instead three inches of rain and .16 inches of snow, the latter being surely the lowest fall of snow in March within memory.

On Saturday last, the last day of March, the best nature could do in trying to offset the landlubber activity of March was a heavy downpour of rain, to be exact 1.37 inches, which in ordinary snow would have been 13.7 inches. If one adds to that the rain on Monday which fell to a depth of .8 inches, the total depth of the rain's equivalent in snow for these two days would have amounted to the deep blanket of 21.7 inches which would have meant heavy work in the clearance of roadways and sidewalks.

April has already set her usual mark upon the weather by spring rainfall, which was welcomed because in spite of the moisture from the deep banks of snow, the soil was ready for more.

Whatever April still holds in its lap remains to be seen. Trees and bushes have gained a start of weeks in budding and in leafing.

Royal Navy Vs. Autobahnen

The news that Allied navies helped to transport assault troops across the Rhine provides yet another striking example of how closely linked sea and land power are in this kind of fighting. Not only are the tactics of the one inseparable from those of the other, but also the strategy.

In this connection it is interesting to note one theory which the British naval blockade, begun as far back as September, 1939 long before the expression 'Combined Ops' became a household word, is having on the present military drive through the Reich. At the beginning of the war Hitler relied very largely on his new road network —the system of Autobahnen—to carry the heavy traffic of supplies and ammunition, which the prosecution of that so many would-be masters of Europe have made-he reckoned without British sea power.

"The British naval blockade cut off four-fifths of Germany's petrol supplies. There was not enough petrol to supply the trucks which were to use the new network. The load was thrown back on the railways—railways whose construction had been neglected in favor of the new roads and whose locomotives and factories were being mercilessly destroyed by the R.A.F. They were unable to meet the strain, and the German war machine, now considerably slowed up in consequence—a direct result of the naval blockade.

Now, with the Allied armies pouring into western Germany, Hitler must bitterly regret a decision of nearly twelve years ago to divert sixty thousand men, many of them from work on the railways to build vast motor highways like that linking Frankfort and Cologne. The wheel would have come full circle—the roads which were to have speeded Nazi victory have become the highways of the Allied advance to Berlin. Even if they are destroyed in the German retreat they can easily be repaired and restored to full use. The Allies are not short of petrol and there is no way in which the Germans can render them so—for it is the Allied navies—American navies who hold complete command of the supply lines of the sea.

War Costs Pass Trillion Dollars

(New York Times)

The aggregate cost of the war for all belligerents has already passed the trillion-dollar mark. Currently, war costs are increasing at the rate of about $300,000,000,000 annually. The United States has accounted for about one-fourth of Great Britain for about one-tenth of the over-all total. Data for other countries are less accurate. But one estimate for Russia is about $100,000,000,000, while the Axis Powers are estimated to have spent about $300,000,000,000. The balance is accounted for by China. To these direct costs must be added billions of dollars of indirect costs represented by property destruction, scorched earth, broken careers and broken lives. It is difficult to estimate such indirect costs, but in the First World War they were equivalent to about three-fourths of the direct costs incurred. It is clear, therefore, that the total costs of this war will be substantially in excess of the trillion-dollar mark before hostilities cease and reconstruction is completed.

By BRIAN PYLE

In the Western Pacific (delayed) —When our planes come back from strike, they circle around the ship until they get the signal to land.

Then they peel off, out of formation one at a time into what is called the "landing circle." They try to space it so that one plane will be landed and clear of the deck every half of the trillion-dollar mark before hostilities cease and reconstruction is completed.

He is a flier himself. But his is no part-time job that is traded around among the pilots. He has been especially trained, and that is his duty.

The LSO stands on a platform just off the starboard side. On him is a large square of canvas, to make a background for his signals. Underneath the platform is a heavy rope netting, to catch him if he should fall off.

He wears a yellow sweater and yellow helmet, so the pilots coming into can easily spot him. And in each hand is a paddle about twice the size of a Ping Pong paddle. They are either yellow or bright orange. These are his signal paddles.

From the moment the LSO starts his signals, the incoming pilot never takes his eyes off of him. From that point on, the LSO actually flies the plane by remote control, and the pilot is only a robot who does what the LSO tells him to do.

By sign language, the LSO tells the pilot to fly too high or too low, too fast or too slow, that his tail hook isn't down, or a dozen different things.

The pilot corrects for these mistakes as he approaches. If his correction is perfect, the LSO gives him the "cut" sign just before he reaches the flight deck.

Instantly he takes his eyes off the LSO and gets more height for flying his own planes. Only half a dozen seconds or so left. He has to set fast, and get that plane down.

But if the approach isn't quite right, then the LSO at the very last possible moment flashes the "wave off" signal, and the pilot "guns on the coal," raises the deck by a scant few feet and goes around for another try.

The LSO must decide at the last moment, actually in the fraction of a second, whether to let the pilot try it or not. I don't know of any situation that requires faster mind-making-up. You sure can't go in for "conference" with anybody on that deck.

The Landing Signal Officer on our ship is a fine man. His name is Lieutenant (j.g.) Newton Iverson, Jr. He is a lieutenant.

He graduated from a commercial high school in the University of Iowa in 1942, and was honorable mention for All-American in that year. He intends to be a lawyer.

He is a LSO and he is a flier himself; second, he must be a man of steady nerves and sound judgment and temper, and he must be a psychologist in a way, and know his fellows.

Bill Green is all three. Everybody likes him, and everybody has faith in him. It would be a sad bunch of pilots who had an incompetent LSO.

Bill knows the flying traits of each pilot so well that he can identify every one just by the movements of his plane, when he is still miles away from the ship.

He knows all our bindings. I saw one pilot "waved off" seven times one day before he got in. So I asked Bill about that record. He said it certainly was not. A few months ago he had to wave off a pilot 21 times before he finally got aboard. Which meant that one pilot was trying to land for almost two hours!

The Landing Signal Officer's job is a precarious one. Many a time Bill has had to climb, jump or even run.

The ship's photo lab has a marvelous picture of Bill actually being chased across the deck by a plane making a near-crash landing.

There is always an assistant LSO on every carrier, in training to take over a regular job himself. Bill's assistant is Ensign Hal Ferrier, of Ogden, Utah.

One day I got up my nerve and division after a brief discussion on rehabilitation matters and when Wilfrid Lacroix (Ind. — Quebec Montmorency) said he was opposed to the resolution, which he characterized as a fight for the Japanese theatre.

Prior to introduction of the resolution, Prime Minister King told the House the government had received an invitation from Russia that the San Francisco Conference scheduled for April, 25, might be postponed.

Replying to questions of Gordon Graydon, Conservative whip in the House Leader, Mr. King said it never was proposed that Canada have three votes on the Assembly of the proposed United Nations Security organization, where was a possibility that the Ukraine and White Russia would become members of the United Nations. He called attention to Premier Stalin's statement that the United States would not seek three votes on the Assembly.

Canada's Navy Record

Hertzberg (Ind. — Saskatoon) of the navy during the year ended March 31, 1945. Mackenzie said fighting ship strength had increased from 370 to 770, auxiliaries from 400 to 550 and personnel from 21,000 to 93,000. During the period the navy lost a belligerent, still several auxiliaries, a minesweeper and two torpedo boats.

A casualty figure for the year was not available, but Mr. Macdonald had the total for the five years which reached 2,341 on Feb. 28.

Canadian warships had definitely against 10 submarines and were credited with 24 probables in the year. A total of two dozen enemy ships with the loss of one of their own was the Canadian destroyer Athabaskan.

Besides this destroyer, the year's losses included the Margaree Valley-field, the corvettes Regina, Alberni, Shawinigan, Windflower, Arvida and the minesweeper Clayoquot.

Reference to Gas Masks

He warned that new U-boat tactics with Canadian coastal waters were possible. The government had designed a new breathing device for submariners to use in case of detection more easily. The U-boats also have developed higher speeds and they have been concentrating on attacks in coastal waters.

"Under tactics of this kind there is no reason to believe that Canadian waters will escape," he said from these underwater marauders," he said. "We must be ready. We shall have submarine attacks in Canadian waters on an increased scale."

Marauding ship losses in 1944 were only a third of those in the year 1943.

Mr. Macdonald also spoke of post-war plans for the navy. He said a figure of 16,000 men had been tentatively set as the post-war strength of the navy.

On presenting the appropriations resolution, Mr. Ilsley said the position in the Pacific was not entirely expectations while victory in Europe was "certain" and "reasonably near."

Following his presentation, leaders of three parties, including Mr. Graydon, M. J. Coldwell of the C. C. F. and Solon Low, Social Credit, gave Social Credit gave assurances that they supported the passage of the appropriations but reserved the right to criticize and seek explanations.

Rehabilitation

The debate paved the way for discussion of a variety of topics, but much of the talk centred on the government's proposals for the rehabilitation of service personnel. It was pointed out by Hon. Ian Mackenzie, speech of Garfield Case (PC—Grey Southeast), that Minister of Reconstruction McNaughton in a by-election last Feb. 5.

Mr. Case joined other opposition members in suggesting changes in the rehabilitation plans.

Mr. Ilsley gave no details of general estimate of expenditures in the year now starting on account of financial aid accounts, but based his remarks on the assumption that they will continue at about the same rate as in the last five months of the fiscal year which ended.

He disclosed that estimated war and mutual aid expenditures for the 1944-46 fiscal year ending March 31, 1946 were higher than his budgetary estimate of last summer and reached the sum of $4,000,000,000. Total governmental outlays for the year are estimated at $5,487,000,000.

Of this $2,000,000,000 was arrived at by taking five-twelfths of estimated last year's expenditures, since the government wants financial aid until Sept. 1 by which time it is hoped the war will be concluded in its essence.

Decrease in Forecasting Outlays

The prospects of an early victory in Europe and the uncertainties that lie ahead in land fighting against Japan were behind a whole flight of planes. You would swear every one was going to land right on top of you. Before it was over I decided that if I ever joined the Navy, I'd let them all land in the water.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

WHEN JOHNNY COMES MARCHING HOME

Members of Parent-Teacher associations please pay attention. Sing, or whatever you do, but principals, you may run out and play while I talk with the parents (teachers know about your favorite subjects, namely, the health of children and the education of children). Unfortunately the appointment is for Thursday, April 12, which is in some states or provinces, depends on the attendance record of schools. Some schools will be closed for the entire week. Therefore school boards, superintendents, principals and teachers even teachers (who hope to have a vacation) will have to juggle or argue pupils to come to school on Thursday if they have a many "colds" and not spoil the school's or school room's high attendance record.

Now this is vicious practice, of course. It contributes to the spread of several epidemic diseases which so commonly pass (and pass it around) in the earlier stage as "colds" such diseases, namely, as diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles, infantile paralysis and others which health officer nor practising physician will deny this.

But the practice's shortsighted from the standpoint of the superintendent's or principal's point of view, for the child who comes to school in spite of a "cold" (a child's cold" is likely to share his or her discomfort, if not all, with any children who happen to be within conversational range) or who is kept deceived by the hackneyed advice to cover coughs and sneezes, for polite conversation's sake, with a virtuous laden spray just as coughing or sneezing is likely to spread the international spray range is not so great, less than fifty feet. The contention is that, instead of one pupil being absent for a day or two or three days, several pupils will be absent for one or two or three days each. It piles up.

And you parents and teachers must be blamed for insisting that the school or schools in the district is the management of such ignorant people.

When Johnny comes marching home with a note from teacher or nurse explaining that he had better not attend school on account of running nose, coughs, sneezing, sniffing, or whatever you call it, don't relegate Johnny to the status of indisposition and keep him home. Johnny is not ignorant; by resenting it, but rather your just as much in charge of an alert teacher, nurse, physician, health officer or whatever you call the head of the Johnny's immunity plan, to encourage Johnny to attain health and attendance record.

If Johnny's indisposition proves trivial and he enjoys every minute of the freedom from school, that makes no difference, at all; you too should be glad your Johnny is privileged to attend such a well managed school.

WALLED LAKES

How are walled lakes formed?

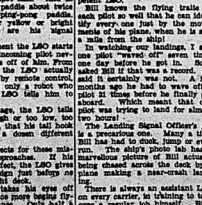
Walled lakes in the County, Iowa, is one of the best examples of what are usually called walled lakes.

Pioneers testified that originally this was a prairie land, with long and one mile wide, was surrounded with a wall composed of granite boulders piled upon one another in such a manner as to support a solid wall.

There is a local legend that the Indians, or perhaps the white men in the region, built the wall to prevent the cattle from straying.

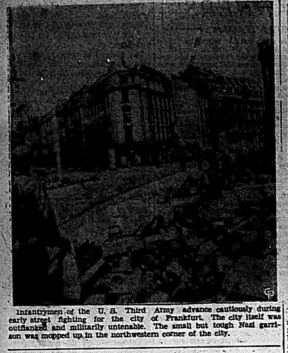
A similar story is told of Wall Lake in Wright County in the same state.

Most of the boulders once around these lakes have been hauled away by farmers for building purposes.



It is believed the walls around lakes of the type "ice ramparts."

Wall lakes, it is explained, are formed around shallow lakes by the accumulation of ice in the shallows.



Each time the lake freezes solid to the bottom the boulders and stones in the lake are crowded shoreward a fraction of an inch. Gradually, over the years ridges of ramparts are formed on the shore, because the lake is always larger at the ice is materially increased by the formation of fresh ice in cracks.

50 Years of the Comics Now Big Business With Big Money for Producers

It's fifty years since the first newspaper comics began to appear regularly. How they started and attained such a strong hold on the people of the North American continent is told by Fred Neidell in Esquire Magazine. His article is condensed as follows:

They used to be called funny papers; and they appeared only on Sunday—to be read by youngsters sprawled on the rug, or by adults who grumbled at "having" to read them aloud to children. Now they are called comics, though the name is a rank misnomer for most of them. And they are big business.

Four out of every five of the people who read newspapers, or almost 70,000,0000 citizens in all, shamelessly and regularly read the comics. The huge syndicates that handle them claim that, next to front-page news it's the comics that sell the papers. Sixty per cent of the income of the vast Hearst Empire is attributed to comics owned by Hearst's King Features Syndicate; and the NEA syndicate spends more on them than on all other editorial features combined.

The weight which comics swing in public affairs is shown by the fact that more than 200 books based in the Army in 1939—the first comic strip character to don a uniform—President Roosevelt personally thanked his creator, Milton Caniff, for helping put across the draft. A Sunday speech by Flip Corkin in Terry and the Pirates, the cartoon counterpart of real life hero Colonel Philip Cochrane, inspired newspaper editorials and was read into the Congressional Record. The U.S. Treasury commandeered the help of comics for the sale of war bonds; drives for the Red Cross for the U.S.O., for scrap collection have been boosted by them.

The comics influence people in strange and various ways. "Radio Hawkins' Day," a sort of annual leap-year-day, first celebrated in Li'l Abner's village of Dogpatch, has burgeoned into a national institution with hundreds of colleges, towns and Army posts taking part. Blondie has given the nation the mountainous and precarious Dagwood sandwich; Bringing Up Father has inspired Dinty Moore restaurants, specializing in corned beef and cabbage, in hamburger stands have been christened for Pop-Eye's ever hungry Wimpy.

American humor has been enriched by a long list of expressions born in the comics: hot dog, thanks for the buggy ride, baloney, banana oil, horsefeathers, hotsy totsy, sweet mamma, heeby jeebies, goon.

Polly and Her Pals—the first of the girl strips, and others like Winnie Winkle, Tillie the Toiler, and Dixie Dugan help set feminine styles by portraying the latest and smartest to every town and crossroads. The glamor-strip-of-the-future who decorates the Flash Gordon strip have popularized the up-swept hair-do, the bare midriff playsuit and wedgie.

Not so harmless is the occasional influence of the comics on the young. One boy had to have 16 stitches taken in his mouth after trying to bite off the top of a spinach can like Popeye. Another boy, trying to imitate a trytie by fly like Superman, Religious groups, lodges and other solemn folk have frowned on incidents like these and on juvenile crimes possibly inspired by the "murder, mayhem and arson" strips as evidence of the comics' menace. But child psychologists call the comics a "type of mental catharsis for" normal, well-adjusted children, filling a basic emotional need for adventure and escape from adults."

Adults are as likely as their offspring to take the strips ultra-seriously. When Blondie was expecting, Artist Chic Young offered $5 for a name; and along with 400,000 suggestions ("Cookie" won) came copius advice on how to rear summer babies. Dick Tracy, wounded, was showered with notes of sympathy, and also got an offer of blood for transfusion. When Little Orphan Annie got her dog a few years back, artist Harold Gray received this telegram: "Please do all you can to help Annie find Sandy. We are all interested. (Signed) Harold Ickes."

The rare deaths in the comics bring the most revealing personal response. When artist Milton Caniff killed off beautiful Raven Sherman of Terry and the Pirates, phone calls filled up newspaper switchboards, flowers were sent for the funeral and 40 students of Loyola University, Chicago, met together at dawn and faced east for a minute of silent mourning.

Many famous men have been comic fans. Wendell Willkie read them regularly. Justice Holmes thought Mill Cross was a genius and William Lyon Phelps often badgered the syndicate for advance proofs because he couldn't wait to see what happened next. When things looked dark for England in 1940, King George VI would relax with Otto Soglow's Little King.

The comics are just half a century old. On November 18, 1894, readers of the New York World opened their Sunday supplements to find a six-box series of colored funny pictures about a snake and a dog, which staff artist Richard F. Outcault had clairvoyantly entitled The Origin of the New Species. Borrowing the technique of putting talk in balloons from political cartoonist Opper, Outcault later fathered The Yellow Kid for Hearst. Parents and preachers protested violently against "the yellow peril of nalism," thus coining a phrase and initiating criticism which has continued ever since.

Meanwhile Rudolph Dirks created the Katzenjammer Kids for Hearst's New York Journal, and soon—after a famous legal case, still studied in law schools—transferred the Kids to the New York World, all but the title. Since the Katzies still revert for Hearst under artist H. H. Knerr and Dirks still draws The Captain and the Kids, Hans and Fritz, the oldest living comic-strip characters, are the only ones who lead a double life.

Popular since its birth 33 years ago, George McManus' Bringing Up Father is read in 300 papers in Irishman, Jiggs, has been published in 17 languages, with Jiggs' pet corned beef and cabbage becoming tripe and onions in Ensenada, rice in China, spaghetti in Italy, and hot dogs in Mexico City. Another ancient favorite, still going strong, is Bud Fisher's Mutt and Jeff. The first of the daily strips, it came to life in San Francisco Chronicle in 1907 as A. Mutt, and changed its name two years later, when Mutt ran across a saved-off runt in an insane asylum who introduced himself as James J. Jeffries, retired heavyweight world champion.

In early decades the comics really lived up to their name. In 1921 artist Percy Crosby started the trend of straight storytelling when he turned his daily strip Skippy from a funny strip into a pictorial life of Skippy Skinner. Two years later, Artist Orphan Annie—who never grows up—began her series of quite unfunny vicissitudes.

The humorless era, reached its peak—or, some would say, its nadir—with the sudden, spectacular success of Superman, in 1938. Although not the first of the fantastic strips (Buck Rogers was earlier) it became a top favorite almost overnight. Superman was responsible for the mushrooming growth of comic books and magazines. Specializing in out-of-this-world adventure, these now sell over 30,000,000 copies a month.

Before the war, foreign circulation of the comics was tremendous. Even today Blondie and Dagwood, as Pedia Y Lorenza, have readers in Buenos Aires than in any other city.

The comic-strip industry is built on a remarkably small foundation. A record like a syndicated feature lucky includes less than 250 titles and of these, many are but reruns stuffed with small circulations. The ten comics of largest circulation are the work of only 20 men. Of these, Blondie, Li'l Abner, Little Orphan Annie, Terry and the Pirates, Dick Tracy, Moon Mullins, Gasoline Alley, Bringing Up Father, Mutt and Jeff.

Top-flight comic artists rank financially with movie stars. Some of them make over $100,000 a year from their strips and add other thousands to their incomes from radio, film and other rights. Bisley and Caniff, of Terry, Gunnar has signed a five-year contract for $40,000 a year. Last year Hal Foster sketched in an automobile accident. The average successful comic strip artist makes from $400 to $600 a week.

Some similar are mass produced with perhaps half a dozen people involved—artists, continuity men or gag men, background artists, letterers. But in a good strip the ideas and most of the important drawings are the work of the man who signs it. The top exception is the longest time—particularly for a newspaper artist to retire. Caniff whose works have been hung in the Metropolitan Museum of Art and who is rated the finest draftsman in the game.

Left-wing intellectuals inveigh against comic strips as "distractions from the real problems of our times." Psychologists say people read comics "to feel superior" to gassy Jeff or henpecked Jiggs, or "to identify themselves" with Dick Tracy or Superman. Others call it a form of infantilism. But the 70,000,000 who read them don't care.

Island Becomes North Atlantic Defence Bastion

By C. E. A. JEFFERY
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

St. John's, Nfld., April 4 (CP) — With no representative administration to engage her action, Newfoundland's response to the war may be regarded as the natural response of a people determined to serve as a former generation had done in the First Great War.

North America's island bastion has contributed appreciably to the mass power, economic and industrial demands of the United Nations' war effort.

Enlistments for the Royal Navy up to December, 1944, total 3,343; the Royal Artillery, 2,343; Royal Air Force, 713. In addition to these volunteers for Britain's armed forces, it is estimated that more than 600 men have joined Canadian units and 534 women have joined the Canadian women's branches of the forces.

Thirty-five hundred men went overseas to join the Newfoundland Corps in the British Islands and of these considerable number transferred to active service units. Approximately 1,100 men are still in British Islands on active service. New foundlanders in the merchant marine number in the thousands, although actual figures for this branch of the service are unavailable. Ninety per-cent of the force recruited for home defence have volunteered for service overseas. Since the British War Office no longer requires Newfoundland for artillery units, negotiations are proceeding with Ottawa to enable members of artillery units to join Canadian active service units.

Considerable death toll on active service totalled 534 at the end of 1944 and 33 awards have been conferred on fighting Newfoundlanders who have fought in North Africa and France and now are seeing action along the Rhine.

North Arctic Gibraltar,

The strategic importance of the island as a defence base in the event of offensive operations against North America was quickly appreciated by Canada and the United States in the early stages of the present conflict when the U-boat menace developed and likely. Measures were taken by both countries and the United Kingdom with the full support of the Newfoundland Government Commission to convert the island into the Gibraltar of the North Atlantic.

Details of the measures still may not be divulged, but common knowledge are such developments as the leasing to the United States of bases at Fort Pepperrell in St. John's Argentia at Stapleeville, and Bay St. George where Harmon and Stephenville established; the establishment of Canadian army and naval posts here and elsewhere on the island; the construction of shipping facilities and the Canadian airport at Torbay; the extension of under Gander Lewfound, and a large base at Botwood, and the construction of airports including Canadian, Gander Bay, Labrador. Many of these installations have played an important part in the operations of the Atlantic Ferry Command.

The port of St. John's was transformed as a defense base and has been the rescue and repair for United Nations' shipping in North Atlantic. The population of St. John's doubled and the housing problem became acute.

To cope with the entertainment and accommodation of thousands of men in the armed forces and the merchant marine, hostels were constructed by military and service organizations. The Canadian Defence Force was recruited from the civilian population as a permanent peace measure in the event of enemy attack by air or by sea.

Newsmen Saved As Typhoon Rages

Baltimore — The near-tragic transfer of three war correspondents via an aircraft from a U.S. destroyer during a Pacific Ocean typhoon was related here by Nicholas Mangione, storekeeper third class, who was aboard the destroyer.

Mr. Mangione said photographer Phillip Heisler of The Associated Press, formerly assigned to Washington; Phillip Hamelin of The Baltimore Sun newspapers and a Chicago Tribune Movietone correspondent he did not name were dropped into the sea when a rope attached, then blown out from an air when the rope suddenly went slack. The incident occurred about three months ago.

"But it had been a little quicker, I suppose it could have broken their necks—or worse," Mr. Mangione said.

Mr. Mangione said the typhoon had been blowing for four days. Our destroyer nearly went under. A call came to the bridge that the roughest weather I saw during nineteen months overseas. You could hardly see the canvas. They go around your waist and under you. Then you're fastened to the line by a kind of pulley.

"Giant waves suddenly washed us close to the carrier, just as the three fellows were in mid-ocean. That sucked them up the rope between the two ships. All three men went down into the lake Pacific and stayed there until the rope became taut again when the waves separated the ships.

"It wasn't a long time—maybe ten minutes—but when they came up again they looked as though it had been a long time."

The Associated Press man was a kind of comedian. He had been joking when they got into the harness.

Mr. Heisler hung on tenaciously during the rest of the ride, but the other two acted as if they didn't care much whether they made it or not. And you couldn't blame them."

Mr. Mangione related that Mr. Heisler told him "he thought maybe they were all going to perish on that carrier he helped to beat. They lost many planes, and 790 were dead, 1,790 injured. Three fires broke out. Forty-five thousand pounds of men was what saved us.

"As the ship lurched over in the typhoon, they ran from one side to another to keep an even keel. Some of them did it all night that fourth day."

In a story dated January 13, Mr. Heisler related that he and Mr. Gorry joined 300 crewmen in singing Roman ballast on the hangar deck.

PIONEER OF ATLANTIC

Wexford, Eire (CP) — The keep of the historic packet steamer Sirius, one of the first to make the transatlantic crossing entirely under steam, has been located west of Carnsore Point where it has been buried in sand for 56 years. In 1838 she steamed into New York from London via Cork in 17 days.

Comely ATS Get Officers' Pats

London, April 4 (CP) — Novelist Pamela Frankau, senior commander of the Auxiliary Territorial Service which is the British equivalent of Canada's C.W.A.C., doesn't think servicemen give the women a fair deal.

She got so incensed about it that she wrote an open letter to the service newspaper Crusader.

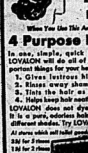
"I have become used to this type of speech from crusted generals," she said. "'Let's see now, what is the name of the group commander at ...?' I supply the name. 'That's right, terrible legs poor thing,' or 'That district officer of yours—you know, the one with the face like a horse.'

"And quite recently, 'Why on earth did you post her to us? She's the plainest young woman I've ever seen.'"

The senior commander said she has never yet heard any member of the A.T.S. complain that her employing officer has a bald head and queer teeth.

"We came into the service to back you up," she concluded. "I don't think we have done the job too badly. All we ask in return is that you should back us up."

HONOR SYSTEM SUCCEEDS



Brisbane, Australia (CP) —When the Queensland government established a prison farm some years ago it initiated an honor system—no cells, no locks, chains or bars. Since then 1400 men have passed through. Only four tried to escape, and less than 30 have been reconvicted. The system is to be extended.

Changing Styles In Beauty

Dusty Anderson wins shade for Maydaig.

By HELEN FOLLETT

IRENE CASTLE, a popular dancer of some years back, recovering from the illness that made her hair look sick and stringy, grabbed a pair of shears, cut it off. Within a few months of that impatient act on the part of all impulsive, beautiful women, the universal sisterhood started hair bobbing.

Marlene Dietrich took to daintering around Hollywood with her beautiful head bared. In shades and directly there came tidings that Mrs. Vernon Castle and husband had better hide their extra pants so the girls wouldn't steal them. How far the idea of mannish attire has been going, your good looks reporter need not tell you.

New Fashion Trends.

Seemingly has to start things. Stage and movie stars have a way of getting steps up to, launch a beauty or fashion trend. Irene Castle did as much for her as those brave martyrs who originally fought for suffrage. The woman who bore her proudly in the streets would give up the vote any day rather than revert to the pitiful appearance of a mop. Hair is made to wash and make pretty after the champoo, dismantling an elaborate coiffure every night and building it anew each day.

We thought, at first, that the pants-wearing frenzy was a passing phase. Most of us still believe that a pretty girl looks more attractive in sartorial trappings designed for her sex.

Short Hair Stayed.

But hair used to be a quaint, naive idea that women dressed to please the men. That notion went blooie when the bob arrived. Men hated it, especially the shingle. Didn't make any difference. Some husbands sneered and scoffed, others raved, but when asked the girls to have long hair again, the girls would put back their heads and keep growing. That was more than 30 years ago.

The spectacle that is Woman is ever changing, ever interesting. How dull life would be without fashion innovations that furnish the women with variety and endless topics of conversation.

The Marry Go Round

"Misunderstood" Lovers.

I have always thought that most of the famous lovers of song, story and history, may have been misunderstood.

Rhesaud may have been only a misunderstood husband, after all—one who was determined to have a frock closer to his wife's heart so he could claim more than one hook and find them at once.

And there was Abelard. Perhaps Heloise's brains were no constant to Heloise because he was too far away for her to ask him sometimes big words or questions. Maybe she has to be stretched over a long distance so as to see in the seam of the middle.

Samson may have deserved a better fate; but any wife who has had to tell her husband half a dozen times to get a hair-cut can sympathize with Delilah.

Lochinvar got to the wedding on time; but if he had lived in these days, he would probably still be telephoning from some road-house that he had run out of gas.

Priscilla was distinctly modern. She did not wait for "the right man to come along and propose". She spotted him and promptly rushed him off his feet.

Ah yes, all these famous lovers may have been terribly, terribly misunderstood! Even Henry VIII may only have had the Anchor's Aweigh plan—and you know what a bold that gets on people!

Tabloid Philosophy

A girl's manners don't bother to strike her when she's down. They merely step aside and look on placidly while her friends do it.

A man who wants to keep his superiority-complex should choose a wife as a woman chooses a wallpaper. He should pass up the showy patterns for something quiet, restful and non-assertive. Then will make him stand out in brilliant contrast.

In love, a man goat by contraries. Even when they are married, girls fall in love with him, it is always the fifth and indifferent one on whom he sets his heart.

Somehow, the girl a man marries is a different from the sort of girl he always dreamed of marrying as a young man. Even aside from a book of hymns, or a lace-paper valentine from a comely report.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Stick to your beauty schedule

Procrastination is not only the thief of time, but also steals youth, good looks and daintiness. Those women who are always going to do something some time or other, frequently never do anything. They do not properly organize their lives. Many a plumpie is trundling around with sexual adipose baggage just because she could never bring herself to make a reducing diet or force herself to take a little healthy exercise. She is a postponer by inclination; there are plenty of others like her selling in the same boat.

It is often enough to spot the woman who takes care of health and appearance. She looks as fresh as a bouquet of flowers just taken out of their tissue paper wrappings. She has vitality. She enjoys a sense of righteousness. She knows her beauty duties and she does them, willy-nilly, sick or shine. Her daily schedule is all arranged and from it there is no deviation. No lapses for her. She's ahead of old Father Time, and she'll be damned if she's ever going to let him catch up with her.

For her the daily bath is an institution. Nothing else does so much to make one dainty. To begin the day without it would be like stepping out on the wrong side of the bed.

Fortunate is the woman who can have her regular dates at the beautician, never miss them. Time between champoos should not exceed a fortnight; in two weeks, plenty of debris has accumulated in the form of dead skin scales on the scalp, atmospheric dust and sebaceous oil on the silky shafts. Hair that is neglected loses lustre, appears dingy, and scraggly. Let it go, and it does not smell at all nice! It offends the fastidious sense of the admiring partner, and he may dance away solo, never show up again. The girl with a mindful for her beauty looks duties has clean hair, beautifully arranged.

Over-spacing the permanent wave dates means that there will be ragtags and bob-tails of straight, stringy locks, which condition does not lend to glorify the ensemble that is You.

Those are when we had to remind the girls about getting new taps on the heels of their shoes. With scarcity of footwear, these matters are being looked after. It took a war to do it.

Never put clean stockings and underwear away until they are mended in a decent way. Have purses that worthy habit all their lives. No need of taking them to bed last minute. Gloves and scarves must be carefully folded before being put in dresser drawers. Such messes as we have seen in our time! Little items, including make-up, mean all shuffled together! Disgraceful!

Home Missions Subject of Talk By Dr. Stapleford

At the April meeting of the Jubilee Evening Auxiliary of the W.M.S. of Bridge Street U.C., Rev. Dr. Stapleford gave a very interesting and informative talk on Home Missions.

The speaker pointed out that the but narrow strip of population extending from Newfoundland to British Columbia, some 800 or so about one-third of all United Church charges are helped by Home Missions.

Speaking more specifically of Saskatchewan, Dr. Stapleford traced the settlement of that province from the United States. Little churches gradually became self-supporting. Then came the years of drought and many had to return to the Mission fund. Some 40,000 people pulled up stakes and went north to the Peace River district, where the church has followed them. Illustrative true cases of gratitude and sympathetically told by Dr. Stapleford made the situation real to his listeners e.g., the woman missionary who was told by a parishioner, "We used to be a quaint, naive idea that women dressed to please the men. That notion went blooie when the bob arrived. Men hated it, especially the shingle. Didn't make any difference. Some husbands sneered and scoffed, others raved, but when asked the girls to have long hair again, the girls would put back their heads and keep growing. That was more than 30 years ago.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Correct Acceptance Form

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I have just received from the mother of the girl who is to be my son's bride, an invitation to their daughter's wedding. She has mention afterward in a hotel. I have never met my son's fiancee nor any of her family, and I am completely at a loss as to how to answer the invitation. Will you please help me?

W. S.

I judge that the invitation is a formal one . . . is that right? Since you have invitations in the third person, your reply must also be written in the third person. Your reply, although written by hand, should be nearly as formal as follow the spacing of the words on the invitation. Write your answer on the first page of a folded sheet of note-paper of good quality. The writing should be in the centre of the page, with even margins on all sides. Address the envelope to the person or persons in whose name the invitation is issued.

This is a correct form for your acceptance:

Mr. and Mrs. William Smith have pleasure in accepting
Mr. and Mrs. John Clark's kind invitation for Tuesday, the tenth of April

You may send this reply, and it should be sent, to the bride's home. Then you may, and it would be more personal, write a little note in a separate envelope, a letter to the girl's mother telling her how happily you are looking forward to coming to the wedding, how delighted you are that your son is marrying such a lovely and fine girl, and that it would be natural for you to chat a bit about what your son has told you of the wedding plans. Tell something of your home and it would also, of course, be thoughtful and "neighborly" for you to write a fine and welcoming letter to your prospective son.

Flowers Are Always Welcome

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

A short time ago a few women belonging to an organization that works very closely with our large organization gave a dinner in our honor at the lady's restaurant in our city. This meant a good deal of expense and time for them, and some of our members felt that, in spite of many of their hospitality and friendliness, they would like to show courage for them to wear at the dinner. However, a discussion followed as to whether or not this would be proper. Will you please advise us as to what would have been proper?

J. D.

Indeed it would have been proper for your organization's small group as each of these kind and generous hostesses. There are few more charming gifts than a "mum" than by flowers. The message carried with flowers is clear. It is a perfect expression of appreciation, and your thoughtful gesture would have been delighted with this gracious gesture. Just be sure to be "restrained" about sending flowers!

WAS HIS FACE RED

Bristol, England (CP) — In the case of a man charged with drunkenness always carried distilled water in his bottle, the plaintiff "pled" that were gone when she came back to the car from shopping—and in their place was four fl. oz. (0.1 litre) notes and a message: "Thanks for the gin."

CHARRED BODY FOUND

Toronto, April 4 — (CP) — The charred body of Attilio Cascato, 60-year-old farm laborer, was found yesterday in the burned two-room shanty in which he lived near Keswick, eight miles east of here. Police said the shanty burned Monday night and there were no witnesses.

Fashion Flashes

TRANSFORMATION TRICKS are easily achieved with the aid of ribbon scarves. Asscot scarves, two of them, both of plaid taffeta, can be draped to form a belt with a double bustle effect in back. Or they can be arranged, under a suit coat, to form a blouse effect.

THE LAST WORD in style range and variety is represented in Easter Spring coats. Good for general wear is a handsome coat of black and white checked woolen with the trim fashioned in cape effect, black serjack cuffs and a broad black patent leather belt.

AN ENDLESS PROCESSION of button suits seems to be winding over the land this Spring. A neat little number is gray flannel has one red and one green lapel, just to be different. The skirt, tailored all the way down the front with self-covered buttons. A white pique blouse also buttons down the front.

IN KEEPING with the romantic in fashions, there's a lovely print of long-stemmed red roses and black-lettered love poems. So saw it made up into a simple, smart afternoon frock with cap sleeves, deep surplice closing and intricate side-skirt drapery held by a red rose.

THE TREND is in the direction of something soft for fine leather bags, rather than the less tradition frame and handle types. Something new is fine alligator worked into the swirling design. Colors to get their sectioned: each section piped with plastic rings.

CONDEMNS GOVT. POLICY

Toronto, April 4 — (CP) — Mayor Robert H. Saunders, yesterday condemned the Dominion government's policy in "giving away" the remaining of a building here for use of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation "at a time when we can't get sufficient labor and materials to complete Sunnybrook Hospital and provide homes for servicemen."

The meeting was closed with the statement of the members' purpose and the benediction.

Shortage of Box Cars Acute

Montreal, April 4 — (CP) — A shortage of box cars on Canadian railways which some sources say is causing a "crucial situation" in the movement of western Canada grain, will be considered today at a meeting here of the grain transportation committees.

Transport Controller Lockwood revealed yesterday that the "debit balance" of Canadian box cars in the United States stood at about 15,000. The American Association of Railways has issued instructions to eastern and southern lines, where the imbalance is concentration of Canadian cars, were, to return them empty to the Dominion.

Mr. Lockwood said that every effort was being made by his office and by Canadian railways to get Canadian cars back from the United States.

The move was being made in the face of signs expressed in the west that any hold-up on wheat transportation would cause a serious pile-up when transport facilities become fully taxed later in meeting requirements for the Pacific war.

Belleville Baseball League Organized with Five Teams; Jack McVeigh is President

Officers Elected With At Least Three Other Clubs Interested in Affiliation; May Join with O.B.A.

Baseball took a definite step towards revival in Belleville last night when five teams organized to form the Belleville Baseball League at the City Hall last evening. A sixth entry is in the making and practically assured.

Jack McVeigh, who has taken a paramount interest in the sporting activities of Belleville for many years, was the unanimous choice of the meeting for the position of president of the Belleville Baseball League for 1945. Other executive members of equal importance were also elected at an enthusiastic meeting of upwards of 30 present.

"I have always been keenly interested in baseball and welcome its revival in this city, where the game once flourished and brought distinction to the name of Belleville. I am glad to see such interest in the promotion of the game among the minors and with the co-operation of our executive here is no doubt but baseball will be a welcomed sport in Belleville," the newly-instated President McVeigh in his inaugural speech. It was at the suggestion of the President that Mr. C. Arthur Young, general manager of the Sherwin-Williams Co. Incorporation of Canada, was unanimously named Honorary President of the league.

Officers Elected

The officers elected were as follows:—

Hon. President—L. A. Young.
President—Jack McVeigh.
Vice Presidents—Rich. Goodfellow.
Sec.-Treas.—Ernie Summers.

Executive committee elected — Lorne McDougall, Cy Young, Dr. J. Empson, and Donald Lee. The executive committee will name three other interested citizens to act on the baseball executive committee, that will convene at the City Hall next Tuesday night to complete organization plans.

Teams to Enter

The five teams to participate last night included: Quinte Company (Red), Bridge Co. (Blue), Gordon Booth), Browns' Bread Juniors ("Tom" Reynolds), Cortez (L. G. (Gerald Barriage).

Lads-Carnel (Dr. Empson and C. Thompson). Also present were representatives from Trenton and Picton, while a Canadian Legion team from Deseronto is anticipated.

Club entrance fee to the league was set at $10 per club for affiliation to be paid at the next executive meeting. The league went on record as having each team equipped with uniform jerseys in order that the patrons can distinguish the teams, and players at first white sweaters were suggested as an accepted attire for this season.

Join the Leagues

The question of affiliating with the Ontario Baseball Association was brought up by Don Lee at which time Mr. "Tom" Reynolds, sponsor of the Browns Bread team, assured the meeting it was his intention to sponsor a Junior baseball team in the Belleville Baseball Association with the idea in mind to compete in the O.B.A. provincial baseball playdowns next fall. The matter of the remaining three affiliations with the provincial parent body was left until later in the season.

The delegates present also learned that the National Billiard room proprietors had donated a handsome silver trophy to be given to the league player enjoying the best batting average of the season. The matter of umpires and a league schedule will be discussed at the next league meeting. Vice Pres. Dick Goodfellow presided at a sub-committee meeting following the election of officers. All league games will be played at the new Alemite Field.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, April 4 — (AP)—Unanswered questions . . . What became of the "Napoleon" coach who supposedly was hired for the Brooklyn Tigers shortly after they finished the season without Pete Gauthen? . . . President Tom Gallery's curious reason for being interested in a merger with the Boston Yanks is: "We haven't a coach and they have a darn good one." . . . Was the football rules committee thinking about the over-hashing success of the "T" formation when it ruled out the elbow block? . . . A lot of coaches claim the success of quick-kicking Lou Little at Columbia is the "cloth block," which is just a polite name for momentary holding. . . . Is Bill Barker in the big leagues to stay? . . . Jim Crowley's hands and arms are close to the sides . . . and who said spring was here —with football busting into the news already?

San Francisco Seals have given Jack Knott the job of pilot and the visiting coast league ball clubs during the World Security Conference and will put up cots in the clubhouse so the players will have a place to sleep.

DETROIT WINGS TO MEET TORONTO FOR STANLEY CUP

Brilliant Four-Goal Performance by Carl Liscombe Helps Wings Defeat Boston 5-3

By STED APPLEGATE

Detroit, April 4 — (AP)—Detroit Red Wings, gaining the Stanley Cup finals for the second time since 1942 on a brilliant four-goal performance by veteran Carl Liscombe Tuesday night, meet Toronto Maple Leafs here Friday in the first best-of-five battle for the trophy.

Liscombe's feat, which knocked Boston Bruins out of the cup chase 5-3 before 15,506 fans, largest crowd ever to see a National Hockey League play-off in Detroit, overshadowed the speedy play of his teammates and some neat goal-tending by 19-year-old Harry Lumley.

In the cup finals, the Wings meet a team from which they won eight games in 10 contests during the season, losing one and tieing the other. Any tendency toward overconfidence, however, should be swept away by the fact that the Leafs eliminated, the champion Montreal Canadiens in their play-off series. Detroit beat the Canadiens only once in the entire season.

Lumley, a former member of Leafs and Wings in a Stanley Cup final series.

Seventh Game

Detroit eliminated Bruins last night in the seventh game of their best-of-seven series by turning back the attack launched by the Bill Cowley-Herb Cain-Bill Jennings line which had accounted for six of Boston's seven goals in the last two games. This line found the Detroit net only once when Cain scored on Cowley's pass in the second period. Although they were near outshooting the Bruins, the Wings entered the third period trailing 3-2, due to some good goal-tending by Boston's Paul Bibeault. From the start of the period the Wings were clicking, and Eddie Bruneteau set the stage for Liscombe's two clinchers by splitting Pat Egan and Jack Crawford on a fast solo for a counter goal after two minutes of play.

Sher Likes Lumley

Here's the story of Liscombe's goals:

Second period—Taking a rebound into an open corner while Bibeault was down after saving twice on Mud Bruneteau.

Third period — (No. 3) a 15-foot drive from right wing after Jack Carveth's shot caromed off the goal post. (No. 4) Cowley's pass was scored on a pass from Carveth, six seconds before the end after Boston had pulled Bibeault from the net for a power play.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

Toronto, April 4 (CP) — For Maurice Richard—as well as for the Montreal Canadiens—the 1944-45 hockey season is over. But despite the fact that the Habitant flash failed to lead the N.H.L. circuit, among the many records they set this year the Canadiens will be likely to remain in the record books for some time to come.

The sensational left-winger made the grade in the National Hockey League in 1942, and in his initial season something of a "first" in sports. Players come to the N.H.L. in diverse ways, but it is quite probable that Richard has the highest "in" for league has a young amateur team manager promised a major hockey league job. The manager was a player so "make good, and kept his promise. Perhaps it's two "firsts" when you consider the latter.

In November, 1936, Jacques Fontaine was owner and manager of the Club De Hockey, in Rosemount, in a small Montreal amateur league. Time went hard with the club, so Fontaine asked the president of the Canadiens to lend a helping hand.

He was so overjoyed when he received a cheque as a donation to help the club out, that he lost no time in thanking the officials of the Canadian circuit. It was then he learned that no later than 1942 one of his players would make the grade for the Canadiens and the star right.

Richard was on Fontaine's line-up when Rosemount Athletic Association played in the Mount Royal junior league in 1941-42 and long before that he was the young Fontaine that the team first signed as an amateur card. And it was his start in disciplined hockey.

Leading the role of the Canadiens camp up the hard way, though, Richard has had his share troubles the next season, he suffered a broken ankle playing for the Montreal Canadiens. That 1942 him shelved for the balance of the season.

The next season Richard hardly began when he fractured another ankle and was able to return to finish out the schedule with the senior Canadiens.

Next year he was given a chance with the pro club and was an instant success. Of course, he broken his leg once more. But first season and this have made up for his partial inactivity of the previous years and he has borne out the promise of Jacques Fontaine.

Training Camp Notes

New York, April 4 (AP)—The 1946 pennant hopes of Pittsburgh Pirates, who finished second in the National League this season, were jolted yesterday. Catcher Hank Vanalli was ordered up for induction April 13 while Elbie Fletcher, first baseman and southpaw Fred Cetermueller and also be called.

Vanalli, one of the few major leaguers to bat in more than 100 runs a year, was the only key report for three days in hospital for observation of a knee injury suffered in 11 games in 1944. After leaving Brooklyn, learned his previous report to the draft board in Washington. He may be called for induction at any time.

Other training camp items:

St. Louis Cardinals—Pitcher Jack Creel of Columbus, drew praise from Manager Billy Southworth. He has everything he needs to be winner in majors," Billy said.

St. Louis Browns—Jim Wilson, whose pinch-hitting proved valuable last year, got into first game and batted for Jack Kramer in fifth.

Chicago Cubs—Slugger Bill Nicholson, working at an indoor golf in Chesterton, Ind., said he would be ready when camp opens.

Washington Senators — Dutch Leonard and Early Haefner, both recovered, for first time since cut Norfolk Naval Air team.

The 1945 wrestling season here next week. Jack Corcoran writes he say he has under his wing today the best lot of matmen he has assembled to day on the continent. He refers to Larry Moquinn, the Montreal flash, and Buddy Rogers, the "Nature Boy" of the Nebraska family of wrestling wildcats. It is rumored tonight, "Moquinn has hurried across the pasiin' sky in dynamite fashion since being discharged from the Canadian Army only seven months ago. His training in the army as a commando proved just the proper atmosphere to bring out Moquinn's dynamo as a matman. I'm certain Belleville fans will go for this handsome ringgiant", Tuney writes.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 647
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Open your mind. Let me start pouring into it a story. You will not have to know what your partner holds and what your opponents hold. All without stretching your neck.

Keep this hand:

♠K 10
♥K J 4
♦9 6 2
♣A K 10 7 5

The bidding by your pair goes like this:

Partner	You
1 S	2 C
2 S	3 C
4 N	4 S

A once-bid suit shows at least four cards. But when a suit is bid twice, before bidding a second suit, it shows two cards longer.

Thus, by the time partner bids hearts, he says he has at least six spades and four hearts. In that case, he must have only three cards in diamonds and clubs. So, he must have three short cards in the minors.

When partner jumps to four hearts over your three clubs, he says he has seven tricks. Because it's game contract bidding and a trump suit is not yet decided. And your two bids showed four.

An opening one bid shows four high cards, with two sure tricks. His four high cards are four tricks. His three short cards are three tricks. So, you know what his seven tricks consist of.

To be bidding a four card suit contains two faces, YOU have king and jack of hearts. So, partner must have ace and queen in that suit. These are two of his four high cards.

To be rebiddable, a six card suit needs two honors. You have bled and ten of spades. Partner no doubt has ace and queen in that suit; his four high cards. Thus, he has no high cards in the minor suits.

One being tall and one being fat, and the tall one said, That's a cute baby for you, Mack.

Not for me, but it's a cute one all right, the fat one said. What is it, a boy or a girl? he said, and I said, I dont know, it's not mine, I'm just going to get an apple for mind-

Well that's a hot one, can you tie that, Mack? the tall one said. Only one apple for minding a baby. That's what we used to get when we were, kids and people had to work for practically nothing, he said, and the fat one said, I bet its some rich dame getting a kick out of exploiting an innocent kid.

It's a shame, it oughtn't to be stood for, the kid ought to hold out for 2 apples, the tall one said and the fat one said, He ought to hold out for three, somebody ought to tell the dame that times have changed and the employer class aint on top any more.

Which just then somebody said, Go on away and mind your own business, whose baby is it, whose apples are they?

Being the baby's mother and proving she had been standing there listening, and the fat man said, You win, lady, and the tall one said, We never argue with a lady even when we're right.

And they kept on going with their lunch boxes, the lady saying, Such nonsense, the idea, Here, here's 2 apples for you to prove I can change my own mind if I feel like it, she said.

Proving maybe times really have changed.

"Convoy to Murmansk"

Captain Fred S. Slocombe, M.B.E., Master Mariner and Examiner of Masters and Mates, in Toronto for the Marine Division of the Department of Transport, speaking to the Rotarian Club in Owen Sound recently and reported in the Sun-Times, told a story of the "Murmansk Convoy" which will undoubtedly be recognized in history as one of the epics of the sea in dealing with the heroism of the British seamen.

Capt. Slocombe was appointed Master of the icebreaker Montcalm, taking this vessel to Murmansk, in Northern Russia, as a gift from Canada.

"Today you are to hear something of the problems of those who are always on the receiving end when there is any fighting going on," said Capt. Slocombe in introducing his subject. "The merchant seamen are essentially a civilian in a civilian service. He is not a trained fighting man. No ship can put to sea without an agreement signed between the owners, represented by the Master, and the ship's company regarding hours of work, duties, wages, and such like things, this agreement being called the ship's articles. This agreement is good for just one voyage, out and home, and then the ship's company can demand to be paid off and another crew has to be obtained. Between voyages the seaman is a free agent. He cannot be forced to go to sea again although Selective Service may refuse him overseas leave to get another job. This is all very different to the man who enlists in the Army or the Navy."

The first thing Capt. Slocombe learned about going to Murmansk was in January 1942 when he received a telephone call from the Department in Ottawa. "My chief rang up the office and said — 'about this icebreaker for North Russia, will you take her there for us?'—and I left that night for Halifax."

The crew of the Montcalm was composed of twenty-six Canadians and twenty-six seamen of the United Kingdom, most of the United Kingdom men enlisted for passage home, having been torpedoed or something, but they were all volunteers for the trip.

The speaker told of trouble right from the start in getting the vessel ready for sea in time to catch the convoy in accordance with his orders, describing a fight between the first and second mates, adding "there was never a dull moment in the ship."

Green to Convoy Work.

"However, we caught the convoy and my troubles began. I was green to serving in war and sailing in convoys is much more trouble some than when you are on your own. Constant attention must be paid to keeping your position, and the ship of the Commodore must be continually watched for signals.

"To keep position is very difficult, it may be fairly easy with a group of cruisers, or a group of destroyers, but with a group of the tramps of assorted sizes and unknown turning circles it is extremely difficult. And then the Commodore may order some movement and when it is accomplished make the signal 'Manoeuvre very badly executed. Try to do better next time,' making the average merchant skipper feel inclined to make a horrid noise.

"Our trouble on the Montcalm came when speed was reduced to two or three knots. With lots of sea room we could take anything, but in convoy there was danger. We were between here, there, and everywhere, and got the idea that the greatest war-time danger was from collisions. Not many times the captain's good-night was the last we saw of him, which is the custom of the sea, but he was up, and down, and then the ship's company, all told, were awake for half a mile it is carefully watched until it has passed. Now we were completely blacked out, in pain darkness, neither sea nor sky visible, just a ghost ship on its way to the purgatory reserved for wicked submarines, and surrounded by pale masses.

"A menacing shape arises — we are tossed about. The order is given 'port half a point' but there is another on the other side so be steady as you go.' I felt like a bull surrounded by banderillieros — and there are thousands of men suffering that strain day after day, year after year, all through the war," said Capt. Slocombe, who went on to tell of the vessel's arrival in England and Iceland without encountering any enemy action.

Expected Enemy Action.

"On the last lap of the voyage, on leaving Iceland, we were definitely told that we would be attacked," said Capt. Slocombe, "in addition to our regular escort we had two cruisers with us. Well nothing continuously and all our plans first appeared. We were well within sight of land, being based in Norway. Then two bombers dived from the centre of the convoy. One dropped its bombs and crashed into the sea; the other dropped its bombs and disappeared back into the clouds.

"After they attack the two cruisers, who had been steaming in the centre of the convoy, put on speed and were away flying the signal 'Good Luck.' We didn't know why they had gone. We thought perhaps they were more valuable than we were but I know now they had good reasons. When you hear men talking about a convoy being escorted by its escort remember that those men do not know what the convoy vessels know.

"And then more enemy planes, three specks, round and round, back and forth hour after hour. We could not relax for a moment. For nine solid hours we endured this strain, and then there they came, three of them, one straight for us. We swerved across our bow—I could see my three bombs going through the fuselage—and he crashed into the sea.

"We did not claim that we brought him down. There were others who helped," said Capt. Slocombe, with the usual tendency of seamen to minimize remarks about their own credit which may possibly be put to their credit.

"And then my Third Officer yelled, 'Look, a torpedo!' I could see the damned thing, by at least see the track. It could not have missed us by six feet. We put the Montcalm's and the Vice-Commodore's ships swing off to starboard and all thinking that I may have missed the signal I gave the order to alter course too, but then I noticed they were both hit and sinking.

"Then the Third Mate again: 'Look at that ship go'—I saw her bow standing on end, blazing like a torch, and she went down in ten or fifteen seconds with all her crew and valuable cargo. There was only a ripple on the water. We then saw the kind of death's-head face, especially from a torpedo which has just missed you, everybody is affected.

"From this time our escort has been augmented by Russian destroyers, and in due course we arrived in Murmansk," said the speaker, speaking of how the City of Murmansk was continuously under air attack from the air while they were there.

Even Capt. Slocombe's trip home is a thrilling tale, which he tells he sailed as a passenger, and without incident.

"We were in a thick fog when the alarm came for surface raiders. I went on to the bridge to be with the United States captain. The enemy appeared to be attacking all over the convoy. I'm getting out of this," said the skipper, something with which I thoroughly agreed, and we turned round and hightailed it back through the fog. They got six or seven ships of the convoy, including one enemy vessel.

The Way All the Time.

"Now things are going this way all the time," said the speaker in concluding his arresting address. "It was announced recently that up to August, 1944, there were 32,000 merchant seamen, serving in ships of United Kingdom registry, who had lost thefr lives in such service. It is also reported that the people of London are getting fed up with being continually bombed: it is getting on their nerves. But the merchant seamen are putting up with this all the time, all through the war.

"The conduct of my boys on the Montcalm was exemplary as soon as we got away from home, and the Russians said so, actually after any ship flying the old red duster. If you remember previous remarks about merchant seamen at any time, will you please remember this!"

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 19

Sobel was silent. Then he said abruptly, "What would Rhoda and Pasquale have done if Ann had never escaped from this house and Kitty's body had never been identified? They could have forced Ann to impersonate Kitty all the rest of her life! It looks to me as if they had some reason to believe Kitty was alive and could be easily found. Something they haven't told us."

"Either that or the exact opposite," returned Basil. "Suppose they did poison Kitty. In that case, they knew she was dead and they didn't want her body found and identified. Before she died they invented a pretext to induce her to leave the house wearing Ann's clothes. Then they forced Ann to impersonate Kitty in order to conceal her death and prevent the identification of her body. And they might have forced Ann to impersonate Kitty forever by pretending she was mentally unbalanced. Once they had planted a doubt of Ann's identity in her own mind, she might have become insane eventually."

"Nice people. But in that case why employ private detectives to trace Kitty? And why poison Kitty in the first place?"

"That's just it. According to their story, it was to their paramount interest to keep Kitty alive so she could marry money."

"No wonder Rhoda was so frank about her poverty. It's a sort of psychological alibi."

"It and the private detectives," agreed Basil.

Sobel tossed his cigarette stub into the fire. "How long does it take this reducing drug of yours to act?"

"A colleague of mine at the hospital says that a large dose begins to act in ten to fifteen minutes and causes death in three to four hours—or a little longer."

"Then it was the cocktail?"

Basil nodded. "Can you imagine a better vehicle? No two ever taste alike. Most of them are cloudy from shaking. And they all contain two solvents—water and ethyl alcohol."

Sobel took a pencil from an old envelope from his breast pocket, and began to write on his knee.

"According to Ann Claude, Kitty had her cocktail between six and seven P.M., and fell ill 'about ten minutes' after taking it. That would make the probable death between ten and eleven P. M.—say midnight at the latest. According to Rhoda, a housemaid saw Kitty leave the house sometime after ten P.M. wearing Ann's clothes. Her body was found about ten blocks from this house at dawn the next morning. It all fits."

Basil lit a cigarette and handed his case to Sobel again. "I suppose you realize that limits the suspects to people who were in this room at cocktail time?"

"Sure of that?" queried Sobel.

"Everyone else who had cocktails here that day was alive and well at the dance afterward. That means only one cocktail was poisoned. Who could have known which one was to be Kitty's until it was handed to her in this room?"

The door opened and Foyle came in. "Well, I've got things organized!" he announced. "As soon as the rest of the boys get here, we'll see the servants and check on Mrs. Jocelyn's statement. If only they'd called us in when Kitty first disappeared!"

"Or when she first fell ill" added Sobel. "I shall want a list of everyone who was here for cocktails that day."

"You can have it right now." Foyle took out a notebook. "I made a list of them when I heard Ann Claude's story. First I put the family." He began to read:

"Rhoda Jocelyn, Kitty's stepmother, "Edgar Jocelyn, Kitty's uncle "Ann Jocelyn Claude, Kitty's cousin and Rhoda's secretary."

"Oh, really, Inspector," broke in Basil. "You don't think Ann Claude —"

"On the force, we always suspect the party who first reports the crime," answered the inspector, grimly.

"I think you can rule Ann Claude out," said Sobel. "As a rule murderers report their own crimes to the police only when they can forestall others by doing so. But in this case, we might never have proved murder at all—if it hadn't been for Ann Claude's story."

"Maybe she didn't know that." The Inspector resumed his reading:

"Luis Pasquale, artist "Nicholas Danine, director of Imperial Explosives Ltd. of London."

"A chemical industry," murmured Basil.

"What's that got to do with it?"

"Nothing—perhaps. Go on."

"Third, I put the people who were interested in the coming-out party in a professional way. They are: "Mrs. Jowett, social secretary "Philip Leach, gossip writer.

"And, last of all, I put the servants: "Gregg, the butler, "Victorine, Rhoda Jocelyn's maid."

"Nine people all together," remarked Basil. "Only four of whom were involved in Ann's impersonation of Kitty afterward: Rhoda, Pasquale, Victorine, and Ann herself. . . .You might ask Ann if any one looked surprised when she first appeared at the dance."

"Why?"

"Because, if the murderer didn't know about the impersonation it must have been a real shock to see Ann—apparently Kitty—alive and well at the dance. He had seen Kitty drink a fatal drink of poison in her cocktail that afternoon and he knew she must be either dead or dying."

Gregg appeared in the doorway. "The other detectives have arrived, sir. And—there are some journalists at the front door asking for you."

"Blast!" cried Foyle bitterly.

"I'll handle them, Inspector," he said. "You needn't bother. It's getting pretty late, anyway, and I don't believe you need me now. Coming, doctor?"

Basil felt as though he'd been asked to leave a play at the beginning of the second act.

"If the Inspector doesn't mind, I'd like to see this through."

"Sure. You stick around, doc. Maybe you'll see more o' those 'psychic fingerprints' you're always talking about."

Foyle grinned broadly.

"Gregg," went on Foyle, "I'd like you to show us Miss Jocelyn's rooms next."

Dr. Willing went with Inspector Foyle and Detective Duff to the next floor in an elevator, and Gregg led the way to a sitting-room, bedroom and bathroom en suite, with windows overlooking Central Park.

As soon as the photographers had finished taking pictures, the inspector and his men went through the rooms, dictating to Duff anything they thought worthy of record. There were closets full of Kitty's dresses and coats. There were shoes — many shoes. There were dresses-drawerfuls of fine underthings scented with orris. But no clues. . . .

"What about the desk?" asked Basil.

Foyle sat down before it and went through its papers swiftly. There were invitations, bills, advertisements. Hairdressers begged Kitty to patronize them. Photographers implored her to pose for them. And the De Luxe Advertising Agency offered her a thousand dollars for an endorsement of cigarettes. There was no address book. And no love letters.

"But moderns don't write love letters," observed Basil. "They telegraph or telephone."

"Well, here's a sort of account book." Foyle smiled involuntarily as he noticed two errors in elementary arithmetic. "And a check book." There was a check for fifty dollars made out to "self" and signed "Katherine Jocelyn," which had never been torn out of the book, and which could never be cashed now. . . . Flowers and Grecian profiles had been sketched on some of the stubs.

"Not a very businesslike young lady," remarked Foyle. "No wonder her stepmother was able to run things and get away with most of the money. Now, we'll go through Mrs. Jocelyn's rooms. See if you can get Casey on the phone, Duff, and ask him to bring her upstairs."

As Rhoda met them in the upper hall, she seemed less at ease.

"What's in there?" demanded Foyle, as they passed several closed doors.

"Nothing, sir."

Gregg opened a door and they saw an empty room, the furniture swathed in dust sheets, and the floor covered with a film of lint.

"Economy," said Rhoda, briefly "Only a few of the rooms are in active use."

Her own suite was at the further end of the hall. The sitting-room on a corner, had twice as many windows as Kitty's. It was furnished, rather preciously, in rosewood with Parma violet hangings.

"I really can't imagine what you expect to find here," murmured Rhoda, with a flavor of irony.

"Just routine, ma'am," answered Foyle. "After all, this is a house where murder has taken place."

"The rooms are dusted thoroughly every day." This time the irony was obvious as she watched one of the detectives who carried a fingerprint kit.

Basil went into the bedroom but did not linger there. He came back to the sitting-room carrying something wrapped in his handkerchief.

"Mrs. Jocelyn," he said, with unusual gravity. "Your step-daughter endorsed a reducing medicine known by the trade name of X-Why. The endorsement implied that she took it regularly. Is that true?"

"Of course not." Rhoda seemed irritated by the naivete of such a question. "Kitty didn't need reducing medicine. She always had a lovely slim figure That was why the X-Why people asked for her endorsement."

"Would you be prepared to swear that Miss Jocelyn never took X-Why?"

"Naturally! She's been thin ever since her first attack of malaria in Rome when she was eleven. You can see it in that photograph on the table just behind you."

It was an enlarged snapshot framed in silver—a ten or eleven-year-old girl with hollow cheeks and long, thin legs standing among the pigeons in front of St. Mark's, Venice. For a moment Basil wondered why Rhoda should keep such a photograph in her sitting-room. Then he realized it was one of the properties in the little drama of maternal devotion she had been playing.

He turned back to her eyeing her own tall, slight figure. "Did you ever take X-Why yourself?"

She stared in astonishment. "Really, Dr. Willing!" As he seemed unimpressed, she added, "Certainly not!"

"Did any one else in the household take X-Why?"

"I don't suppose the servants could afford it, but I really don't know. Why do you ask?"

Basil ignored the question. "Did you or your stepdaughter ever own a bottle of X-Why?"

"The X-Why people sent Kitty a sample bottle with her check. She showed it to me and we laughed about it. I remember her putting it in the scrapbasket. It was in this very room."

"When was that?"

"A few weeks ago—in November, I think."

"But it was last spring the endorsement first appeared?"

"Yes. They were very slow about sending Kitty her check. We had to write several times, it was most inconsiderate."

"You're sure that neither of you took X-Why?"

"Of course I am," Rhoda was growing impatient.

"How many times must I tell you that Kitty was actually underweight? Her Paris physician will testify to that. He tried to build her up by getting her to drink milk with all her meals, but it didn't seem to do much good."

Basil was unwrapping the object in his handkerchief. He was careful not to touch it with his fingerprints.

"In that case, Mrs. Jocelyn, how do you explain the fact that this bottle of X-Why was in your bathroom cupboard—half empty?"

Foyle peered over Basil's shoulder.

The X-Why bottle was "modernistic"—crystal and black enamel, in chic contrast to the pale yellow tablets inside. There was nothing so crude as a chemical formula on the label—evidently X-Why contained no drug that had to be declared. Blown in the glass was the silhouette of a nymph with inhumanly attenuated thighs, and legs representing at least three-fourths of her body. Doubtless, she served to keep the ideal of willowy perfection constantly in the mind of any taking X-Why. The round, black cap was embossed in gold with the familiar slogan: "Science Says X-Why Is The Sane Way To Reduce." Even the letters were tall and narrowly spaced as if they had been reducing too. As a final touch of luxury, a thick tassel of yellow silk dangled from the cap the full length of the bottle.

Covering his fingerprints with his handkerchief, Basil unscrewed the cap and spilled one or two of the tablets into his palm. They were a trifle larger than ordinary soda mint tablets. The edges had crumbled a little and there was a fine yellow dust in the bottle.

"I—I don't understand. . ." gasped Rhoda.

For the first time, she looked really disconcerted. "I remember distinctly throwing out the sample bottle.I remember seeing it in the scrapbasket the day it came in. And Kitty never took the stuff."

"You mean she never took it intentionally," said Basil.

"Oh! You think—? It was X-Why that—?"

"I don't know—yet."

He was wrapping his handkerchief around the bottle. Rhoda leaned forward eagerly. "If she'd been taking X-Why—then it might not be murder after all? It might be an accidental overdose?"

"Exactly."

"Well—" She smiled, twisting her fingers together. Maybe I was a little too positive. Maybe she was taking X-Why without telling me."

"But she was taking milk to put on weight," said Basil, softly. "Her Paris physician will testify to that, you say. Ann Claude has done so already. And the photograph of her as a child shows she has been thin for years. She never needed reducing medicine."

Rhoda was silent. Her mind seemed to be darting hither and thither, like an animal in a trap, looking for some loophole—some way of going back on her former testimony that would be convincing. But there was none.

"After all," her breath came quickly, "if I had known anything about the—the murder, I would hardly keep the poison openly in my own bathroom—would I?"

"Maybe you weren't expecting us tonight," said Foyle, without emotion. "Or maybe you were so smart you thought we wouldn't suspect you if we found the poison there—'openly', as you've just pointed out . . ."

When she had left the room under Casey's watchful escort, Foyle looked at the X-Why bottle again and said, "Damn!"

"What's the matter?"

"Well, doc, you and I know these fool endorsements don't mean a thing. But once the defense lawyers get busy, how can the D. A. convince a jury that a girl who was advertised all over the country as taking X-Why really never touched the stuff, and so couldn't have taken an accidental overdose?"

Basil's eyes held the Inspector's as he answered, slowly, "The murderer thought of that." He lit his last cigarette with characteristic deliberation. "Don't you see it can hardly be coincidence if Kitty Jocelyn was poisoned by an overdose of the very product she endorsed?"

He clasped his hands behind his head and blew a long plume of smoke. "When she signed that testimonial, she signed her death warrant. She gave the murderer a unique chance to make the murder look like an accident. 'Just slip an X-Why tablet in your evening cocktail. . .' Somebody slipped in more than one — and the cocktail wasn't his."

Foyle whistled. "Premeditation—if only we could prove it!"

Basil nodded. "Yes, I think we can assume malice aforethought. The most striking thing about this crime is its malicious ingenuity."

"We-ell. . . ." Foyle tugged at his lower lip. "I wouldn't put anything past Rhoda and Pasquale. . ."

Basil frowned. "If X-Why was the poison used, it doesn't look like Rhoda—so far. . ."

"Why not?"

"No one could choose X-Why without hoping her murder would be attributed to an accidental overdose she had taken herself. That was too obvious for the murderer to overlook. His plan must have been based on the fact that Kitty was the girl who had announced in advertisements that she was taking X-Why. So the last thing he wanted was Kitty's body unidentified. But Rhoda delayed and almost prevented the identification by making Ann impersonate Kitty after she disappeared. And Rhoda has just testified that Kitty never took X-Why. We could not have proved that with Ann's testimony alone.

"Pasquale might have committed the murder alone—without Rhoda's knowledge," went on Basil. "She didn't plan the impersonation until after Kitty fell ill from the first effects of the poison. The murderer might have poisoned Kitty, and found himself forced to help Rhoda's impersonation plot against his will."

"Or against her will," put in Foyle. "That maid Victorine."

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, April 4 —(AP)—Stocks were irregular today with a scattering of leaders showing some inclination to extend the last week's slow upturn.

Action was sluggish in both prices and volume. One reason cited was that a great many speculative followers have concluded fresh commitments should be postponed until the war ends, in Europe.

Stocks attracted modestly higher bids included Goodrich, Sears Roebuck, American Can, Kennecott, Westinghouse, Chrysler, Texas Co., North American and Chesapeake & Ohio.

C.P.R. gained 1-8 but Dome Mines was off 1-4 and Distillers Seagrams and Lake Shore each eased 1-8.

HOGS

Toronto, April 4 (CP)—Prices for hogs unchanged at Canadian Union and Stratford in bacon-hog markets reporting early today. Dressed prices: Grade A, $17.60, grade $17.60, Hamilton $17.75. Stratford 16 farmers $17.60, 44 breeders $17.75.

Freak Chick

It may be professional jealousy or maybe its mother was frightened by an alien creature, but the fact remains that a sprightly New Hamburg chick with "three feet" saw the light of day eleven days ago at MacKenzie and Sons South Front Street hatchery. The chick has an additional tail assembly to which are attached two extra legs.

The four-legged youngster, who peeps as lustily and eats and drinks as much as the fluffy yellow parts doesn't use the extra underpinning in the natural process of transportation.

A natural growth sticks out from its abdomen just like the rudder of a plane, and the two attached legs are clear of the ground at the little fellow makes forward in search of food.

One of the extra legs is perfectly formed with four toes but the other has only one toe which is a continuation of the leg proper.

The chicken has grown in proportion with its fellows and shows all signs of being a normal healthy chicken.

TRENTON

Pair Charged With Truck Theft

Trenton, April 4. — Carl McDonald, 21, and Albert Rapson, appeared in police court on Tuesday on a charge of theft of a truck from the Shire's car mill on Monday night. According to information received by police, the truck was found and has been taken to Marmora, Springbrook and Stirling. Later, it was found in Tweed. While in Springbrook it collided with a telephone pole, considerable damage. The driver of the truck did not stop at the scene of the accident but was picked up in Trenton. The charges against McDonald and Rapson were withdrawn and they were remanded for one week.

Ralph Sharpe charged with speeding, paid $15 and costs.

S. Brown on a breach of the Liquor Control Act paid $10 and costs, and two were fined $1 each for breach of the parking by-law.

Oak Hills Farmer Completes Seeding At End of March

Commensurate with the early appearance of spring, records in Deseronto district point to early farming operations continue to be broken in the Bay of Quinte district, according to district farmers.

One farmer in the Oak Hills district south of Stirling reports completion of seeding operations before March had ended, while a prominent orchardist of Prince Edward county states that if warm weather continues spraying operations will be in full swing by the first week. Also northern lights made their appearance last Thursday night, according to observers, being an all-time record for early appearance.

Mr. David Hollinger of the Oak Hills district has practically completed his seeding operations having sowed his first field on March 30th and sowing other fields the following week. Although the farm is ideally situated for the fall adaptable for early cultivation, the earliest he had sown in previous years had been April 7th.

Mr. Hollinger's neighbor, of Prince Edward, state that McIntosh apple trees are breaking into bud and if the weather continues spraying operations will be in order within the week. Usually the last week in April or the first week in May is the period which orchardists expect to get their spraying equipment into operation.

Film on Dairying Shown Farmers

Approximately 80 district farmers availed themselves of the opportunity to witness a film over the talkie technicolor film "The Science of Milk Production" which was shown in the local high hall under the sponsorship of J. S. MacKenzie and Sons, milk dealers. The film shown was prepared by Dr. W. E. Krauss, professor of dairying for the University of Minnesota.

Stated to be the most interesting film ever produced on dairying, the pictures indicated the cause of mastitis in the dairy herd and the procedure to control it and also photographically illustrated how a cow milks.

Dr. Peterson has done considerable experimental work in connection with dairying and his lecture illustrates a mechanical cow which produces milk through the injection of hormone from a cow's body. Another of Dr. Peterson's experiments is that a two-year-old heifer is calving normally without being bred.

ALLIED FORCES DRAW CLOSE TO HANNOVER
RUSSIAN ARMIES HAMMER AT GATES OF VIENNA

Other Units Pour Over Danube To Join in Assault

Great Tank Battles Being Fought in City Suburbs

London, April 5 — (AP) — The Germans today said the Russians have fought into "Greater Vienna," and Moscow disclosed said Russian forces were pouring over the Danube between captured Bratislava and the Austrian capital to join in the assault.

The Russians were battling to encircle the capital of Austria, which Hitler incorporated into Germany in 1938. While some forces fought to draw them to the northeast of the capital, others battled to cross the mass of rivers and swamps and attack from the southwest.

Already Moscow announced, after they had captured two secondary airfields, one a few miles east of Baden, and the Schwechat field just south of Vienna, while a third, just southeast of the city, was under fire.

Great Tank Battles

Great tank battles were being fought in the suburbs, the Soviet high command said. The famous Deer Park has been converted by the Germans into an artillery position from which heavy barrages fell upon Russian tanks.

Earlier the Red Army was reported at the southern gates of the capital after advancing to the suburb of Zwolfaxing, 1 1/2 miles from the city limits, and Schwechat, where a moscow termed the city's strongest line of anti-tank defences.

Determined to Fight

Although one Moscow newspaper said high Nazis were evacuating the city, most Soviet advices indicated the Germans apparently determined to fight it in Vienna as they fought in Budapest.

King Tiger tanks and numerous types of self-propelled weapons were being rushed into the battle against the Russians, Moscow reported.

Already the Russians at Gerbach Hiter, southeast of Vienna, the 2nd and 3rd Ukrainian armies had established Rodion Malinovsky and Fedor Tolbukhin's troops within a few shoulder against the German line along the Leading River, which runs from west to east, approximately five miles from the suburbs.

Both fights were taking place in suburban Lasa, Erlaa, Sodaun and Inzersdorf, four miles from the centre of Vienna.

A heavy struggle was in full swing in Inzersdorf where, Soviet soldiers, south of the railway, a bitterly contested defence of south Vienna.

If Tolbukhin succeeded in forcing the Reiche River, which rises from the Liesing just south of the Deer Park, and then the Liesing, he would be in position to launch an attack upon Penzing to the west, as well as the south and east.

The pressure on Vienna was intensified, Moscow said, by the fact while, by the fall of Bratislava, Slovakian control of 180,000 population, which was captured yesterday after a 24-hour battle by Rodion Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian Army.

Striking from the south, Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's 3rd Ukrainian Army seized more than 30 communities in the vicinity of Vienna, including Schwechat, 7 1/2 miles from the centre of the capital.

Last-Ditch Defence

Tolbukhin pushed through the town of Himberg, beating down strong anti-tank defences, and mounted an attack which seemed to support the enemy admission that the last-ditch defence of Vienna was at hand.

Malinovsky's troops advanced 8 to 10 miles north and west of Bratislava, losing a 100-mile front, Moscow said.

Almost 100 more dive south of Vienna, other Russian troops fighting shoulder to shoulder with Bulgarian units drove the last Germans off Hungarian soil and fought in the area between Graz and Maribor, 36 miles inside Yugoslavia and 78 miles east of the Italian frontier.

The Moscow communique said 10 towns were taken yesterday in this drive and 8,000 Germans were captured Tuesday.

United Kingdom Coal Crisis Worse

Cardiff, Wales, April 5 (Reuters) — The United Kingdom coal crisis is worse than at any time since the war, Arthur Horner, warned in his presidential address to the annual conference of the South Wales branch of the National Mine Workers which here yesterday. He predicted a coal shortage next Winter.

Declaring that manpower was not keeping pace with wastage, Mr. Horner said it was nonsense to expect that trainees sent to the mines could compensate for the loss of skilled miners leaving the industry owing to ill health, accidents, death and other causes.

63,500 MILES IN YEAR

An Eastern Canadian Port, April 5 (CP) — R.M.C.S. Stormont claims she's one of the most seagoing ships in the Royal Canadian Navy and if there are any who would argue her company will refer to her recent record of 43 consecutive days at sea to prove it. The little frigate has travelled 63,500 sea miles in little more than a year's service.

German Plane Upset

The swift capture of Bratislava, a large river port 22 miles east of Vienna on the Danube and a manufacturing centre that has supplied the Germans with important chemicals and ammunition, upset German plans to hold the strongpoints as a shield in front of Vienna.

Meanwhile, to the north the Berlin radio said Marshal Gregory K. Zhukhov's 1st White Russian Army was trying to launch a powerful assault from Oder and Neisse river bases toward a junction with American forces striking east of Berlin from the west.

Official silence in Moscow shrouded developments in this area fronting on Berlin, but field dispatches told the Red Russian offensive was near at hand.

CANADIAN CRUISER JOINS JAP FIGHT

H.M.C.S. Uganda, Canada's first cruiser, is now somewhere in Pacific waters, the first ship of Canada's navy to engage in the Pacific war. She will be followed by the Ontario, a second new cruiser, soon to be commissioned, two aircraft carriers, and a number of destroyers and frigates.

STORAGE DEPOTS RAIL TARGETS, AIRFIELDS HIT

Munich and Nuremberg Areas of S. Germany Pounded by Force of 1,200 Planes

London, April 5 (CP) — More than 1,300 United States heavy bombers attacked two large German ordnance depots, rail targets and airfields in the Munich and Nuremberg areas of southern Germany today.

The two ordnance depots were at Ingolstadt, 40 miles northeast of Munich, and Feucht, 10 miles northeast of Nuremberg.

These attacks formed the biggest R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. night raids in more than a month as 1,000 escorted heavy bombers struck enemy targets in four waves.

Rail targets at Nuremberg, at Bayreuth, 40 miles northeast of Nuremberg, and Plauen, near the Czechoslovak border, also were attacked today, and an airfield at Unterschleissenbach, just southwest of Nuremberg, was hit.

The United States heavy bombers were accompanied by 600 fighters.

Berlin Again Hit.

R.A.F. Mosquitos hit Berlin with two-ton bombs for the 46th time in 44 nights and stung forces of British and Canadian Lancasters and Halifaxes bombed three of Germany's most important synthetic oil plants and refineries near Leipzig and Hamburg.

The Air Ministry said incessant rain already had reduced the enemy's output of gasoline to a mere ten per cent of the total of a year ago and the output in all oil products to about 18 per cent.

Last night's targets were the Leitzkendorf and Leuna plants at Merseburg, 18 miles south of Leipzig and the Rhenania refinery at Harburg, across the river from Hamburg.

Two R.C.A.F. heavies were missing from the Leuna and Rhenania attacks, it was announced.

Charges Tokyo Aiding Germany Fight Russia

London, April 5 —(CP)— Soviet Russia today denounced its neutrality pact with Japan, accusing Tokyo of helping Germany to war against Russia.

Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov handed a note to the Japanese ambassador at 5 p.m., and the broadcast, recorded by the Soviet Monitor. The pact was signed in April, 1941, and whether Russia would denounce it before the opening of the United World Security Conference at San Francisco April 25 had been a subject of speculation.

The Moscow radio announced that Molotov had informed the Japanese ambassador that conclusion of the compact was impossible since Japan was fighting against Russia's allies, the United States and Great Britain.

"In such a situation the pact of neutrality between Japan and the U.S.S.R. has lost its meaning," Molotov said.

The note was handed the Japanese ambassador at 5 p.m. today in the midst of a new Japanese cabinet crisis.

The Soviet note emphasized at the outset that "the pact of neutrality between the Soviet Union and Japan was concluded on April 13, 1941— that is before the attack by Germany on the U.S.S.R., and before the outbreak of war between Japan on the one hand and Great Britain and the United States on the other.

"Since that time, the situation has radically changed," the note said, "Germany attacked the U.S.S.R. and Japan—Germany's ally—helps the latter in her war against the U.S.S.R."

The Soviet unilaterally would have run until April, 1946.

The denouncement becomes effective April 13, just 12 days before the opening of the San Francisco conference.

The Moscow broadcast said Japan's ambassador Naotake Sato had "promised to bring the declaration of the Soviet government to the attention of the Japanese government."

There was no indication in the Moscow announcement of Russia's intentions in future relations with Japan. However, Premier Marshal Stalin has publicly described Japan as "an aggressive nation."

MASBATE ISLAND QUICKLY OVERRUN BY YANK UNITS

Philippine - Based Bombers Ravage Jap - Occupied Hong Kong

Manila, April 5 — (AP)—Masbate, a central Philippine island, was overrun Tuesday by elements of the U. S. 40th Division and its capital quickly liberated while fighter and pine-based bombers ravaged Japanese-occupied Hong Kong across the China Sea.

After seizing Masbate city, Americans with the help of guerilla forces, moved rapidly to gain the entire island, meeting negligible opposition.

Masbate, in the island sea, guards the western approach to San Bernardino Strait between Luzon and Samar. It is the 36th invaded island in the archipelago.

Heavy bombers escorted by fighters hit primary targets at Hong Kong identified as the Kowloon and Aitkon docks, causing numerous secondary fires and large explosions.

Commenting on the aerial blockade of China Sea lanes, Gen. MacArthur said:

Air Pressure at Peak

"For many weeks it has been difficult for Japan to ship oil, rubber or other essential military commodities from the Southern Pacific to the homeland . . . As the air pressure of our blockade reaches its peak such traffic will become practically impossible."

The entire British Mast Indies are now isolated."

Seizure of Tarakan harbor, 20 miles from Bhorneo, completed the last link in chain of air bases which made the blockade effective, he said.

The 164th Regimental Combat team, which landed at Legaspi on southeastern Luzon Sunday, destroyed the enemy garrison at Daraga.

Bombers pounded Formosa targets. A destroyer escort exploded under a direct hit. Twenty-seven other ships were sunk or damaged in the China Sea and waters to the south.

PREMIER KOISO AND HIS CABINET RESIGN EN BLOC

Resignation Tendered to Japanese Emperor After Extraordinary Session Today

London, April 5 (AP)—The Japanese cabinet of Premier Gen. Kuniaki Koiso resigned en bloc today "because of the gravity of the situation," a Tokyo communique said, adding that a far more powerful administration will be formed.

The development came at the same time as American successes on Okinawa Island in five strikes the Japanese themselves declared brought the invasion of their homeland nearer.

The communique was preceded by a Domei Agency bulletin announcing the fall of the government.

The German Agency D.N.B. broke a routine transmission to flash news of the Japanese cabinet's resignation, indicating its importance within Germany.

"The Koiso cabinet resigned this morning," the Domei Agency said. "Premier Koiso explained:

"The resignation en bloc of the cabinet was decided upon after an extraordinary meeting of the whole cabinet which met at 9:00 this morning (Tokyo time).

"At the end of the meeting Koiso proceeded to the imperial palace at 10:30 a.m. and tendered the collective resignation of the Japanese cabinet to the Emperor."

The Koiso cabinet was formed July 22, 1944.

Popularly known in Japan as "the Tiger," Koiso was the strong, tough man of the Japanese army's Kwantung clique early in 1937, served 2 years before Tojo—"the razor"—rose to prominence in the same group.

As chief of staff of the Kwantung army in 1937 Koiso played a prominent role in the conquest of Manchuria in defiance of the League of Nations and the western powers. Later he was identified with agitation for Japanese expansion in the South Seas, a program which led to war with British and the United States.

CANADA'S PACIFIC FORCES TO BE ON VOLUNTARY BASIS

After European War Soldiers Will be Brought Home Soon As Possible

By JACK BRAYLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 5 —(CP)— Canadian servicemen overseas have the assurance of Defence Minister Mackenzie King that after the European conflict they will be brought home as soon as limited shipping permits, but were warned this might take some time.

Mr. King made the observations in the Commons yesterday as part of a speech on future military commitments, introducing the bill to limit the term of service of the Canadian Army to the war against Japan, saying only that it would be numerically "very much less" than in Europe and that the navy and air force would operate with their British services, while the army would participate with United States forces.

The men would go on a voluntary basis after 30 days' leave in Canada and the forces would consist of personnel from overseas and others who took training here. He said it had been decided last fall that Canada's interest was in the air and in central Pacific, but he did not indicate if Canadians would eventually see action in this area.

Progressive Reduction.

On bringing the forces overseas back to Canada after the European war, he said:

"Immediately following the cessation of hostilities in the European theatre, progressive reduction in the numbers of our soldiers and airmen overseas will commence.

"This will proceed at the maximum rate which is possible with available shipping. The world supply of ships is very limited and these have to be shared to meet the needs of all.

"It is therefore to be expected that some time must elapse before our forces can be reduced to the small continuing quota required in the United Kingdom for the occupation of Germany."

It is known that the big problem of transporting possibly more than 300,000 servicemen, war brides and children back to Canada has been occupying many recent sessions of the war committee of the cabinet in Canada, with only a few ships which can be spared from the army transports, most depend on other Allied powers for aid. Canada's ships are being used to the utmost for the most part as freight carriers.

It is possible the cabinet may decide to make a substantial increase in the number of overseas personnel rather than wait for priority to fall to Allied shipping pool, the

"Clean Cut Military Surrender" Of Germany Improbable—Eisenhower

Washington, April 5 (AP) — Gen. Eisenhower has informed President Roosevelt that "clean cut military surrender" of the Nazis is improbable.

In a letter to the president, released by the White House today, the Allied commander in Europe forsees extensive guerilla warfare. He said he was basing future military operations at the proper time "should organized resistance, control of any large area, such as the southern mountain bastion."

On the basis of past performances by German armed forces, Gen. Eisenhower said it is likely that "a V-E Day will come about only by a gradual termination on our part rather than by any definite and decisive collapse or surrender of German resistance."

Gen. Eisenhower indicated it does come, the White House said, probably would be issued by Gen. Eisenhower himself.

"The further this campaign progresses," Gen. Eisenhower said, "the more probable it appears that there will never be a clean-cut military surrender as a division on the western front. Our experience to date is that even when formations are small as a division are disrupted, their fragments continue to fight until surrendered."

The general visualized a condition which would mean that eventually all areas in which fragments of the German army, particularly para-troopers, panzer and S.S. elements may be located, will have to be taken "by the application of or the threat of force." This, he said, would lead to "a form of guerilla warfare which would require a large number of troops to suppress."

Germans Appear To Be Withdrawing From Stronghold

U.S. 3rd Army Nears Saxony Rail City of Plauen

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 5 (AP) — The Allies drove up to the Weser River from 23 miles west of the Prussian stronghold of Hannover, which the Germans appeared to be evacuating in a threat to the Ruhr Valley which flows within 50 miles of Berlin.

The Weser was reached along 40 miles by four divisions of the United States 9th, Army and formations of the British 2nd. Army from the Pied Piper town of Hamelin to a point north of historic Minden.

Allied planes struck through rain at road-jamming columns of Germans, in flight east to the Elbe, the last major river west of Berlin.

Hannover itself, a Prussian rail and industrial centre, was imminently threatened. The Germans, still not badly staggered by the 500-mile Weser, were filling secondary roads particularly in their run for the Elbe, which flows into the North Sea north of Hamburg on the west side of the Danish peninsula.

Heavy Traffic Leads East

Pilots said the traffic was heavy all the way from the Weser to well beyond Hannover and that the columns were streaming east.

Front dispatches of the U.S. 3rd. Army, on the Napoleonic battlefields of the Thuringian plains, beat down the last 55 miles toward the Saxony rail centre of Plauen, near Czechoslovakia, in a drive to bisect Germany and join the Russians. Leipzig was less than 70 miles ahead; the battlefields of Jena were almost 50.

At Hamelin, the U.S. 9th. Army was within 18 miles of Berlin and 56 of the aircraft centre of Brunswick. The 3rd. Army was 150 to 140 miles from Berlin.

The British 2nd. Army fought into the western outskirts of Minden, 90 miles southwest of Hamburg and 60 miles north of the naval base of Bremen. They had made a 20-mile bridgehead across the Aller canal 25 miles past Omabruck in a single day to reach the Weser, the first of the four rivers before Berlin. Only the Elbe lies between the Weser and Berlin.

The Confirmation of Crossing.

A dispatch from British 2nd. Army headquarters said Reconnaissance had said the British 11th, Armored Division had crossed the Weser Rivier northeast of Minden and had plunged eastward against light opposition. The same correspondent, however, wirelessed today that the 11th. Armored Division "actually crossed the Weser-Rma canal yesterday after capturing three bridges intact, one was seven miles northwest of Minden." The Weser curves to the northeast at Minden. There was no confirmation of supreme headquarters of the reported Weser River crossing.

The city of Arnhem (92,000) was imminently menaced by Britis and Canadian troops on the south bank of the Neder Rhine.

Large cities toppled; more were on the verge of capture.

Seized late yesterday were Kassel (201,000), Gotha (48,000), Soni (18,000), Hengelo (40,000) and Wabern.

The 9th. Army, sending four of its infantry divisions into a side campaign to crush in the northern side of the Ruhr box were up to 150,000 Germans had perhaps Field Marshal Kesselring are trapped, fought into Soest and battled the last defenders of Hamm. They moved a bare five miles from Dortmund (427,000) on their sides.

The last German were being beaten into Hamm (158,617) and Heilbronn (69,000) by the U.S. 7th. Army, which fought less than 34 miles from Nuremberg (421,000). The French 1st. Army fought beyond captured Karlsruhe to within 20 miles of Stuttgart (460,000).

The big Army mopped up many by-passed pockets and cities left behind in the advance, to within 56 miles of Czechoslovakia and 1/0 miles of Russian lines.

The cities of Eisenach (45,000), and Muhlhausen were entered. The 3rd. Army captured 16,454 prisoners yesterday.

Evacuating Mainland

Front-line available report showed that the Germans were pulling out of Holland perhaps to the Elbe River line—the best way they could with their limited transport and roundabout routes.

Headquarters of Allied Supreme Headquarters and at 21st Army group headquarters were cautioned against premature optimism over the withdrawal. Officers said there was no evidence that the Germans were pulling out, but that it was not yet possible to say whether those leaving were actual fighting forces or only administrative, supply and headquarters personnel.

It was emphasized that this action "is denied so as to avoid any possibility of fanning the hopes of the German people."

The liberation of Holland depended on the extent of the German garrison stand. Obviously the Germans had to get in a hurry in direction—the heart of Germany.

At the opposite end of the 300-mile front, the U.S. 7th. Army had troops within five miles of Heilbronn.

Major H. Blakely Laid to Rest

Sincere tribute was paid to the life of Major Harry W. Blakely, whose funeral took place from Bridge Street United Church on Wednesday afternoon, in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and immediate and close personal friends. Major Blakely succumbed to the church from the Martin Funeral Home, Belleville, immediately from the Military Hospital and General Hospital, of Kingston, where he labored for the past six years. Dr. W. Hughes, pastor, Interim pastor of Bridge Street United Church, conducted the service and was assisted by Rev. W. Flatt, now retired but at one time pastor of the church, where Major worshipped as a boy and young man. A wealth of floral tributes surrounded the bier.

Noticed in the assembly were members of the baseball team of Belleville with which Harry rose to fame in the baseball world, members of the staff officer Belleville with which Major Blakely was associated, personal friends from the community, Kingston and Belleville, who journeyed here. Rev. Mr. Flatt stated the had known Major Blakely intimately all of his life and his life had been a great inspiration to him. "Life is mysterious and so is death and it is strange, that a young athletic man in robust health and in the prime of life should be taken", said Mr. Flatt. "He was a quiet, unassuming, self effacing and retiring young man and in his eloquent address he won many personal and intimate friends, who will sincerely mourn his passing. His friends could be called legion for everywhere he went he had the knack of making and keeping friends. He had a great personality."

"He was a student pre-eminently conscientious. Starting in the country school in his own community he progressed rapidly until he then journeyed seven miles night and morning to Tweed High School and there he carried off first honors as much a casualty of this war as any who served in the front line. The murmurings of his heart went unheeded until he was forced to take to his bed and yet when going there he took his books for study because he had a passion for learning". The speaker comforted the widow, the children and relatives of the deceased, believing he was going on to a better life. Mrs. Blakelord also added a few words and offered sympathy to the sorrowing friends.

Interment in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by Dr. Shapleton and Rev. J. W. Flatt and the bearers were Majors George Hilsel, C. H. Leavens, A. L. Russel, R. F. Ardron and Capt. R. C. Burr and D. W. Boucher all of Kingston.

Full Military Honors Accorded Lt. Col. Gribble

Under sullen rain-drenched skies with a brisk April wind that whipped the pennants from the flags, from the three volleys of rifle fire, the flag-draped casket of Lt.-Col. Gribble, D.S.O. Severly Gribble, was lowered into its last resting place on a green knoll overlooking the Bay of Quinte in Belleville cemetery on Wednesday afternoon.

A Popular Soldier.

It seemed as though the elements paid final tribute, too, to the passing of a typical soldier and gentleman. As the cortege neared the graveside, a sudden gust of wind permeated the ranks of the khaki-clad, head-dress of the late officer from its position on the flag draped, flag covered casket. The funeral was held from the family residence, 226 John Street, to St. Thomas' Church for the three o'clock. In the quiet dignity of the service, Major the Rev. A. Beach Lamp Payne, chaplain of the Argyll Lads' Infantry, conducted the singularly impressive funeral service.

Lay in Simple State.

The late Col. Gribble lay in simple state in the reverent hush of the worship. Atop the bier of the flag he had served, which draped the casket by his beret, head-dress with the badge of the Argyll Lads' Infantry (Trash) whose service to his country and empire was marked by a bright page in the archives of the regiment, Captain Jack Dickinson, Captain Jack Dickinson, Padre Jackson and Geoffrey Marvell, Belleville, were the honorary guard at each corner of the casket. Pallbearers and military mourners filed into the church a few minutes before the beginning of the service. A large civilian attendance was evident.

Following the service, military representatives formed a guard of honor from the door, route to the church doors to a waiting gun-carriage. Officers stood at the salute as the casket was borne by the equipage. A firing party stood with rifles at the "present".

Quietly, the cortege filed from the church grounds to Bridge Street, where to the traditional slow military music of the No. 3A District Band of Military District No. 3, Kingston, it wended its way along rain-swept streets to an entombment near Highland Avenue.

Crowds of people lined the route of march along the main thoroughfare. Flags flattered at half-staff in honor of Belleville's citizen. Civilians reverently uncovered as the cortege passed. Khaki-clad men of the service, and bereted be-medalled veterans of the First Great War snapped to the salute in tribute.

Firing Party.

The long funeral procession, headed by Traffic Officer Harry Caldwell, of the Ontario Provincial Police, moved slowly along High-way 2 to the cemetery. There at the flower-covered graveside, as the flag was drawn from the casket by the sons of Scotia, whipped the waters of nearby Bay of Quinte into frothy whitecaps, Major Payne concluded the brief committal service. A series of sharp commands, and three volleys crashed out over the grave from the rifles of a regimental firing party. Officers came to the salute as the haunting notes of the Last Pool sounded in the afternoon air. A moment later the liveller strains of Reveille were heard, and final fitting tribute to a gallant officer came with the "Lament" of the pipes played by Piper Jimie Clark.

Lieut. N. Nicholson A.L.I. was in charge of the firing party. Lieut. Lamont R. Winterson superintended arrangements for the funeral. Honorary bearers: R.S.M. C. Jacey, R.S.M. J. Full Military Honors Accorded Lt. Col. Gribble

Under sullen rain-drenched skies with a brisk April wind that whipped the pennants from the flags, from the three volleys of rifle fire, the flag-draped casket of Lt.-Col. Gribble, D.S.O. Severly Gribble, was lowered into its last resting place on a green knoll overlooking the Bay of Quinte in Belleville cemetery on Wednesday afternoon.

Full military honors were accorded the distinguished soldier, a veteran of the Argyll Lads' Infantry (Trash) whose service to his country and empire was marked by a bright page in the archives of the regiment.

Military dignitaries from headquarters of Military District No. 3, Kingston; representatives of reserve and active army units of the district and a civilian representation of all ranks of society stood reverently at attention at the graveside while silver-throated bugler sounded the Last Post and Reveille in final tribute to a gallant soldier and gentleman.

A Popular Soldier.

It seemed as though the elements paid final tribute, too, to the passing of a typical soldier and gentleman. As the cortege neared the graveside, a sudden gust of wind permeated the ranks of the khaki-clad, head-dress of the late officer from its position on the flag draped, flag covered casket. Then, as the wind subsided, it slowly fell back into position in silent salute.

Eight stalwart past and present soldiers, members of the pallbearers of the regiment formed the official bearer party. They were, Capt. RSM. Sam Johnson; RSM. T. E. Schwab; Sergt. Thomas; WO1. Frank Butler; CQMS. Arthur Hobb; Pte Major J. Ingram; CSM. Addison Lloyd and Sergt. Major Sandwell.

Headquarters Represented.

Headquarters M.D. 3 Kingston, was represented by Colonel L. L. Rask, officer commanding the Royal Canada Horse Artillery, Major Grant, former general staff officer and Captain William Gilmour, general staff officer 3rd Reinforcements.

Major Brock Hudgin, Kingston, Lieut. Col. Ponton, Belleville, Major Captain Fred Douglas and Major Ketchum, Belleville, Colonel F. P. Wills was present with relatives of the family.

The funeral was held from the family residence, 226 John Street, to St. Thomas' Church for the three o'clock. In the quiet dignity of the service, Major the Rev. A. Beach Lamp Payne, chaplain of the Argyll Lads' Infantry, conducted the singularly impressive funeral service.

Lay in Simple State.

The late Col. Gribble lay in simple state in the reverent hush of the worship. Atop the bier of the flag he had served, which draped the casket by his beret, head-dress with the badge of the Argyll Lads' Infantry (Trash) whose service to his country and empire was marked by a bright page in the archives of the regiment, Captain Jack Dickinson, Captain Jack Dickinson, Padre Jackson and Geoffrey Marvell, Belleville, were the honorary guard at each corner of the casket. Pallbearers and military mourners filed into the church a few minutes before the beginning of the service. A large civilian attendance was evident.

Following the service, military representatives formed a guard of honor from the door, route to the church doors to a waiting gun-carriage. Officers stood at the salute as the casket was borne by the equipage. A firing party stood with rifles at the "present".

Quietly, the cortege filed from the church grounds to Bridge Street, where to the traditional slow military music of the No. 3A District Band of Military District No. 3, Kingston, it wended its way along rain-swept streets to an entombment near Highland Avenue.

Crowds of people lined the route of march along the main thoroughfare. Flags flattered at half-staff in honor of Belleville's citizen. Civilians reverently uncovered as the cortege passed. Khaki-clad men of the service, and bereted be-medalled veterans of the First Great War snapped to the salute in tribute.

Firing Party.

The long funeral procession, headed by Traffic Officer Harry Caldwell, of the Ontario Provincial Police, moved slowly along High-way 2 to the cemetery. There at the flower-covered graveside, as the flag was drawn from the casket by the sons of Scotia, whipped the waters of nearby Bay of Quinte into frothy whitecaps, Major Payne concluded the brief committal service. A series of sharp commands, and three volleys crashed out over the grave from the rifles of a regimental firing party. Officers came to the salute as the haunting notes of the Last Pool sounded in the afternoon air. A moment later the liveller strains of Reveille were heard, and final fitting tribute to a gallant officer came with the "Lament" of the pipes played by London, April 8 (CP, Cable) — British and Canadian destroyers patrolling off the Norwegian coast drove off attacking aircraft and sank one supply ship of a seven-ship convoy but the Admiralty said late hits on a second supply ship and a U-boat were not sunk. The Admiralty announced today.

The engagement took place at the mouth of the Josing Fiord under a sky lit by red and green tracer shells fired from the ground by the enemy escort, apparently in the belief that a German plane which dropped a flare over the Allied craft was one Allied plane attacking another.

In the meantime, educational and sports officers of the country's civil auxiliary services have been given the job of getting the service in large high with the cessation of hostilities and the prospect of a long wait for the return home.

It is understood that already a number of the fully pre-war "special First Great War "Khaki Outings" has been set down on blueprints and that certain universities and schools have been slated for use by Canadian forces stationed in that country in the immediate post-war period.

Troops in France and the Low Countries will also have an opportunity of attending educational institutions while servicemen in Britain will have the advantage of taking courses at places such as Oxford and Cambridge.

Mr. King's statement was the first made on the part the three services would play in the Pacific. However, much of the information contained in it has been reliably learned that the overall strategy would be under the control of an American heads. Mr. King spoke of the close relationship between Canada and the United States forces.

Need Determining Factor

Mr. King said it was still too soon to say when any final decision could be reached as to the relative contributions of the different services, or to the numbers from any one service.

"The determining factors," he said, "will be the actual need for and the probable effectiveness of the forces to be employed."

There has been reliable information from the army and a statement to it from later that week by Colonel Abbott, parliamentary assistant to Defence Minister Ralston, that no stand about the army's plans.

It has been reported the army may see a division in the Pacific and if so it has been reported the division may be headed by Maj.-Gen. Ben Rogers, V.C., D.S.O., Edmonton, late reported as Commander of the 3rd Division overseas.

Food Warning to Germans

General Eisenhower has told Germans in a message that Germany must depend upon her own food resources this year and men conscripted by the Nazis for the Volkssturm that they should escape from the people's army and go back to their farms if they can. This was more than good advice. It was a warning that to obey the instructions strictly "is your only hope of averting the famine which threatens Germany. If you disobey them nothing which we or you or the Nazis can do will prevent a catastrophe this year."

The Supreme Commander of the Allies on the West Front told the German people in no uncertain words: "Remember For years Germany has relied plunderedfood from the occupied territories. Relying on this plundered food she has mobilized her land workers for the army and failed to feed herself. This year Germany must depend upon her own food resources."

Germany has been guilty of many great crimes, one of them the systematic robbing of the overrun countries of their food and transportation of their livestock to feed many eating off the labor of occupied territories. Not long ago there was a news article which told how in an area on the West Front in Germany the Nazis obtained found evidences of plenty of food and of rich furniture. These Nazis have taken and enslaved men of the overrun countries into slave armies to till the soil, to work for the Huns.

Now these people who have plotted to live on the wealth and labor of the world have failed in their diabolical plan of subsisting on the work of the men and of the overrun Europe but of the whole world are told that they must go to work, till the soil, raise and not slaughter livestock, refuse to leave farm work even if ordered to join the Volkssturm and resist if necessary by force attempts by the Nazi party to ship feed from their district. They are urged to use the evacuees and so help them feed themselves.

The Germans have to be disillusioned. They have shown themselves a race that can behave stupidly and their slavish acceptance of Nazi instructions must come to an end. Now they are told by the United Nations' leader to go to work and contribute to their own upkeep. If they do not, the possibility of a famine in the land of the Huns appears. With the best will in the remedy, either the Germans or the Allied countries if the crops are not grown and the livestock not kept and increased.

The message from General Eisenhower has come with the great success of the Allied armies at the opening of the spring season and there will be no excuse for the Germans if they refuse to listen to the voice of common sense and prepare to feed themselves.

The United Nations have done remarkably well, especially Britain, in imposing restrictions on food in themselves for the sake of feeding the fighting forces, the prisoners of war and the home front.

Now let the Germans themselves in Allied-occupied territory go to work for they does not have any more to rely on Hitler and his henchmen, they must look to producing their own food and stand on their own feet.

This ought to be a proof to the people of Germany what fools they have been to back up Hitler's aggression and what a situation he has brought them into. They must be made to know that Hitlerism and crime does not pay. Let the Germans work their own living now and till the soil, instead of living on dominated lands and slave labor.

Lights Over Paris

Lights have been turned on again in Paris. News of this event recalls those days when it was said that the lights of civilization were going out as the darkness of Hun aggression thickened over Europe. Now lights symbol of liberation and freedom, rules. Its return is a fact that means everything to the world—that the tyranny and aggression of Germany are being blotted out. At the same time as the lights in Paris burn at night, darkness of fear and defeat and the actual darkness of night are in control in Germany except in those myriads of places where flaming ruins of German war plants and the hail of bombs from fleets of Allied planes over German targets create a realistic "twilight of the (Nazi) gods," the self-called supermen, in an exploding, flaming, smoking picture of desolation.

The lights of civilization were never out of course, though unlighted cities were the rule for the sake of security. But the darkness of Hun savagery has brought on itself condemnation by a peace-loving armed world, that will soon be able to rejoice in victory.

The darkness that reigns over Germany is the symbol of the dark crime of the Reich which she committed against the world and for which she must be punished. Now she is forced to see her proud invincibles' military strength cracking up and the plots Nazi Germany planned against the world of free nations are falling back through the unerring accuracy of a moral universe upon the Germany inventors' heads. At heavy cost to the manhood and wealth of the Allied lands, the demon of militaristic Germany is being driven to its extremity for it is in the trap out of which it cannot escape, as Nazi Germany in her madness continues to fight on without hope except in the mad delusion of a Hitler that something may turn up to save his neck.

Garibaldi's Curse

(Leeds Yorkshire Post)

In April, 1854, Garibaldi, commanding the ship Commonwealth, put in to Tynemouth to take in coal.

While there it was known that the Commonwealth had anchored at Tynemouth, a public subscription was organized to present her commander with a sword and a testimonial, and a deputation was appointed to make the presentation on board the vessel.

Writing on April 12 to Mr. Joseph Cowen, chairman of the deputation, Garibaldi used these words: "Gratitude is a rare and powerful nation, independent of auxiliary aid, foremost in human progress, enemy to despotism, the only safe refuge for the exile, the friend of the oppressed, but if ever England, your native country, should be circumstanced as to require the help of an ally, cursed be that Italian who would not step forward with me in her defence."

Commando Intelligence

When General Deutch, commander of the German anti-aircraft defences at Wesel, was killed in the street fighting, the Colonel of the British Commandos dashed into the General's H.Q. and seized the confidential papers. Among them he found a complete chart of the local A-A gun positions. He signalled the full details to the R.A.F. 2nd T.A.F. HQ.

That was at 8.30 a.m. The airborne troops were scheduled to start dropping at 10:00 a.m.

The range of the German A.A. placements were being shortened, their guns had become the targets of exact and devastating fire. When the airborne troops flew over they had very little interference from flak. Thanks to the Commando Colonel's quick work, the lives of hundreds of airborne soldiers were undoubtedly saved.

Too Late

(Washington Post)

Kesselring cannot bring to life the dead millions which Hitler has already sacrificed in the attempt to achieve his dream of world domination. He cannot restore to the Reich the invaluable raw material resources he lost; the Luftwaffe that is now only a wraith; the mountains of oil and munitions that have been used up. His job is a thankless one. . . . The change of the guard on the Western Front is, if anything, only further proof of Nazi Germany's desperation.

Do not train boys to learn by force of harshness; but direct them to it by what amuses their minds, so that you may be the better able to discover with accuracy the peculiar bent of the genius of each.—Plato.

GARDEN WARFARE

Into the garden soon we'll go
Once more with spade and rake and hoe,
And hope through constant work it needs
To hold in check invading weeds.

Last year, in sorrow we recall,
The hungry aphis, green and small,
Destroyed the roses, bud and stem,
Because we failed to conquer them.

And there were beetles, slugs and worms
With which we never came to terms.
They rushed a million to the brood
And cut and sucked and bored and chewed.

Soon for the radish and the beet
We'll regiments of ruin meet
And battle hordes of savage foes,
All for the glory of a rose!

Method of Handling Planes on Takeoff And Landing Follows Set Pattern

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Western Pacific—(delayed)—The main thing I never understood about an aircraft carrier was how it operates, is what they did with all the rest of the planes while one was landing or taking off.

I had always seen the flight deck had to be entirely clear of planes, I thought that as soon as one took off, and then a plane had to come in from the lower deck by elevator, and land instantly.

It isn't that way at all. There are always little groups scattered on deck during landings and takeoffs. There have to be, for the hangar deck down below is packed, with folding wings, which has been one of the great contributions to the Navy. Without them an carrier could hardly carry enough planes to justify itself.

These parked planes take up maybe one-eighth of the flight deck —the rear one-eighth. When they get ready to launch planes, all the engines are started and warmed up while the planes are still parked, tightly together.

The noise is terrific. Angry propellers whirl with the force of the tail of the next ship. "Plane-pushers" by the dozens dart in and under, and admist these flying propellers, adjusting chocks and untying the lines that hold the planes down.

When they are ready the center plane in the front row is raised out a few inches, its wings are unfolded. The pilot feels his controls, guns the motor.

A signalman standing ahead and to the right of him indicates by motions when he is to start, the pilot on his brakes, speeds up his engine until the noise is ear-splitting, and then the signalman leans over and dramatically swings his arm forward, as if personally trying to give the plane impetus.

The plane starts rolling. The deck behind him is packed with planes, but the pilot pays no heed. His front is clear. Not a plane or man on it.

So sooner has one plane gone than the next one is ready, has his engine warmed up, is waiting with his engine. They take off one right after another, less than a minute apart, until the whole flight is in the air.

The moment the last plane of the group is off, the deck seals shut. In fact, and the great flight deck instantly becomes a scene of activity.

Usually there are several planes left on deck, which weren't scheduled to fly. They are immediately towed to the forward end of the deck, and reparked there.

For, when the planes come back to land, they must use the entire length of the deck. While they are landing, the whole front end of the deck is full of parked planes.

A barrier of steel cables, stretched dead-high across the deck, stops and wild-landing plane from crashing into the bunch of parked ships ahead.

As soon as a plane lands, the barrier is dropped, the plane taxies over it, and the carrier is raised again for the next group coming in. The plane that has just landed is parked somewhere in the other end up front, and the pilot shuts off his motor.

When the last plane is down, the klaxon squawks, all the men rush out, and all the planes are towed back to the rear of the deck, ready for the next takeoff.

Almost never, during actual landing of the planes, is the elevator let down. It is used only between flights, to bring planes down to the hangar deck for fueling and repairs.

This moving of planes from one deck to another, and the shouting of orders is "re-spotting." It goes on all day long—back and forth, back and forth.

The planes are pulled by tiny Fordson tractors. As they run around they look like these little electric cars you see at parks, only with an carrier's deck.

At night, probably two-thirds of the planes are "spotted" on deck. Their wings are folded, their tails tied down to gratings in the flight deck by heavy rope.

If we're caught in a storm they're tied additionally with steel cables. And all night long men are posted among them, to see that none breaks its moorings.

Despite all this, there have been many crashes on the flight deck, and the deck careening at such a steep angle, that planes would crash and go bursting into flame, screeching over the side. That would be when I was down in the cabin, very seasick.

CANADA'S EFFORT PROPORTIONATELY AS GREAT AS ARMY

R.C.A.F. Will be Represented in Occupational Forces in Germany

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 5 — (CP)—Canada, in proportion to her size, is making a contribution to the United Nations as great as any member of the Commonwealth or of any of the United Nations, Air Minister Gibson told the Commons Wednesday in a review of R.C.A.F. activities during the last year.

Introducing estimates of $485,678,000 to cover R.C.A.F. activities for the next five months, Col. Gibson outlined the winding up of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, the future of the RCAF, the part the service would play in the policing of post-war Germany and also in the post-war air force.

He spoke after the House had concluded plenty of lively debate and after Prime Minister Mackenzie King described the broad lines of Canada's planned participation in the war against Japan.

Mr. Ilsley said the forces would serve on a voluntary basis and the British, Dominion and Canada operate with sister British services and the army would operate with the United States forces.

Size of the forces to be sent to the Pacific were not disclosed.

The day also brought these announcements:—

War Service to Retain Pay

1. Veterans Minister Mackenzie disclosed that action now is being taken to have war service gratuities and pay and allowances paid to service personnel.

2. Agriculture Minister Gardiner said that three British food contracts were signed Tuesday by Col. Ilsley.

Mr. Mackenzie said a committee of representatives of the Civil Services and the Department of Veterans Affairs had been studying the question and that legislation under which the change in the gratuities regulations would be made, the change had been advocated by many members of the House.

"When the gratuities act was passed last summer, it provided for the payment of the gratuity to the wife of deceased only if they were in receipt of dependents' allowance or assigned pay.

"Many members considered that the gratuity should be payable into a servicemen's estate because if he survived he got the gratuity. That is what was due him in gratuities.

Canada's Food Contracts.

Mr. Gardiner said the signed food contracts were:

1. A contract to take all the bacon and ham Britain can deliver in 1946. There already is an agreement covering 1945 to the same effect.

2. An agreement to take all available beef Britain can deliver in 1946. An existing agreement covering 1945 calls for delivery of 50,000,000 pounds, but no effective maximum since it has been supplemented by a new agreement with the government.

3. An agreement to take eggs in "quantities somewhat greater" than were delivered last year.

Air Training Plan.

Presenting the air force estimates for the fiscal year, Col. Gibson recalled his remarks with a tribute to his predecessor, C. G. Power, and received from the cabinet last fall with disappointment the government's announcement conscription policy. The House drew a round of applause from all sections of the House.

He referred to the winding up of the Air Training Plan, "the completion of the first phase of Canada's magnificent contribution to victory." The decision to allow the training plan and its agreements to run on its normal course was adopted as a result of the fact that the plan had been highly successful.

Of the 137,000 trained airmen graduated from the plan, 72,000 are graduates, or more than 52 per cent, of graduates, are now in the R.C.A.F. Train Men for Own Needs.

The R.C.A.F. would continue to train men for its own requirements and for the R.A.F. on a contract basis, many graduates would attend schools, four service flying training schools, one air observer school and one central navigation school and a reconnaissance and navigation school would be kept in operation to train R.A.F. crews along.

In addition the R.C.A.F. would continue to maintain and operate a considerable number of units in normal training for the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. as well as seven schools of various types to provide refresher and certain specialized training for the R.C.A.F. Several schools are being retained on a care and maintenance basis to provide protection against an unavoidable turn in the war.

As a result of the winding up of the training plan and the closing of schools, large amounts of surplus equipment had accumulated and was being placed in the hands of the War Assets Corporation for disposal.

As of March 1, three department and branches of the R.C.A.F. had declared 94 properties as surplus to requirements, up to the end of February there had been 39 Crown assets from the training plan disposed of, valued at $131,230,138; in addition some $30,000,000 worth of equipment from western hemisphere operations had been made available for disposal.

Col. Gibson said that in the battles Canadians had won a total of 1,643 decorations, a fair indication of the scope and gallantry of their services.

Sorties.

In 1942, the Canadian overseas bomber group flew 7,265 sorties and dropped 13,629 tons of bombs. Last year, the group flew 25,353 sorties and dropped 47,000 tons of bombs, accomplishing the lowest loss percentage for four-motored aircraft. Also, entire British bomber command. Last October the group dropped more than 2,000 tons of four-motored aircraft ever sent against a single target and during the last year of bomber command.

As for the fighters, they flew 10,976 sorties and up to March 15 and one of their greatest victories was last Aug. 17 in Normandy when they accounted for 1,076 enemy aircraft destroyed, 1,332 damaged, 73 tanks destroyed and 91 damaged. The R.C.A.F. lost 1,000 aircraft.

He said the R.C.A.F. would be represented in the occupational forces in Germany "and also in the post-war air force."

"It is not possible to inform the committee at this time what the size of that force will be," he said, "but it will be commensurate with the size of the Canadian Army and the Canadian Navy."

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

WHY THIS TEARING HURRY!

Since March 1, writes a correspondent, I have been on your reducing diet, but feel fatigued, have 5 by 9, March 1—my weight was 180 pounds; this 3 weeks, I am 168 pounds. The last two weeks I lost only 2 pounds. Is this right? May I remain on the diet several months without injury to health? I don't want to stop now, I've had such a fine start and feel so good. If I should lose 12 (twelve pounds or less) by September I'll be so happy.

Answer—Yes, that is a fine start. A reduction of 2 to 3 pounds a week is as fast as any one should reduce. It takes much longer than that as a rule, to accomplish the superfluous. Why all this tearing hurry to get rid of it? Are fat folks so gullible as children in respect to Hollywood hokum?

Health is of course the first consideration, but every one who has had experience, whether happy or sad experience, in reducing knows that P. A. and P. C. are concerned also.

Personal Appearance, because it has likely as much to do with indeed even more than health.

Fat simply because they eat too much—for their kalorie requirements. I have a booklet "How to Lose Weight"—for a copy send stamped self-addressed envelope and a dime. Do not use a clipping in lieu of your name.

For folks who are obese perhaps the best reducing routine is exercise, plus deficiencies or largely due to sheer laziness. "Body exercise, I have a booklet "Body Exercise," for copy send twenty-five cents and stamped self-addressed envelope.

For folks who, without any marked change in diet or mode of living, begin to accumulate a few flesh after thirty and would like to hold back a bit and not grow old before time.

But, shucks, you'll say it is a trap, just a slick way to sell my line of quack stuff, and so it is. I often wish I could supply all this free as part of the health service. But, darn it, I have to live and eat and pay taxes, and I prefer golf on the bowling green and tend my little herd of pigs, and so on.

For a copy of the booklet "The Road to Health to Vim" which tells what it takes to keep well and how keep well, to live long and die young—send 10 cents (10 pennies) cents and stamped envelope bearing your address.

After all, it takes years to put it on, doesn't it. Don't try to take it off in a week.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Bad Habit

I am 55 years old and up to now have enjoyed pretty fair health. But of late I have taken to reading your column. Is this harmful?—(W. H.)

Answer—Depends. If you run short of health, and look up any symptoms that I inadvertently mention it won't do you much good. On the other hand if you scan it to see what crazy idea I'll present next, maybe it won't do you any harm.

Sore Gums

Wife has had a sore tongue for past three years. Two doctors said she has to allergy to some food, but did not know what food to blame. One said it is due to cigarettes (she is a moderate smoker). She said a ganglion (nerve ganglion) in the tongue must be exposed.—(R. G. L.F.)

Answer — Possible explanation would be some such as you detailed three years ago, of metal fillings or bridge work in other dentures, constituting a miniature galvanic battery, setting up a current that burns the tongue. Research for that is change new dentures to metal free. Next to consider, a possible explanation is shortage of vitamin B complex. Third, particularly riboflavin (formerly called vitamin G), of which milk is the best source. Finally, in some cases patients with simple achromic anemia suffer from burning sore areas on the tongue which they attribute to "spicy foods" or other foods. THREE WISE MONKEYS

The "three wise monkeys"—figures of apes holding their hands over their eyes, ears and mouth respectively—symbolize an Oriental proverb, "Speak no evil, see no evil, hear no evil." The word for monkey is "saru," which, when preceded by a modifier, phonetically sounds like "see," "hear" and "speak." The three monkeys became associated with the proverb merely by chance.

Sometimes the three monkeys are shown with little ears of NUMBER, because they were used for the decorations in ancient tombs at Nikko.

Some authorities say the three wise monkeys came to Japan from Japanese talks too much, the Chinese listen too much, and the Indian hears too much.

A Chinese legend says Confucius originated the three monkeys symbol. When the philosopher told his disciples he was going to heaven to govern the earth, they begged him to give them a motto to remember by. Fuhi gave them a motto to remember by. Fuhi for their lives. The sage compiled by copying pictures of three monkeys in the attitudes and gave his disciples the maxim, "Speak no evil, see no evil, hear no evil."

In Wending to study of the navy estimates, Navy Minister Macdonald said the old navy reserve are officers in obtaining volunteers to serve on Canadian ships in the Pacific, because of the general size of the navy and the number of men who would be required to serve in that theatre.

SHOT BY NAZIS

Maj.-Gen. Maurice Rose of Denver, Colo., commander of the 3rd Armored Division, U.S. First Army, was shot to death near Paderborn, Germany, by a German parachutist, the Germans claimed in a broadcast.

British Troops Join Up After Making Landings

Rome, April 5 —(AP)— British 8th Army troops have joined up after making landings on both sides of the narrow strip of land separating the Valli di Comacchio lagoons from the Adriatic 6ea at the extreme eastern end of the Italian front, Allied Headquarters announced Wednesday.

A number of prisoners have been taken in addition to 300 or more captured in the first day of the operation Monday, the link-up and mopping-up operations have virtually cleared out all the area south of the canal running from the shallow lagoon to the Po Di Primaro river.

After crossing the mouth of the Po Di Primaro 8th Army units pushed along the north shore, seizing a number of German strongpoints and defensive positions, penetrating as far as the vicinity of Lagosina.

Much of the territory north of the canal has been flooded.

German Brutality Recounted By Liberated Men

By ARTHUR OAKESHOTT

With the U.S. 7th Army, April 5 (Reuters)— More than 1,000 British prisoners of war, including men taken at Arnhem and now released by the Allies from the camps at Stalag 7A, 17 miles northeast of Aschaffenburg, Germany, told their grim story of German brutality and British endurance.

They were forced to march through the snow from prison camps in Upper Silesia to Bad Orb, and those who collapsed on the road were clubbed to their feet or shot by their German guards. The march lasted eight weeks.

The men from this camp were living below the subsistence level in conditions of indescribable squalor and filth.

Whitehall Notebook

BY JOHN DAFFERNOE
(Canadian Press Staff Reporter)

London, April 5 —(CP)— The next parliament seems likely to be a younger parliament than it is now, and since 1918.

Already 110 members of parliament of all parties have announced they will not seek re-election, while 24 have been re-elected since there has been no general election. Of these 1935 Mauger men are expected to retire before voting day is announced.

The 1935 average age per member was 51 and now it is 60— higher by several years than any other parliament at time of dissolution since 1918.

After the First Great War 260 "green" members were elected and this year that figure may well be equalled. All parties have presented the names of many young service men as prospective candidates.

The 1935 Evening Standard, that raised two questions: Will the next Commons be too green for the interests of the nation? Should it be left have to do? And will such a youthful, reprimand mean that "absolute majority may be sacrificed to round-table representation?"

To both questions it answered an emphatic "no."

"The answer to every doubt about the wisdom of recruiting too many young men is that every parliament since 1918 has been too old," the paper said. "Indeed the Canadian-born Lord Beaverbrook who was only 36 himself when elected to the Commons.

"The average age of the 1918 parliament was nearly nine years above the average age of the whole population. The average age of the 1935 parliament was nearly seven years above that of the population.

Kind Word Helps Lonely Soldier

Regina, April 4 (CP) — To Jimmy Jackson, Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, who has recently returned from five years overseas, Regina isn't such a bad place after all. A kind word given him by a waitress in a Regina cafe brightened up his whole day.

Jimmy said that he had wandered all over town and not a person had spoken to him. He entered the cafe and a waitress came up to him. Instead of asking "What will you have?" she said "Hello there. I'm glad you're back."

Jimmy was surprised. He had never seen the girl before and he was almost speechless. She asked him all about himself—if he'd like a package of cigarettes and told him any time he was broke that she'd be glad to buy him a meal.

"Gosh, it didn't cost her anything to be so kind, but it sure bolstered my faith in human beings. I began to think that maybe what I'd gone through was worthwhile after all.

"She said she always tried to make returned men feel that we at home appreciate what they have done for us. I wish that there were more people like her; it would sure boost the soldiers' morale.

"Gee, she made me feel glad to be alive."

SABOTAGE BY DUTCH UNDERGROUND GREATLY DEPIES GERMANS

With the 1st Canadian Army in Northern Holland, April 5 —(Reuters)— Netherlands underground fighters are valiantly responding yesterday to be carrying out a sabotage campaign which prevents the Germans from firing a last all-out salvo of V-1 and V-2 bombers. The Netherlanders are openly defying the Germans and doing everything possible to hamper them both in firing these weapons and in withdrawing troops from Holland.

Kesselring Believed Trapped In Ruhr Pocket

With the U.S. 9th Army in Germany, April 5 —(AP)— Field Marshal Kesselring is believed trapped in the Ruhr pocket between the U. S. 1st and 9th armies.

Kesselring became Supreme German Commander in the West late last month, succeeding the deposed Field Marshal von Rundstedt. The pocket was estimated to contain from 150,000 to 190,000 Germans.

If Kesselring is in the pocket, he might try to fly plane. This would prove hazardous, however, because of Allied air superiority and the gunpower moving forward along the whole 100-mile perimeter of the trap.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was eating her grapefruit did this morning, saying to pop, Oh dearee, William, time is its true may be a wonderful thing in an abstract way, but it invariably comes in the form of vicious circle when it's a question of planning meals.

Something tells me we're on the edge of a depression, pop said, said. Yes we are, but it's not just the old familiar question of what we're going to eat, but the long term question of how are we going to have any kind of meal, she said.

Run yee gods the butcher shop is full of meat, pop said. I ate a whole window full on my way home yesterday. It was really impressive. I'd been an artist I'd of stopped and made a painting of it right then and there. If I'd had my paints and easel with me, he said, and as he said, Of course the butchers have plenty, but that's because the ration points are such as high that it's almost a fiscal impossibility to have meat 3 days in succession. So they throw you back on poultry, she said.

Then my old ball back gracefully? pop said. That's simple enough, and as he said, and me said, Oh yes, it's simple enough the casual way you say it, but the markets tonight are full of plucked cold of every vestige of chicken and duck feathers. There's been a proverbial gold rush on poultry owing to the high meat points, so that throws me back on fish, and you don't like fish and Benny likes it even less than you do, you can tell me what to do about that, if you're in a healthy brain trust.

Okay, that throws you right back on meat, pop said, and ma said, Yes yes, go on?

If you mean go on to the office, I think I'd better had, I'm a little late already, pop said.

And he quick folded his paper and went, and ma was still wondering about it to herself when I had to leave for school.

Constant Use Heightens Lustrous Gleam of Silver

Using your good silver won't hurt it. It only helps it. Constant use heightens the lustrous gleam of silver, if you know how. Quick and easy way to rout tarnish is one full scoop iron, big quantities of silver in the tarnish-free neglected silver. Experts warn that scratches come from mixing flatware and tossing it into the drawer; any sensitive to help you reform. If you admit to this and other careless faults. To wash, they tell you to organize. Instead, wash several and serving pieces in groups, and clean separately in hot soapy water. Rinse in hot water and dry with a soft clean towel. If food stains tarnish pieces, clean with silver polish before stains move in to stay.

When silver is ornamented, you can decorate: reverse by applying polish with a stiff brush on engraved areas; a cloth where areas are smooth and are kept to be scratched. If oxidized effects are part of the design, do not use a stiff brush because such effects may be removed.

When polishing large pieces of silver, run the lengthwise—not crosswise or circular—and use brisk motions. If after polishing to remove polish, and after washing and drying thoroughly, you'll buff silver the tarnishing spots, your silver will reward you with a brighter gleam.

Choosing Bright Colors To Suit Complexion Tones

BY HELEN FOLLETT

IF YOU have delayed purchasing your Easter wardrobe until this moment—few of us find much time for shopping these busy days—make up your mind to select gay clothes. You are a part of the human spectacle, and...it is a crime against the public eye to treat around the city streets. Look for bright plaids. Buy a red hat. Shoot the color works!

Every woman should have at least one bright silk, bright with threaded design. This fabric is not only decorative but practical. The coat slips on easily over it. When making a selection, try to find one with the predominating color favorable to your complexion.

Select Gay Colors

Color means so much, the right one playing up the skin tints and flattering them! Rich, glorious shades make a woman handsome and distinguished. So mind your sartorial steps lady. Look long before, try on and hurry to decide out the money. Unless a frock exactly suits you, but this week I have a big price for a movie. How would a walk on Sunday afternoon suit you?

Inviting a Boy to a Party.

Dear Bill

Nothing to be stumped about, dear young girl! Remember that the cards are for you to play, and it's really easy for you to play them right: Ask the boy right means to organize yourself . . . and be direct: "Would you like to go to a movie (or skating, dancing, tea or basketball game) Saturday evening? Fine!" Pick your time, keep your voice and way of saying "Would you like to go to the movies (or whatever you're inviting her to)", so the girl will get the idea that there is a good time ahead . . . and the chances are he'll accept.

Don't be indirect and indefinite by saying, for example, "Are you doing anything Saturday evening?" And don't begin your invitation in a flabby, apologetic way; for example, "I suppose you wouldn't want to go to a movie with me Saturday evening?"

And if your budget doesn't permit an invitation to some kind of entertainment, be direct and lighthearted about that too: "I'd love to have a

Attractive Pink Rhubarb Now the Height of Fashion

Matching the bright new fashions for spring with new fashions in food is one way of stimulating appetites and adding interest to the daily menu.

There is one difference, however. With nature supplying the foods, the homemaker only has to transform them into attractive dishes which fit into meals and at the same time allow for family preferences.

Rhubarb is one of the spring foods whose tangy flavor and lustrous color gives a real lift to appetites. Like other fruits too, it makes a real contribution to the diet and can be used frequently.

Today the home economists of the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture tell us some interesting information about rhubarb, and suggest the following attractive recipes.

The hot house variety of rhubarb is usually a delicate pink. The garden varieties, of table, later vary from dark red to green.

Never skin rhubarb by doing so one removes the color with its eye appeal.

Points on Buying:

Rhubarb should be fresh, firm, crisp and tender.

Rhubarb may be red, pale pink or even green in color.

Rhubarb stalks at their best are from 3-4 to 1 inch in thickness.

Stale rhubarb has a wilted flabby appearance, may be bitter and poor flavor when cooked.

Rhubarb Cream.

4 cups diced raw rhubarb
1 tablespoons flour
1-4 teaspoon salt
1-2 cup sugar
2 egg yolks
2 egg whites
1 tablespoon sugar

Mix diced rhubarb, flour, salt and 1-2 cup sugar. Let stand one hour then cook over hot water for 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Beat egg yolks until light. Pour rhubarb sauce over egg yolk stirring constantly. Return mixture to double boiler. Cook three minutes. Remove from heat and fold with stiffly beaten egg whites and two tablespoons sugar. Pour into sherbet glasses. Chill. Six servings.

Rhubarb Charlotte

6 slices lightly buttered bread
1-4 inch thick
4 cups diced raw rhubarb
1-2 cup sugar
1-4 cup cinnamon salt

Use five slices of the bread to line a greased mould. Fill centre with rhubarb. Add sugar and salt. Place reserved slice of bread on top. Bake 36 minutes in a moderate oven, 375 degrees F. Turn out to serve. Six servings.

TRENTON

To Submit By-law For $100,000 to Erect Hospital

Trenton, April 8 — After listening to representations made by a deputation from the Trenton Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees, the Rotary, Lions and Kinsmen Clubs; the Trenton and District Trades and Labor Council, the Canadian Conference and two local doctors, the Town Council at its March meeting agreed to submit a by-law providing for raising by way of debenture, the sum of $100,000, the town's contribution to the erection and equipment of the hospital.

Just when the vote will be taken was not stated. If the by-law is passed, no debentures will be issued until after the building is actually started. The estimated cost to build and equip is $200,000, of which the Trustees now have some $40,000 on hand. Council received the assurance that in the event of the hospital costing more, the town will not be approached for further contributions from the civic treasury. Different members of the deputation pointed out the growing need for hospitalization in Trenton and district, and the fact that many hospitals were crowded to the doors with long waiting lists.

Budget Brought Down

Mayor H. R. Cory brought down the budget for 1946 which permits of a reduction in the tax rate of 10 mills. The rate will therefore be 44 instead of 46 mills. The reduction was made possible partly on account of reduced school requisitions because of the new government educational subsidies proposed to relieve the burden on real estate, and on account of careful financing in the past few years. There will be some additional expenditures this year, such as sidewalks and improvements to the town hockey and public skating rink, the cost of paying two extra policemen to be added to the police force to make an eight-hour day possible, and other incidentals. The mayor said, that he had after many hours of work produced a budget which would give the town ample protection and guard against a year-end deficit. Incidentally, this is the second two-mill reduction in two years.

Let for Tenders

The Council decided to call for tenders for three miles or less of new pavement, to be constructed this summer on heavily travelled streets. It is proposed to lay what is known as mesh pavement, now extensively used by Kingston and other cities and by many counties, such as Ontario, Victoria and Halliburton. The estimated cost is between three and four thousand dollars a mile. Last year the town paid $16,000 a mile.

Tenders are now being received for the alteration to the police cells and police offices, the plans having been recently revised.

RUSS SLAVE TAKES HIS REVENGE

The war on the eastern front is acted out in miniature on a street in Bonn, in western Germany, with a German civilian policeman playing the unhappy role of the "Wehrmacht" and a Russian "slave laborer" in the role of the triumphant Red army. The Russian was en route to an Allied "displaced persons centre" when they recognized the policeman as the supervisor who had "cracked the whip" over them. In no time at all the "Wehrmacht" was surrounded and its mechanized equipment (one bicycle) wrested from it — as pictured at top. Next a pair of satchels are brought into play and the supervisor is well belabored. In third picture the policeman indulges in a bit of shifty hand and footwork to break off the engagement, and in fourth German civilian cop, identified by an armband, tries to ease into the picture to reinforce his comrade. In lower picture, the one-man Wehrmacht, apparently having had enough, beats a hurried retreat.

WEHRMACHT WOMEN TAKEN CAPTIVE

Five uniformed Wehrmacht women, whose duties were as telephone operators were among the 400 prisoners taken by the Seventh Armored Division of the U. S. First Army in the recent drive.

Drive on Capital Slowed by Stiffer Jap Resistance

Guam, April 5 (AP) — United States army units driving toward the Okinawa Island capital of Naha have been slowed by stiffening Japanese resistance while Marines on the north side of the American wedge worked forward from three to five miles virtually unopposed.

Heavy artillery and mortar fire from well organized Japanese units yesterday put the brakes on the 24th. Corps drive toward Naha, limited gains on the southwestern coast to 2,000 yards, and stopped the 7th. Division push on the southeast coast after an advance of only 500 yards.

The 24th. Corps units were within 3,000 yards of Machinato airstrip and four miles from Aha. The southeast drive reached the vicinity of Nakagusuku after overrunning several entrenchments and fortified points.

Control 80 Square Miles.

United States forces now control more than 80 square miles or one-sixth of the island, and the operational timetable has had to be completely revised, Maj.-Gen. Roy S. Geiger, Marine commander, said today.

He envisioned stiffer fighting when army units meet Japanese forces on the southern line before Naha and the airdrome, largest in the Ryukhu chain.

Today's communique reported "concentrations" of Japanese troops and vehicles in the southern end of Okinawa, the strategic island only 325 miles south of Japan's homeland.

The Katchin peninsula on the east coast was overrun by the Marines, thus giving the Americans control of the entire inner shoreline of Nakagusuku harbor.

Japanese civilians were giving themselves up by the hundreds as rubbled towns and villages were overrun.

THE R.C.N. SCORE

Ottawa, April 5 —(CP)— Navy Minister Macdonald gave the Commons this box score of Royal Canadian Navy successes since the start of the war:

Submarines destroyed 22; submarines probably destroyed eight; submarines probably damaged seven; surface vessels sunk 44; surface vessels severely damaged 26; surface vessels captured one.

ARMORED FORCES OUTRUN AIRMEN

London, April 5. (CP)—Allied armored forces are, in one respect, even outrunning the Air Force. Airmen were assembled in a briefing room for details of a mission in support of U.S. 3rd Army columns in Germany. Before the briefing was completed a staff officer entered the room. "The Mission is scrubbed (cancelled), gentlemen", he said. "Gen. Patton's troops already have reached our objective".

VALUABLE ART TREASURES FOUND IN DANK TUNNEL

Famous Paintings and the Famous Sarcophagus Taken From Cologne Cathedral Recovered

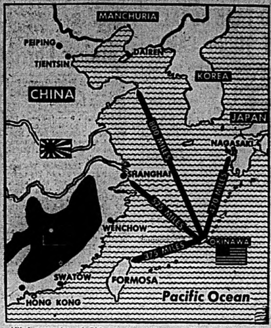
By DON WHITEHEAD

With the U. S. 1st Army, April 5 —(AP)—Valuable art treasures from Germany and France have been found in a dank tunnel used by German civilians near the front as an air raid shelter.

Works of Rembrandt, Reubens, Van Gogh and Van Dyke; the famous jewelled and gold sarcophagus from the cathedral of Cologne, sculptures and other treasures from museums, cathedrals and private collections were found. They had been moved from one hiding place to another by the Germans until 1st Army soldiers in the Siegen area overran an enemy position and discovered the cache.

An inventory will be made to determine the value of the collection and to find out how much was German and how much from occupied countries.

In the dank, fetid air of the cavern civilians slept next to a painting by the great Rembrandt, or curled up beside a magnificent carved door from the Cologne Cathedral. Russian and French slave laborers made their homes hard by the bones of Charlemagne, brought to the cave from their resting place in Aachen's cathedral.



There were 500 original scores in the handwriting of the composer Beethoven, taken from his birthplace at Bonn. There were paintings by Holbein. Rembrandt's celebrated self portrait, and Reubens' self portrait and his famous Madonna were there.

The sarcophagus from the Cologne Cathedral probably was the most valuable item of all.

EARLY EDUCATION

HOW OKINAWA WILL TRAP JAPS

Allied possession of Okinawa, as a glance at the above map shows, will make it almost impossible for the Japs to maintain contact with the coast of China without courting destruction. Particularly vulnerable is Shanghai, as well as Formosa. Importance of Okinawa to the Allied forces when the day comes for a thrust at either China or Japan is obvious. Planes based on the excellent Okinawa fields can easily hit movements of Jap troops and materials once we begin to use those fields, while the Allies can move almost unmolested in the south.

RACE NORTH TO KNOCK OUT V-BOMB BASES

As the British forces wheeled northward to knock out V-bomb bases and completely liberate Holland, the Scotch and English troops were reported heading for Bremen and the North Sea. At the same time some 150,000 crack German troops, trapped in the Ruhr, are trying to break through an escape corridor. They are hitting the 1st Army's 9th Division with both tanks and infantry, seeking to smash a lane between Paderborn and Siegen. Arrow shows general direction of northward drive.

Toronto, April 5 —(CP)— Stanley McGee, 37, Wednesday was fined $6,850 or one year when he pleaded guilty to 50 charges of having liquor permits not in his name and 13 registration cards which did not belong to him.

Police said they found a paper bag containing liquor permits and registration cards among groceries in McGee's rooms.

PHILIPPINE TOWN

When the first Spanish explorers sailed into Manila Bay, they found a native town on the south bank of the Pasig river.

BIG GOLD SEIZURE

Timmins, April 5 —(CP)— Four gold buttons valued at more than $17,000 were seized by police Tuesday night in what they termed the biggest seizure in the history of Northern Ontario high grading.

Phillip L. Authier, 34-year-old chartered accountant of Val D'or, Que., was arrested on a charge of being in possession of gold ore illegally. Police said cash amounting to $3,300 in $100-bills was found on his person.

Canadiens Dominate All-Star Team Placing Six out of Seven on First Place Squad

By FRASER MacDOUGALL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 3 —(CP)— The Montreal Canadiens, today clinching the season for which they won their second successive National Hockey League title and shattered several league scoring records by taking seven of the 14 positions on the 1941 all-star team chosen by The Canadian Press by hockey writers in N.H.L. cities.

Domination by Canadiens of the spiritual squad was the most complete by a single team since the all-star selections began in 1937.

They took six of the seven positions on the first team and placed one man on the second. The only player to crash the Montreal first-team barrier was defenceman Bucko Hollett of Detroit Red Wings. Two second-team positions were filled by Red Wings, two by Chicago Black Hawks and one each by Boston Bruins and Toronto Maple Leafs, conquerors of the Canadiens in the semi-final Stanley Cup play, best-of-Seven.

Twenty-eight writers participated in the vote which was "weighted to give voting value strength to each N.H.L. city.

Here are The Canadian Press teams:

First Team		Alternate Team
Position
Durnan (Montreal)	goal	Karakas (Chicago)
Bouchard (Montreal)	r. defence	Harmon (Toronto)
Hollett (Detroit)	l. defence	Preds (Boston)
Cash (Montreal)	centre	Gowler (Chicago)
Richard (Montreal)	r. wing	Mosienko (Chicago)
Blake (Montreal)	l. wing	Howe (Detroit)

Two of the Canadiens were unanimous choices. One was 30-year-old Bill Durnan, twice winner of the Vezina Trophy as the league's most valuable goaltender. The other was right wing Maurice (Rocket) Richard who shattered the 27-year-old scoring record by tallying 50 goals in the schedule's 48-game season. Each received 278 of a possible 280 votes.

Emile (Butch) Bouchard of the Canadiens, named to the right defence position on the first team, a year ago was right defence on the alternate team. The solidly-built Montreal manager is playing his season—was a powerful offensive and defensive force for the Canadians all season.

The scoring which enabled the Lach - Richard - Blake forward line to become league scoring champions this season was set as undoubted factor in the choice of all three for the first team. Elmer Lach, pivot man on Centre Elmer Lach, topped the statistics with 80 points on 36 goals and 54 assists. His assist-total set an N.H.L. record and tied 32 goals for assists to go with his 50 goals for 73 points. Left wing Toe Blake had 26 goals and 45 assists for 71 points. Blake was left wing on the first team in 1938 and 1940 and on the second team in 1939.

Dick Irvin of the Canadiens was named as coach of the first team for the second year in succession. He has also coached the alternate team five times. Glen Harmon was the other member of the Canadiens to get an all-star ratings, being named to the right defence position on the alternate team.

Four New Ones.

Four members of the alternate team were selected for the first time. One was Harmon. Another was Mike Karakas, Chicago goalkeeping understudy of Durnan, award when he broke into the N.H.L. in the 1936-37 season. Phil Moscrop, the fleet Chicago forward who won the Byng Trophy this season, was named to the right wing position. At left wing is Sid Howe of Detroit who set a pace with 36 assists for 53 points this season. Howe fought his option total to 317 for 13 seasons, belittering by three points the previous all-time record set, also by Nels Stewart in 13 seasons.

Earl Seibert (Babe) Pratt of the Toronto Maple Leafs who was on the first team a year ago was named to the right defence position on the second team. He and Hollett topped the league's defencemen in scoring this season with 41 points apiece. Hollett had 10 goals and 31 assists and Pratt had 08 goals and 33 assists.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.

London, April 5 (CP)—Kid Berg handled the first bursts of a comeback campaign, told newspapermen he believed he could beat most of the welterweights around—but in Britain, but said he would quit the ring again if his next couple of fights prove him wrong.

The one-legged Whirlwind who fought for the world lightweight title 14 years ago and just knocked out Eric Boon in a recent ring outing here, in the fourth round of a scheduled eight-rounder, is back at boot. Nearly 36, he didn't show the speed which made him the most feared Britain's lightweight king and one of the greatest in the game's history.

"What I need is fights," said the Kid. "I'm fit. But I'm a bad gymnasium worker—Army instructors and manager always told me that. When I've had a few weeks of fights, I'll know where I stand. If I'm no good I'll hang up the gloves and quit."

The fight against Dolby was the Kid's first in more than two years. He is 5 ft. 6½ in. tall, has a wife, Mrs. Judah Bergman (the maiden name of Berg's mother) and five children.

Berg's manager, Harry Levy, says he is "actually, he was much better than I thought he would be." Mrs. Bergman says she is "glad" to see him fighting. Frankly, I began to feel a few moments before I let her go 'sing' as didn't get hurt."

The Kid didn't get hurt. His opponent spent most of his time trying to get away from the body and head attack of the short right to the stomach sent him down for the count of nine after he had taken two ferocious nine counts.

Canadian Army boxers made the sports pages with their victories in three bouts in the London district, Sgt. Jimmy Wilde, former Welsh bantamweight, Glani Gens Fowler, Montreal Negro, was outpointed by Ernie Smith said to be a 10-round light-heavyweight slugfest at Watford.

Fowler has been a favorite around Watford since several months after D-Day when he substituted for an English boxer at the last minute and decisively beat the with a non-stop, two-fisted attack.

Another Canadian, Harry (Butcher Boy) Saltin, took the nod for Canada with a middleweight triumph over Bruce Bishop of Slough in a six-round battle at Stoke Newington. On the same card featherweight Ivor Simpson of Basingstoke, younger brother of a former British Amateur Boxing Association champion, decisioned Butler seldom missed with heavy leads during a non-stop attack through the eight rounds. Butler featured a right uppercut. Simpson was the better boxer but he lacked a solid punch.

IRISH FAVORED TO TAKE ROYALS IN THIRD GAME

Both Coaches Plan to Stick to Same Teams Used on Monday

Toronto, April 4 (CP)—The odds favor St. Michael's Majors for tonight's third game of the best-of-five Eastern Canada Junior Hockey Finals with Montreal Junior Royals. The score is tied 1-1.

Royals built up considerable support here when they humbled the powerful Irish 3-1 in the first game Saturday. But St. Mike's came back from that defeat red hot to record a decisive 7-1 verdict in the second game Monday.

So the Montrealers enter tonight's game on the short end of five-to-three odds. But they're not too depressed. They figure they can step over or two of the tricky St. Mike's sextet forwards, particularly high-scoring Leo Gravelle, from Asbestos, Que., who accounted for three goals Monday, they won't fare too badly. Coach Lorne White of Royals said he is looking for a better performance from his smooth-skating forward division as well as the defence. He plans no changes in the lineup from Monday.

Coach Joe Primeau of St. Michael's has no plans to alter his Monday's lineup and was confident of victory.

Tilson Trophy Won by McMurdy Of St. Catharines

Toronto, April 5 —(CP)— W. A. Hewitt, secretary of the Ontario Hockey Association announced today that Douglas McMurdy of St. Catharines Falcons has been named winner of the Tilson Memorial Trophy.

The trophy was donated by the Globe and Mail in memory of Alfred (Dinty) Moore, Toronto Globe clever centre star with Oshawa Generals for two seasons, who was killed on active service overseas with the Canadian army last year. It is awarded to the player considered most valuable to his team in O.H.A. Junior A competition.

McMurdy, 19-year-old Winnipeg product, playing his second year on the Falcons here, was selected by judged "not only the spark-plug of his team but a big factor in every performance," Mr. Hewitt said.

The selection was made by sports writers who covered the Junior "A" circuit during the championship season.

John McCormack of the champion St. Michael's College Majors was second, Leo Gravelle of St. Catharines Falcons and Oshawa Generals tied for third. Other players mentioned were Ray Hiscott and Pete Babando of Galt Red Wings and Earl Ellis54 and Al Dewsbury of Kitchener Greenshirts.

The trophy will be presented during the Memorial Cup finals at Toronto.

What's Doing in Sport

According to a survey of the Jockey Club in the United States, one third of the membership, now 1,000 because of the 1940 ban, is owned Jan. 2, have joined the armed forces and 10 per cent. of those reported to have taken war-factory jobs. The latest to get his induction notice is Ted Atkinson of Miami, formerly of Toronto, whose winnings last year totalled nearly $60,000. Stirling Young, president of the Club, has been a flying officer's position in Florida. Eddie Arcaro, jockey of the high-salaried riders with a $244 gross income in 1940, continues to be out-of-work because of the racing holiday.

Hi, tossing arm having shown signs of declining effectiveness, a small elbow fracture, veteran Claude Passeau of Chicago Cubs yesterday looked good enough on the pitch the National League opener against St. Louis Cardinals April 17, according to Dr. John F. Davis, club physician.

The Taxation Division of the Revenue Department at Ottawa has made it known last night that welterweight champion Fraddie Cochrane would be liable to pay Canadian taxes on his purse of tonight's Johnny Greco at Montreal in a title bout. Earlier Willie Gilzenberg, Cochrane's manager, had said a Cleveland promoter Eddie Quinn of Montreal had promised the champion's $50,000 purse "would be taxfree" in Canada.

Fred W. Westbrook, 80, former bicycle racer and in his later years an avid sports supporter here, died yesterday.

Montreal Jrs. Take Game Lead Over St. Michael's Squad Winning Third Game By 4to3

Skated Fast Irish Team Into the Ice and Presented a Rugged Defence

Toronto, April 5 —(CP)— If you could, rule out the accidental factor in hockey teams, Montreal junior Royals would appear to have Toronto St. Michael's College rivals behind the eight-ball.

Royals' impressive Wednesday night as they skated the flying Irish into the ice and completed a smooth-working attack with a rugged defensive effort to record a 4-3 victory and take a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven series for the Eastern Canada Junior hockey championship. They had looked just as powerful Saturday night when they conquered St. Mikes 3-1 in the first game.

But St. Mikes were the masters in the second game Monday, which they won 7-1.

An iron man performance by rugged Eddie Cullis of the Royals' defence accounted for the difference in the clubs last night. Playing before 8,000 fans, Cullis played the entire 56 minutes. He spent the other four in the penalty box.

Acted as Second Goalie

When he wasn't draping various members of the Irish attack over the boards, the hefty Edmonton product was playing as second goalie to sgt.-Howard Harris in the Montreal nets or starting dangerous rushes.

Cliff Malone tallied the winning goal early in the third period with the teams tied 3-3. He ripped in from the right boards and kicked the puck into the net after Pat Boehmer had stopped a hard shot by Jimmy Orlando.

Back-checking endlessly, Royals disorganized the Irish attack and skated with the fast Toronto forwards and clung desperately to their checks.

Bob Paul, Frank Turik and Ted Sloan accounted for the Royals' goals. Paul's coming in the first minute of play and Turik's in the second period. Fleming McKell and Kelvin Ramage scored Irish goals for Royal and Lloyd Wiseman added the other in the middle period.

Paul Thompson Resigns as Coach Of Chicago Hawks

Regina, April 5 —(CP)— Paul Thompson has resigned as coach of the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, president W. J. Tobin announced at the club's spring training camp here yesterday.

Thompson, who was present when Tobin made the announcement, said he would make his home in Vancouver.

"I have been offered such an attractive position in Vancouver's hockey that I cannot turn it down. You might say I am going back home to myself.

Meanwhile a possible successor to Thompson is Johnny Gottselig, former Hawk centre.

Paul Thompson would continue to supervise the club's coaching system.

ELMER LACH WINS HART TROPHY FOR INDIVIDUAL PLAY

Canadien Centre Ice Star Almost Unanimous Choice of Sports Writers

By HAROLD FEEHAN
(P.C. Staff Writer)

Montreal, April 3 — (CP) — The man who three years ago was told by top-notch surgeons that he probably would never play hockey again today held the Hart Trophy after being named Most Valuable Player in League player most valuable to his team.

Elmer Lach, 170-pound centre ice general of the high-scoring big line of Canadiens, Montreal back has annexed last night as the winner of professional hockey's most individual award, and the voting results showed that the verdict was almost a unanimous decision in the 22-year history of the cup.

Lach's sporty pattern, two from each N.H.L. city, did the voting, and the results gave Lach 158 out of a possible 160 points. Eight of those voting placed him on top of their list of 10 choices — the other four all put him second. Thus did the scrappy Canadien star, a man who proved an exception to the old saw that "they never come back."

Lach Comes Back

Lach came back. After missing an entire season, he came back last year to spark Canadiens to the Stanley Cup. Yesterday he hit his best form, leading the league in points with 80 and setting an assist record of 54. He also topped in both the majority of Maurice Richard's 50 goals in 48 games, and he combined with Richard and Toe Blake to get a record 124 goals and 119 assists for a single line.

Next to Lach, Richard drew the greatest support in the voting, but he was far behind his line-mate with 79 points, Sweeney of Boston, twice winner of the award, placed third with 74.

It was the eighth time that a Canadien player had taken the honor. Howie Morenz, Aurel Joliat, Herb Gardiner, Aurel Joliat, Babe Siebert and Toe Blake once each. Canadiens have taken the trophy more than any other team in the league, but considering their showing in the Byng Trophy for gentlemanly play, a Canadien player has yet to take the Byng award.

SEWELL PROBLEM TO FIND HURLERS

Cape Girardeau, Mo., April 5 — (AP)— Finding replacements for Lon Warneke, Curt Davis, Dizzy Dean and Bob Muncrief is manager Luke Sewell's biggest immediate problem as St. Louis Browns open camp to find their first American League hurler.

The two righthanders who have been isolated as key vet remain to war jobs this year, are Jim Tobin during the crucial 1944 pennant campaign.

Sewell has three good veterans to form the backbone of a starting staff—Nelson Potter, Jack Kramer and Denny Galehouse, and the rest of the Browns' 39 victories last year; Potter's 19 triumphs was the club's best mark in the league.

Most likely candidates for the other starting jobs are Al Lanoschaita, Tex Shirley, Earl Jones and Al Hollingsworth.

CASUAL COMMENT

By K.J.C.

Ain't it the Truth?

At a recent civic club luncheon, a speaker was telling business big hearers with the value of real co-operation by all business men. He was asked by a man in the audience to define the term co-operation. The speaker thought for a minute or two, then said:

"Well, I guess I would be real co-operation: When you see a Methodist bishop umpiring a Sunday baseball game between the Knights of Pythias and the Elks—that is co-operation."

Ready to Go

When the local baseball magnates named Jack McVeigh at their meeting light and heaven to relieve Manager Bill Setrakian, Belleville they chose a skipper with forethought. By every other means Fred Jack has endured since coming to Belleville the season has enjoyed stormy weather.

Now baseball seems to be headed forward on local lines, with five clubs already in the fold, executive heads should guard strongly against overenthusiasm. Belleville's Junior "B" current movement is primarily to co-operation, to stimulate general interest in the diamond game. One team entered in the Belleville League command the staunch following of the fans as "Doc" Reynolds, the town medico, is the sponsor. Applause for juniors only. If one of the other sponsors could get their eye clear and foster the game for juveniles, Belleville will accomplish a great deal towards the revival of the game that is needed if Belleville is to remain in Senior "A" class with Kingston, Peterboro and Oshawa.

Be cautious

At Tuesday night's baseball meeting representation was present from Belleville, Trenton, Picton and Napanee. Information regarding the re-organization of baseball in Belleville. For an initial year venture a four-leaned league should prove better and more profitable any way you look at it. Two evenings a week is sufficient for baseball in Belleville, with one odd Saturday afternoon fixture tossed in. Games to commence promptly not later than 8 o'clock, and to be finished with daylight ball. With a four-team league each team would be assured of two games a week and with a practice or two tossed in, the boys would be in shape. Players have these days to devote to any recreation. Let the foundation be right and all the load established in and if the local baseball bears the right foundation for baseball this year they will have something to cheer about.

Campbell's Comments

In his season's swan song for hockey in Oshawa, Scribe George Campbell brings out a few points that can be applied in Belleville to both hockey and baseball. It pertains to the Oshawa Junior "A" club in the sponsoring of team sports among the juniors, something we've long advocated.

George says — "We would like to add this observation: This season's hockey in Oshawa should have proved a success for all that we need a Junior "B" team. From this year's "Seniors" will come juniors, not many perhaps, but a few, who will be in a good position to catch a place with the Oshawa Junior "B" team is a prelude to graduation to the Senior "A" league. The jump from "City League" to Junior "A" is too great for all but exceptionally talented young players. However, the Junior "B" team gives young players with promise a chance to have O. H. A. competition of a calibre slightly better than Minor calibre and thus be prepared for "A" ranks. Actually, without a Junior "B" team to bridge the gap, there is little chance of any "homebrews" boys ever coming up out of the "City League" to catch a place on the Generals — and that is their ambition. And from a financial viewpoint, if not from any other — It would be obvious good business for the sport's "homebrews" on the Generals' line-up, every year.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By FRED REBNER
(Canadian Press Sport Staff Writer.)

Titled "shamateurism," Chick's argument is by interesting and timely new, but nonetheless pertinent and one that crops up in almost every discussion of hockey in the game's ardent fans.

Says the Stratford writer it is just as well that the Allan Cup series will not be held this year. He feels that if it were staged it would be somewhat of a farce in view of the way certain Junior "A" players shuttle back and forth in Quebec. Don't look now—but Q.A.H.A. prexy Norman Dawe has probably raised the hackles of many.

Shaking a "shame-shame" finger at the Queen's Golfers, Chick ventures to say that former amateur officials would go spinning in their graves if they knew what "was going on" at the present time. By "going on", Chick refers to what other newspapermen and hockey officials term "lend-lease."

The Beacon-Herald writer doesn't think it right that Frank (Buzz) Boucher, Leonard Senior Royals' rearguard, or Neil Colville, property of Ottawa Commandos, should be allowed to play pro hockey one night and return to amateur ranks the next.

Such "incidents" have been the rule since the start of the present era and the Canadian amateur's dwindling advantage. And Quebec officials are not to blame because the strongest senior league in the country today operates in that province, aside from the fact that such players of pro calibre s/e close at hand to help a pro sport along.

When the C.A.H.A. and the N.H.L. clubs signed their lend-lease agreement, the loan transfers would be enforced for the duration of the war, there were no complaints—not from players, coaches, clubs nor even newspapermen. Aside from allowing some latitude to players in the services, the C.A.H.A. has stuck pretty a little to give pro hockey a hand. Without pro hockey, the amateur game—as we still wish to use that term—would have little chance of survival.

The financial and quota arrangements between the C.A.H.A. and the pro loop governing body have been a boon to amateur clubs whose players make the pro grade. Amateur hockey today is no longer "amateurism" and its officials will be the first to admit that, for it is entirely a "business" game.

Were the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to clamp down the lid on lend-lease agreements, might conceivably result in the "freezing" of "belting the hand that feeds you."

QUEBEC ACESTAKE SECOND GAME IN PLAYOFF SERIES

Defeat Valleyfield Braves 4-2 With Wally Wilson Pacing Attack

Montreal, April 5 — (CP)—Quebec Aces, Quebec Senior Hockey League title holders, turned back the Valleyfield Braves, Provincial League champions Valleyfield Braves 4 — 2 here last night to grab their second consecutive win and a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five series for the Quebec provincial championship.

Aces had eked out a 4-3 verdict over the Braves in the opening game in the "old capital" last Sunday. The second game will take place in Quebec Saturday.

The game ended in a breathless thriller of action, Braves, trailing Aces 2-2, threw everything but the kitchen sink into the attack in an effort to tie the count before the final whistle. Goaltending for Quebec with a payoff tally less than three minutes before the end.

Wally Wilson paced the Quebec offensive with a brace of goals, while Norm Larson and Tremblay completed the count for Aces. Jack Pratt and Bernard Pinet provided the Valleyfield markers.

The Johnny Lecapelain turned in one of the most brilliant goaltending displays seen in Forum this year, performing all kinds of acrobatics in the Valleyfield nets to stave off the enemies would have been a much higher score.

Below are the highlights of the game in the second period when he stopped Billy Reay on a major pen-

LESSON NO. 68
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Your partner should have nothing to do except to count your tricks and the trumps you tell him you need to know. And most of it is done by the bidding. Here's how:

Since bidding can be as revealing as a cellophane wrapper when partner has made his bid, you can usually figure his hand down to a point certain. From that you can count your tricks.

You have the north hand in this pair:

2 S	3 C
4 D	4 S

By his bids, partner told you he has six spades, four hearts, two diamonds, one club; ace and queen in spades and in hearts; no other high cards. I showed you how, remember?

Add what you have and picture your pair with eight spades between them, five diamonds, six clubs; all the aces and kings except in diamonds; all queens except in diamonds and clubs.

That tells you the opponents have five spades, six hearts, eight diamonds, seven clubs, one and king of diamonds and one other high card.

You have it figured out that partner has two diamonds and the opponents have one and king of that suit. So you can take off your spade lead and still see that a slam should not be bid by your pair.

You know how many cards in each suit are held by both opponents. There is a way of figuring out how much each opponent has in each suit. I'll tell you how when you are ready.

The Quiz kids could probably figure that out quicker.

AT THE BELLE

"The Very Thought of You" — The problem of the relationship between soldier and civilian, an important and universal one, has been so tenderly and humorously surveyed in Warner's new film, "The Very Thought of You," which opens today at the Belle Theatre.

To cast either element promising of that complexity's new stars—Dennis Morgan, Eleanor Parker and Dane Clark. A brilliant supporting cast includes Faye Emerson and the veteran performers, Henry Travers and Beulah Bondi. Delmer Daves, who scripted most recently as director for the highly successful "Destination Tokyo," both directed and collaborated on the screen play for this film.

A warmly moving story of one youth today — a tender tribute to their unwavering faith in the future, has been brought to the screen with all the humanness a really fine screen play and select cast can achieve, in Warner Bros.' heart-warming romance, "The Very Thought of You."

"The Very Thought of You" is the kind of picture you'll take away with you when you leave the theatre. For it is made of the stuff that is "Your town," Canada, today. It is a timely story of the problems facing all couples in love during war. Here are their hopes and plans, their hours of loneliness and tears, their brief moment of joy, their ringing laughter. And in their struggles, a tender tribute to their unwavering faith in the future. Don't miss it.

"The Film is concerned with the problem of readjustment and the equally hasty marriage of Dave and Janet, who firmly believe their love of just a few days of ecstasy will endure.

A believable adult solution is offered in "The Very Thought of You."

"Road to the Relch," is the title of another and interesting feature film to be presented on the same program with a "Sports Parade" — "Glamour in Sports."

Note to American sports promoters, managers, athletic directors and others who are expecting to get a lot of top-flight athletic talent right after the war ends: Forget it . . . the fat-sighted Chicko Meeker pointed this out the other day in explaining why the "other" proposed pro football league was making a mistake by signing coaches and players in the services at fancy prices . . . The Navy's announcement that athletic talent will be encouraged to combat fatigue for the entertainment of service men during the remainder of the war bears out Chicko's idea . . . then there's the remark by an officer in the Army's Special Services branch: "Athletics will become more and more important as combat conditions lessen in other words, the service won't be in any hurry to release a man who is useful to entertain enlisted men or to teach them the games they'll be playing after the fighting ends just because that man has a big-pay sports job waiting.

MONARCHS ASK FOR MORE HELP FOR THEIR TEAM

Seek Harry Taylor to Replace Marchant Out With Groin Injury

Winnipeg, April 5 — (CP) — Winnipeg Monarchs approved by Frank Sargent, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, today for permission to strengthen their team for the remaining games of the Western Canada Intermediate finals against Moose Jaw Canucks. The Saskatchewan champions lead the best-of-seven series 3-1.

Monarchs seek Harry Taylor, star centreman of St. James-Canadians, before tonight's fourth game to be played before a capacity crowd of 5,000 persons.

If the Manitoba champions are successful Taylor will replace Richie Marchant, picked during the play-offs as a wartime replacement. Marchant suffered a groin injury in the semi-finals against Fort Arthur Wes Red Bruins and has been unable to participate since.

Monarchs' officials said the request also was being made on the basis that the Manitoba champions were not allowed to strengthen their club for the Memorial Cup playoffs other than by wartime replacements. G.M.C.A. branches, other than Manitoba, are allowed to add players to fill up to three players.

Drew Speaks On Education

Toronto, April 5 — (CP)—Premier George Drew of Ontario told the general assembly of the Ontario Educational Association that one of the best things to come out of the war is the "ferment" concerning education displayed by returning veterans.

The premier said that education had given the people of Britain the strength to stand firm against the German tide in the days when she stood alone.

"The extent to which we really prepare for the fruits of victory depend on the extent to which, in training the minds and bodies of young people, we also train their characters for the tests which lie ahead."

Howard Beattie, director of vocational guidance for Ontario, stressed that a sound development of guidance must be introduced into school and disciplined by school practices. He urged use of continued personnel records starting with elementary schools.

Dr. F. F. Kingston of London, Ont., was elected president succeeding R. J. Wright of Hamilton. J.C. Walsh of Toronto and Rev. R.N.D. Sinclair of Barrie, Ont., were named vice-presidents.

CONDITION IN ROTTERDAM
Hindhoven, Holland, April 5.— (CP Anela)—Conditions in Germanheld Rotterdam now are so bad that it is virtually impossible to keep a baby alive and even enemy troops are complaining of the poor food a Netherlander who escaped from that city reported Tuesday.

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 11

"Yeah. She had plenty of opportunity," he continued. "I wonder if you're asking me."

"I don't believe either Victorine or Ann poisoned Kitty, because they happen to be the only people who could have prevented her presentation. It depended on Ann's remembrance in Kitty and before her's still at make-up. Either one could have slipped it in the beverage by arrangement to participate. Had either one been the murderer, she would have done so, almost it was the impersonation that ruined the murderer's plans."

The X-Why bottle, still wrapped in Basil's handkerchief, went into Inspector Foyle's coat pocket, the yellow tassel dangling outside.

"Perhaps the murderer came across it and took the missing tablets to poison Kitty. In that way he could avoid a purchase of X-Why which might have been traced to him."

"You, you're making my head ache!"

Foyle rose and stretched himself with a mighty yawn.

"Let's tackle the servants...all in a day. Or rather a night." He glanced at the clock on the mantelpiece. "Believe it or not, it's one a. m."

Downstairs in the Murrillo room once more, Foyle said: "We'll start with you, Gregg. Dr. Willing says he knew you during the war. What did you do after that?"

"I was butler to the late Lord Henry Calsbeton, and, when he died, I came to America. This is my first post over here."

"Satisfied with this place?"

"Well—frankly, sir, wages have not been paid very promptly, and for so large a house, we are rather understaffed."

"How long have you been with Mrs. Jocelyn?"

"Only six weeks, sir. We were all engaged through an agency when she reached New York in November. With the exception, of course, of Mademoiselle Victorine, Mrs. Jocelyn's own maid who came with her from France."

"Then only Miss Kitty take a residing medicine called X-Why?"

"Why, no, sir. I suppose she would have taken it in her own room. Because she did endorse it for advertisements, didn't she?"

Basil made another mental note: Apparently the servants never realized Kitty did not take X-Why.

"Gregg, did you mix and serve cocktails the afternoon of the coming- out party?" continued Foyle.

"Yes, sir."

"Did anyone else help you serve them?"

"No, sir. That's just the sort of thing I mean I say as are understaffed. I should have had a footman or at least a parlormaid to help me."

"Did you leave the cocktails standing anywhere after they were poured into the glasses?"

"No, sir. I brought them directly from the pantry to the Murillo room—this room—as soon as I poured them out."

"Did every one have the same kind of cocktail that day?"

"Mrs. Jowett and Mr. Danlee had some pale, dry sherry. Every one else had cocktails, sir."

"Do you remember how they were served?"

"Yes, sir. Gin, Italian vermouth, orange juice, and a dash of absinthe."

"Absinthe!" muttered Basil, who disliked cocktails made with fruit juices and had small code of the cocktails?"

"The color, sir?" Gregg was puzzled. "Why, I'd say the usual color for Brenx cocktails—pale yellow."

Basil thought of the pale yellow of the X-Why tablets.

"Was any food served?"

"There was a bowl of unpitted Spanish olives on ice," said Gregg precisely. "And Mr. Danlee had a biscuit with his sherry. That was all."

The inspector tugged at his lower lip again. "Do you remember if Miss Jocelyn had more than one cocktail?"

"To the best of my recollection, no one had a second cocktail that day, sir. Except Mr. Legare. He always has several."

"Gregg. I'm going to be frank with you. The medical evidence looks as if Kitty Jocelyn was poisoned when she had that last cocktail."

Gregg paled. "I had no idea."

"Did you use more than one shaker when you mixed the cocktails?"

"No, sir. They were all mixed in the same shaker."

"That means that Miss Jocelyn's cocktail was poisoned after it was poured out and passed to her..." ruminated Foyle.

Gregg smiled wanly. "That's fortunate for me, sir."

"Of course you might have poisoned the cocktail yourself just before passing it to her. . . Foyle took the sting out of his words. "But I honestly don't believe you did."

"Certainly not, sir! cried Gregg, earnestly.

"Did you notice any one touching her glass after she had taken it?" asked Basil.

Gregg frowned in a concentrated effort of recollection.

"Miss Kitty was restless that afternoon, sir, because of the heat, partly. I thought. She fidgeted and roamed about the room with her cocktail. I was busy with my duties in the other. Every now and then she'd put the glass down and pick up one of the cards attached to the flowers that had come and read the name on it. All the people were scattered about the room. Miss Kitty was near one and then one time or another. I suppose it could have been done then, or when she set down her cocktail glass— Oh, no!"

"You first time there was emotion in Gregg's voice. He turned startled eyes on the inspector.

"There couldn't have been poison in that cocktail, sir!" he said, confidently.

"Why not?"

"Because Mr. Pasquale drank half of it."

For a moment there was no sound but the whispering of the fire. Then Foyle was hurling questions at Gregg. "Did you notice the incident clearly now. Miss Kitty had the same drink in her glass half full and turned away from it for a moment? Mr. Pasquale had set down his own glass near it. When he went to pick up his glass, he took Miss Kitty's—by mistake. And afterward, Miss Kitty claimed the cocktail as hers and he finished it. He apologized and offered his own which was untouched. Gregg himself had offered her a fresh one. But she said she didn't want any more, and afterward she went upstairs. Gregg was absolutely sure Mr. Pasquale had taken a full half of the cocktail. And he was sure that Mr. Pasquale had not been ill. On the contrary, he had been in the best of health the last few days, though he was always a rather moody and excitable sort of gentleman, if Gregg might say so . . . .

"What a case!"

Foyle took out his blue and white handkerchief and mopped his forehead. Impossible ideas were flitting through his mind, of the police have been in something she had at luncheon? But Willing said this patient began to be ill one or two minutes." Had some other person been there after all? Or could she poison have been in Kitty's cigarettes? Or in the olives with the cocktails? Or in the gulnine they gave her after she left? Or she might have had a genuine attack of malaria, as first Dr. Willing suggested certain. It couldn't have been in the cocktail if Pasquale drank half of it. And Mr. Pasquale and Gregg were not confined to the people present at cocktail time.

"Are you sure this was a real blunder on Pasquale's part?" Basil was asking Gregg. "Isn't it possible he drank from Miss Jocelyn's cocktail glass deliberately?"

"Oh, no, sir. He was quite astonished when she said it. It was her glass."

Basil seemed satisfied with the answer. Foyle wondered just what he was driving at. . . .

"That's all, Gregg. We'll see Mrs. Jocelyn's maid next."

"Mademoiselle Victorine? Very good, sir."

With her long upper lip and high-arched black eyes given, Victorine couldn't have looked less like the French maid of musical comedy. This mistress of the art of make-up was herself completely innocent of face paint, powder or lipstick.

"Seldown," said Foyle.

"Monsieur?"

"Oh!" She don't speak English. You tackle her, doc."

Victorine received the news that Kitty had been murdered with more solidity than Gregg. Basil had an impression of peasant stolicism—and peasant avarice. This maid knew that would show on her oral, feudal loyalty to anyone who paid high wages—as long as there was a reasonable prospect of those wages being paid.

"I suppose you will be returning to France soon?" said Basil conversationally.

"To France?" Victorine was puzzled. "Madame has said nothing to me."

"Oh, not with Madame Jocelyn. You know doubtless that she has suffered very grave financial reverses. It is most unlikely she will be able to afford any servants—even a maid."

Some emotion stirred in the depths of Victorine's eyes.

"I'll not be possible!" Her glance flitted about the room. "I never divined that madame. . . ."

"That you were didn't. If you had, you would scarcely have taken the risk of sharing in any of the criminal conspiracy for Madame Jocelyn's sake—as you did when you plotted Keller to impersonate Claude. But now I am sure you realize that your best chance of escaping serious charges is to tell the exact truth. Monsieur Inspecteur Foyle wishes to hear everything that happened to you the evening of the dance."

"Very well." In a sour voice, Victorine confirmed everything that Ann had told them.

"When was the last time you saw Mademoiselle?"

"About nine o'clock the evening of the dance. I went to the room of Mademoiselle Claude, where Mademoiselle Kitty reposed herself. She was still in a state of excitement, but she was no longer gay. She seemed restless and depressed. She said: "Victorine, it is annoying me that I am so ugly, isn't it? Do you know, I really thought that Claude, he was telling the truth when he said I was rid of malaria!"

"Then she said nothing to suggest suicide?"

"Non, that, sees itself. There can be no doubt that mademoiselle believed it was all going to an attack of the malaria. I thought so too, and I did not linger in her room. I set much to do that night, for I was charged with the rooms where the guests who came to the dance made their toilettes and left their cloaks. I didn't go back to see mademoiselle again until about three in the morning. And it was then I discovered she was gone."

"Didn't she notice anything out of the ordinary the day of the dance?" urged Foyle in a stage whisper. "Anything at all?"

Victorine caught the question in French.

Then Victorine's black eyes gleamed suddenly. "There is one thing that I remember. It is a little strange—now I recall it. Possibly ces messieurs will be interested. It was just a little time before the cocktails were served. I was passing the library door. It was closed but I heard voices quarreling—voices loud, and, oui, angry."

"You heard what was said?"

"Ah, that, no! The door is thick." "But the voice were loud. Possibly you recognized them?"

"I recognized the woman's voice." Her thin lips curled in a malicious smile. "It was Madame Jocelyn," she said slowly, savoring the name. "I am certain of it."

"And the other was a man?"

"A man, yes. I am not absolutely certain of that other voice. It was not a voice I knew well. But I think it was the voice of one gentleman who called himself Edgar Jocelyn . . . ."

"Was that just spite?" demanded Foyle after Victorine had left the room. "Maybe you shouldn't have told her Rhoda was broke."

"We wouldn't have got a word out of her if I hadn't retorted Basil. "I know the type."

Foyle sat up as the door announced Hagen, the second housemaid. She looked no more than eighteen or twenty, a strapping Brunnhilde with full bosom and beefy thighs straining the seams of her black uniform. There was a look of fear in her eyes, but her lips were pale, puried and dry, because she breathed through her mouth. Foyle wondered if that made her look more stupid than she really was.

"Sit down," he began.

"Ja-mister, sir." She gasped and swallowed. "Allima Hagen."

"You, my dear," said Foyle, not unkindly, "I've sent for you because you are now one you took for Miss Claude leave the house during the dance. That right?"

"Ja, sir. Ja-mister, sir." She paused and mastered her tendency to jabber. "I was just curious. I saw her with my own eyes."

"You saw her in the front light?"

"Well, n—no," she admitted, "it was after dark and I didn't see her face. But I saw her dress as she went out the side door. But I'd know that shabby old coat anywhere. She used to wear it every day."

Basil looked at his watch, and then looked at the girl, his eyes on her throat.

"I'm afraid that identification wouldn't stand up in court," replied Foyle, "As a matter of fact, I'm not sure Miss Claude you saw her. Miss Jocelyn wearing Miss Claude's coat."

"But yhen I saw Miss Kitty the next day,—"

"It wasn't Miss Kitty you saw the next day," explained Foyle, patiently. "It was Miss Ann with her hair dyed black and her eyebrows plucked, so that she looked like Miss Kitty."

"But then—" Hagen fixed her glassy eyes on Foyle. "What has become of Miss Kitty?"

"She's been murdered," answered Foyle, bluntly.

"P-poisoned?" The color fled from the girl's cheeks. "Oh..." she moaned. "I'll be the next! I know I will!"

Basil interrupted. "What makes you think you'll be poisoned?"

"Because I—I—sir!" She wailed. "Ever since I've been here, it's bad luck."

"Have you mentioned this to any one?"

"Oh, yes. I k—keep telling the housekeeper and Mr. Gregg. But they won't take no—notice of me. An' then the chef geta mad an' he won't speak to me no more. He's a-french an' he says because I'm G—german I don't know what good cooking is. But I'm not German—I'm American. I was brought to America when I was three years old an' I don't know a word of German an' I do know what good cooking is an' the food give me here tastes bad. Honest, it does! Ever since I've been here I'm sick me!" Two fat tears rolled down her cheeks and she sobbed. "I'm f—fixing to read about in the p—p—papers!" She choked and fled from the room in tears.

Foyle shook his head slowly. "I don't have to have all the food analysed."

Tired Out At End Of Day Just Wanted To Sit Down

"I Felt as If I Had No Energy Left," says Mr. Boyd. Now, years, Dizzy Digestion Bad; Tells of New Feeling of Health by Taking Syntona.

MR. LORNE BOYD

"During the past few months I felt so tired and rundown that when I got through with my day's work I just wanted to sit down in a chair until bedtime," said Mr. Lorne Boyd, 710 York Street, Toronto, Ontario, in a recent interview.

"I just felt that I had no energy left. My nerves as well. And I've got in bed I'd roll and toss and couldn't sleep. Then in the morning I was dull and unrested. At times I'd get dizzy spells, too. I'd have a lot of trouble before my meals. I didn't feel like eating, because even the lightest foods would lay like lead in my stomach. I'd belch up hot, sour stuff and have a bad taste in my mouth. I'd get constipated, too.

"I took so many things without getting any better, that when a fellow worker told me about Syntona, I didn't think it would help me.

"But after a while I decided to try it. And I'm glad I did, for now I don't get tired. From the first bottle my food began to digest better. I've since had no regular trouble at all, and I was enjoying them.

"I'm telling my friends about Syntona, for it's done wonders for me. It stopped troubling me. Now I can work with real pep, sleep well and feel rested when I get up in the morning. I don't get tired on the job as I used to. I have plenty of energy when I go through the day's work. I recommend Syntona to all."

Syntona is made from 13 of Nature's Finest Herbs and Roots. It acts on the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels . . . aids in the elimination of excess acids and poisonous waste matter and promotes better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

CANADIANS ENTER NETHERLANDS TOWN OF ALMELO

Five Mile Advance Made From Eastern End of Twente Canal

(By ROSS MUNRO)
(CP-War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army in Northern Holland, April 5—(Delayed)—Driving northward from the eastern end of the Twente Canal, Canadian tanks and infantry today advanced five miles to enter the large Netherlands town of Almelo where fighting is under way in the town square against German machine-gunners and snipers.

The gains were made from the bridgehead established on the north side of the canal by the 4th Canadian Armored Division at Delden, 5 1-2 miles west of Hengelo. Hengelo is eight miles southeast of Almelo. Another bridgehead has been driven across the canal further west, east of Zutphen as the Canadians flanked Almelo to the north. Zutphen is 20 miles northeast of Arnhem.

At the establishment of the 50-mile front held by Gen. Crerar's forces Canadian and British troops were poised operationally on the south bank of the 200-foot-wide Twente Canal.

West Over Lock Gates

The first tanks crossed the canal atop locksgates even before a bridge was built. Engineers blasted out in this sector but near the western end of the canal, which runs from the Dieze tributary of the Zutphen, other Canadian forces were engaged in stiff fighting for the control of the western bridgehead.

The Canadians, who are fighting in Zutphen, less than 20 miles southeast of the Dieze Zee, forces of Gen. Crerar's trap-closing thrust. They are fighting also in Doesburg on the Ijssel river, seven miles from Zutphen and the Arnhem sector 16 miles southwest of Zutphen. But there were no significant developments on the east sector.

The Germans probably have withdrawn most of their best troops from Holland by now and since the present rear-guard screen is pointless, due to the fall of Almelo on the eastern flank, the liberation of all Holland will follow. It may take a week or two.

OS. Bernard Tugnette On Cruiser Uganda In Pacific Waters

A Belleville boy, Ordinary Seaman Bernard Tugnette, son of Mrs. H. Tugnette, Bleecker Ave., is the youngest rating aboard the H.M.C.S. "Uganda," Canadian Pacific class cruiser detailed to the Pacific area to fight with the Royal Navy.

Still only 17 1-3 years old, Os. Tugnette has been in the service less than a year, enlisting in June of last year. Three months later he was at sea.

Although received a telegraphic message prior to his enlistment in the navy, Os. Tugnette is not serving in that capacity aboard the "Uganda," instead joining the ship's crew her complement in the Atlantic before being ready filed.

Before being the youngest rating aboard his ship is not the first distinction which the Belleville boy has raised. When 12 years of age as a telegrapher at the local Canadian Pacific Railway telegraph office, later stationed at Campbellford was the youngest telegrapher operator in Canada. He was born in Belleville and attended Pine Street school and Belleville Collegiate.

Mrs. Tugnette received a letter from her son this morning with his husband indicating he had visited Cairo and India on his way to the Pacific area.

At least one other Belleville sailor is aboard the Uganda. One is Petty Officer Len Hall, while the other is Stephan Genays.

Speeding Costly Diversion For Car Drivers

Under the provisions of the War Measures Act a person convicted of speeding on the open highway is liable to be fined a minimum fine of one dollar per mile for every speeding mile travelled over the speed limit of 60 miles per hour. And this does not include any court costs that might be entailed.

Under these regulations two motorists paid heavy speeding fines in today's County Police Court, held before Magistrate Judge Deroche in Court House. Roy P. Clarke of Toronto paid into the court coffers the tidy sum of $23.50 after being convicted of speeding along Highway No. 2 at the alleged rate of 83 miles per hour. Under the W.M.A. Mr. Clarke came in for a $15.00 fine after travelling over 40 miles per hour and the $8.50 was made up of court costs. The minimum fine is imposed on speeders travelling from 60 to 80 M.P.H.

Fenwick Charters, of Montreal, paid five dollars less than Mr. Clarke as he was convicted of speeding at 78 miles per hour. Charters contributed $27.50 into the court coffers. So it would appear as though speeding under the W.M.A. is a costly diversion.

POLICE COURT

Convicted of drinking while on duty Pictou transport driver paid fine and costs imposed by Magistrate T. T. Wills in County Police court here today. The charge was something of a local interest circles and was preferred under the Ontario Temperance Act, which rules that no driver of a motor vehicle, public or private, shall have in his possession any description while on duty, Assistant Crown Attorney Gordon Madill prosecuted.

Albert Wright, R.R. No. 5 Belleville, paid $5.00 and costs after being found guilty of driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor, contrary to the Highway Traffic Act. Provincial Constable Ernest Fullwell, who arrested the accused, testified that Wright was travelling at a high rate of speed on the highway when he was arrested. Wright's counsel, Mr. Fullwell, contended that the charge was not proven.

"I agree that the truck driver was much more negligent and perhaps the principal factor in this matter, but I can't justify the accused driver in continuing with such large stationary object as a parked tractor-trailer," stated His Worship. He stated it was too bad the trucker hadn't been originally charged. The case was put off a motor accident a few feet outside of the city limits here on Dundas street last month when Wright's car collided with a parked transport tractor.

Harold Marcell was fined ten dollars and costs after being convicted of having liquor on the Tydollings Reserve. Arthur Berry of Corbyville, paid a similar amount after pleading guilty and his driver's permit when found at the wheel of a motor vehicle. An L.C.A. conviction saw Clara Brown of Tyendinaga assessed ten dollars also.

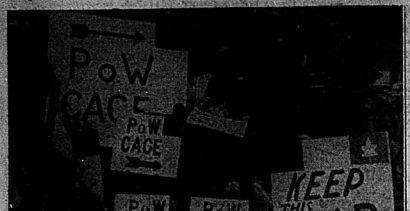
German Aim in North Sea Ports And in Holland Is to Cause Delay

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(AP War Analyst)

Germany's strategic positions on the western front are being liquidated with amazing rapidity, every fighting front proof that organized German resistance on a large scale in that great theater is a thing of the past.

However, there still remain big jobs for the Allied armies to do, and among the most important of these are the liberation of Holland and the capture of Germany's North Sea ports at Emden, Bremen and Hamburg. Indications seem that the Reche will try to withdraw from most of Holland but will make a stand in the great commercial ports of Germany's North Sea coast, just as he plans to base long on his own North Sea harbors.



The point of the German resistance in these places is to cause old stc® or depriving the Allies of the use of the ports and thus cause delay. That is to say, the Germans can't strengthen their own defensive position by giving up and save off the day of execution a bit.

The Germans are encountering a hard time withdrawing, many of their troops from Holland already, and those which are making their forward along the Rhs River towards Emden to close the gap along the Dutch-German border though Germans are escaping. Undoubtedly the great majority of the enemy forces have got out, but the Germans are expected to retain several divisions to make a stand at Rotterdam and Amsterdam.

Garrisons holding these two great Dutch cities will be suicide forces, that is, they will be expected to hang on as long as possible without hope of escape. This has been a feature of the German defensive tactics in Holland in Dire Need of relief. That will be provided at the earliest possible moment, but it may take some time if the Germans carry out their plan of making Dunkirk of each of the Rotterdam and Amsterdam.

Another highly important reason why we want Holland is to wipe out the launching sites of the V-bombs which the Germans have been directing against London and other British cities from Germany since last autumn. That is one of the tasks in which the 1st Canadian Army now is engaged, and it would appear that great success already has been achieved, since for weeks not a single bomb has ceased to fall on England.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, April 5 — (CP) — At a Canadian Typhoon airfield in Holland, they have found a use for pigeons.

Pictures of the scantily-clad girls are pinned on the notice-boards as well as hitting the tanks. And there they look so enticing that they hire the helpless males into such close proximity that they actually read the latest intelligence "gen" and even the times of Sunday church services.

The effectiveness seems to depend on the amount of clothes she hasn't got," said Mai. Georgs Carter of Edmonds, Suffolk. "But it decorates the board, anyway."

A never-ending supply of choice pinups is obtained from the proud possessors of collections. One of the best lots came from Flt. Lt. Sigmund Morsky of (136 Cheyenne Ave. W.) Toronto, who has just completed his tour.

"You can practically tell how long a fellow has been overseas by the number of pinups he's got from Yank and The Canadian Press News," said LAC. Laurie Melanson of Moncton, N.B.

Flt. Lt. T. R. (Tommy) Wilson of (367 Millwood Rd.) Toronto had Lady Luck as a co-pilot when he led his formation safely back to base and made a crash landing the he was wounded over the left eye and his aircraft was riddled.

His exploit won him an immediate D.F.C., appointment as flight commander of an R.A.F. squadron, and promotion to his present rank.

He was leading a formation in the early R.C.A.F. City of Windsor squadron on an armed reconnaissance from an advanced Italian base when his plane was hit by flak.

The controls were damaged and when he tried to land he found his flaps and undercarriage wouldn't operate, so he circled the field, made another approach, and crashed in. Not until then did his fellow-fliers realize their leader had been in trouble.

For 3 1/2 days P/O. Roy Jolly-mour of (36 Seventh St.) New Westminster, B.C., wireless operator in Flying Fortress Sunderland squadron of coastal command, floated around the Bay of Biscay in a dinghy with only a malted-milk tablet for each meal.

The big flying boat was on a routine patrol when the starboard outer engine caught fire and fell away from the wing. The flames severed the fuel pipes to the starboard inner engine and it, too, quit. The boat lost height rapidly and finally hit the water with the starboard wing tip and spun around in a wide circle.

No one was hurt and all got safely into dinghies. They were picked up 3 1/2 days later by another flying boat when 85 miles off the Spanish coast.

P/O. Holmyour worked at Tranquille Sanitarium outside Kamloops B.C., before enlisting.

Record Love Call Of Female Mosquito, Lures Males to Trap

New York, April 8 —(AP)— The love call of the female mosquito has joined the march of science, it was announced Tuesday. Dr. M. G. Kahn of the Medical College has demonstrated how the female's call, played on records, can lure the eager male out of the jungle and into a trap. Then all the males are disposed of, there won't be any little mosquitos, the scientist explained, and malaria, yellow fever, dengue fever and elephantiasis will die out.

CANADIAN TANKS SMASH 25-MILE GAIN IN 24 HRS.

New Yank Offensive Gains 22 Miles

Advancing Toward Upper Reaches Of Weser River

Columns of Patton's Army Within 130 Miles of Berlin

PARIS, April 6 — (CP) — The U. S. 1st Army has launched a new offensive which already has gained 22 miles toward the upper reaches of the Weser River—second to last water barrier west of Berlin.

British 2nd and U. S. 9th Army troops already have crossed the river farther north at several points and Americans were reported possibly within 20 miles of the great German city of Hannover.

The Canadians had dashed across German territory, east of the Zuider Zee, through the section of enemy country which juts westward into Holland north of Almelo, after gaining 12 miles within eight hours yesterday.

Other units under Gen. Crerar's command had crossed the 250-foot-wide Neder Rhine on either side of strategic Arnhem and thrust patrols into the city.

In Flight Toward Elbe R.

Germans in the north were in flight toward the Elbe, last river before Berlin. Some of Lt.-Gen. Dempsey's troops beat northward to within 25 miles of the great German naval base of Bremen.

The rested tank and infantry divisions of Lt.-Gen. Hodges' Army drove both east and west. Columns striking eastward from Paderborn reached Bruchhausen, four miles west of the upper Weser and 164 miles from Berlin.

Hodges' troops which moved in the opposite direction drove into the Ruhr trap on a 70-mile front, seeking elimination of up to 150,000 Germans sealed off in the industrial basin for annihilation.

The U. S. 9th Army, like the 1st, was driving into the Ruhr trap as well as thrusting columns eastward into the heart of Germany. Lt.-Gen. Simpson's troops fought within three miles of Dortmund in the Ruhr and also beat across the Hanoverian Plain over a Weser crossing south of Hamelin. That town already had been entered.

Drives Into Ruhr.

The 1st. Army advanced nine miles west into the Ruhr trap beyond Winterberg, where the 21 trapped enemy divisions were offering their most violent resistance.

Farther south, other routed enemy troops were beating a retreat into Czechoslovakia before Lt.-Gen. Patton's U.S. 3rd. Army. The 3rd. had columns within 130 miles of Berlin, the closest approach. Only 56 miles separated this army from Czechoslovakia and a complete severance of north and south Germany.

One 3rd. Army column, from the 11th. Armored Division, advanced to a point 23 miles southeast of Gotha and 58 northwest of the Czechoslovak border. At that position it was within 32 miles of Saxony and 50 of the big rail centre of Plauen, the capture of which would cut Germany in two.

Patton's troops, extended three-fourth across Germany to within 70 miles of Leipzig, concentrated on consolidating gains and of strengthening supply lines, mopping up such by-passed strongholds as Meiningen, reported defended by 8,000 Germans and Hungarian troops.

22,615 Prisoners on Wednesday

The destruction of what remains of the German army continued apace. The 3rd. Army alone took 8,254 prisoners yesterday. The day before, Gen. Eisenhower's forces took 22,615.

Prized cities fell including Bielefeld (pop. 128,700,) historic Minden (28,000), on the Weser, venerable Muelhausen (36,000) on the approaches to Berlin and Leipsig; and the Dutch linen centre of Almelo (35,621.)

Also taken were Herford (36,000), Detmold (16,000), Bad Oeynhausen (8,000), and Meheim (11,000).

The U.S. 7th. Army cut the Nuerenberg -Wuersburg railroad and won all but a corner of Wuerzburg.

Street fighting also progressed in such places as Eisenach, Sutphen, Soest, Hamm, Heidbronn, Lingen, Luenen, Doesburg and Arnhem.

The U.S. 30th Division fought into Hamelin, where legend says the rats were drowned in the Weser by the pied piper 700 years ago.

New crossings of the Weser were made against light opposition although fighting in Hamelin (26,000) itself was bitter.

The 2nd Armored Division was three miles east of the Weser south of Hamelin. The tanks opened a new assault at five a.m. and by 6.30 were advancing inland.

The 9th Army reported stiffening opposition on the north rim of the Ruhr pocket, especially at the important rail city of Hamm. Oestinghausen, 12 miles to the southeast, however, fell without a fight.

The 9th Army, back under 12th Army Group Command, captured 17,404 Germans yesterday for a total of 60,015 east of the Rhine and 152,20 since its activation.

Because of the concentrated strength of Germans massed in the Ruhr trap, Hodges expects it to take several days to destroy or capture the foe. Some units were giving up after brief skirmishes, but others fought toward final defeat with all the dash of the elite Wehrmacht formations at their floodtide of victory.

The British 11th armored and 6th Airborne Divisions fought across the Weser north of Minden less than thirty miles from Hannover. They were on the 9th Army's left flank. The Britons had at least three crossings and the Americans as many.

HARD JOB AHEAD

Quebec, April 6—(CP)—Maintenance of peace will be a job "as hard as the war itself," and will require from the United Nations the qualities of patience and strength which they now are displaying, Percy J. HALLE, LEIPZIG RAIL YARDS HIT BY 1,250 PLANES

84 German Planes Shot Up on Ground and at Least 50 More Were Damaged

London, April 6 — (CP)—A force of approximately 650 United States heavy bombers escorted by more than 600 fighters combed railway yards at Halle and Leipzig, two main traffic centres on the link-up routes for the American and Russian armies.

An 8th Air Force announcement disclosing the assaults said the main railway station at Leipsig, one of the largest in Germany, was one of the prime objectives.

Other targets — not immediately identified in Allied announcements —also were attacked by heavy bombers in their fourth straight daylight assault on Germany.

The German radio indicated these targets were in the Magdeburg, Dessau and Chemnitz areas.

No Major Raids at Night

There were no major raids on Germany Thursday night, bad weather keeping even R.A.F. Mosquitos from paying their nightly visit to Berlin.

Yesterday, however, more than 2,000 Allied planes hammered Germany during daylight hours.

Fighter-bombers had another big day shooting up German planes on the ground, destroying at least 84 and damaging 50 more. Eighteen enemy aircraft were shot down in combat. More than half the German planes wrecked on a dozen different air fields were jet-propelled.

British pilots of the 2nd Tactical Air Force reported Allied ground forces moving so fast that bomblines given them before they took off often were out of date when they reached the target area.

Battle Shaping Up on South End Okinawa Island

Guam, April 6—(AP)—The main battle for Okinawa appeared today to be shaping up on the southern end of the island where the Japanese were putting up increasing resistance among fixed positions in caves, gullies and ridges four miles north of the capital city of Naha.

Admiral Nimitz' communique today announced continued American gains on all Okinawa fronts reported remarkably low United States casualties for the first four days of a campaign only 325 miles from Japan itself: 175 soldiers and Marines killed, 798 wounded.

Field officers said the Japanese commander evidently had pulled the bulk of his garrison—estimated at more than 60,000 troops—into the southern end of Okinawa around Naha.

In the north, however, 3rd Marine Amphibious Corps men swept ahead 4½ miles to overrun the island's narrowest isthmus and invade tiny Yabuchi Island off the east coast.

In five days the Americans have overrun more than 100 square miles, or about one-fifth, of Okinawa.

Nimitz reported anti-aircraft guns and fighters destroyed 85 Japanese planes raiding American shipping and ground positions in the first five days.

Sudden Developments Focus Attention on South Pacific Sector

Washington, April 6 (AP) —Gen. MacArthur had his "on to Tokyo" marching orders today, hard on the heels of Russia's denunciation of her neutrality treaty with Japan.

With the Pacific war thus perhaps soon to see startling developments, Allied military leaders were in agreement on the quickest way to end the fighting in Europe: Kill or capture Hitler.

Official Washington, quick to speculate that the Moscow decision is a forerunner of Soviet participation in the Pacific conflict once formal German resistance ends, at the same time read other implications into the Russian action.

In brief, this was the picture in this war capital today as developments tumbled one upon another:

1. The point chiefs of staff assigned MacArthur, together with Admiral Nimitz, to command the final offensives against Japan.

2. Gen. Marshall, U.S. army chief of staff, told the Senate Military Committee that death or capture of Hitler would contribute tremendously to a collapse of the already-faltering Nazi military machine.

3. There was general belief among law-makers that President Roosevelt had extracted from Premier Stalin at the Yalta meeting a promise that the neutrality treaty would be denounced and that Russia would enter the war against Japan.

MacArthur, Nimitz Named.

4. There was also belief that Russia's action may smooth some of the spots out of the path to the United Nations World Security Conference at San Francisco April 25.

The U. S. joint staff announced that:

1. MacArthur will command all army forces in the Pacific theatre.

2. Nimitz will command all naval forces.

3. Strategic direction will be retained by the joint chiefs of staff. The nature of a specific operation—whether essentially sea or land—will determine which man directs it.

One effect of the directive apparently was to remove the navy from MacArthur's sphere of command. In the Southwest Pacific, where MacArthur had been Supreme Allied Commander, as in the case of Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, in command in Southeast Asia, naval forces were under his jurisdiction. Nimitz now appears to have direct command of all that is afloat, including such Allied sea forces as British, Australian and Canadian naval units now in the Pacific.

The announcement gave no indication of possible future arrangements for over-all Allied commands.

Strategic Possibilities.

While the Washington announcement, containing references to the Japanese homeland and the China coast, suggested present strategy was being patterned with those areas in mind, the Russian action raised new strategic possibilities.

The Moscow announcement did not make clear immediately whether the non-aggression pact runs for another full year to its original maturity date. In any event, many in official circles believed the Russians would strike when they felt the situation most militarily propitious.

That time, these circles suggested, undoubtedly would await end of serious resistance in Germany.

Disclosure of Marshall's views on the latter subject came from two senators who declined to be quoted by name. They said the General contended that Hitler, as a symbol if not the man, is the chief inspiration for the fanatical resistance about which Gen. Eisenhower spoke in a letter to President Roosevelt.

Eisenhower sounded the same note in expressing the conviction that "so long as any of the Hitler gang retains a semblance of political power, I believe the effort will be to continue resistance not only throughout Germany but in all of the outlying areas, including the western port areas of France and Denmark and Norway."

NINE JAP SHIPS SUNK, 3 DAMAGED AT HONG KONG

In Addition Six Small Freighters Sunk in the China Sea

Manila, April 6 — (AP)—Nearly 50 Philippine-based heavy bombers with fighter escort spanned the South China Sea for the second straight day to deliver the heaviest load of the war on Hong Kong Tuesday, headquarters reported today.

The harbor and waterfront area of the former British Crown colony, 700 miles northwest of Manila, absorbed 168 tons of bombs. Nine Japanese ships including one of 7,000 tons were sunk; a destroyer and two other merchantmen were damaged.

In addition, six small freighters were sunk in the China Sea.

Hong Kong's shore installations, hard hit on the preceding day with 126 tons of explosives, received further damage. All attacking planes returned.

Heavy neutralizing raids on Formosa continued in the Kagi area, where many packed parks were destroyed on the ground.

In the Philippines, United States ground forces on Southern Luzon cut the Japanese escape route to the east coast from the shores of Laguna De Bay. One Negros, 45th Division troops pushed to the Imbang River north of captured Silay against "considerable resistance", front dispatches said.

SOVIET'S ACTION DEALS TERRIFIC BLOW TO JAPANESE

Japs Know Russians Believe They Have Good Reason for Ending Pact

By EDDIE GILMORE

Moscow, April 6 (AP) — Soviet Russia's renunciation of her five-year non-aggression pact with Japan unquestionably has dealt a terrific blow to the sagging Japanese, who were left today in the position of not knowing precisely what the Russian action means.

The Japanese know this, however—that the Russians seldom if ever act without good reason, and they know that Russians believe they have a good reason for ending the pact.

The Russians themselves made this clear in renouncing the treaty, declaring bluntly that Japan is helping Germany in her war against the U.S.S.R.

All Soviet newspapers printed the official announcement of the denunciation, but none commented or speculated on the future course of events.

Technically the pact has another year to run, but when one government tells another that such a pact has lost its meaning and that to continue it is meaningless, one would hesitate to say that the spirit of the pact still existed.

There was a lack of official comment, although some may be forthcoming in the immediate future.

This much, however, stands out clearly:

Foreign Commissar Molotov's note told the Japanese flatly that they were an ally of Nazi Germany—the most hated thing on earth to the Russians.

RUSSIAN ARMIES 4½ MILES FROM CENTRE OF VIENNA

Deployed Along 83-Mile Arc and Have City Surrounded on Three Sides

London, April 6 — (CP) — Two Russian armies sought to close a giant pincers around Vienna today as tank-led Soviet storm units, cutting into a German defence belt at the southern city limits, drove within 4 1/2 miles of the centre of the Austrian capital.

Deployed along an 83-mile siege arc, the Russians were within 46 miles of completely encircling Vienna. One Russian wing seized positions 13 miles south of the Danube town of Tulin, 10 miles northwest of Vienna. The capture of Tulin would sever all Vienna's westward communications along the south bank of the Danube and also the main Vienna-Prague railroad.

Breaking across the Schwechat and Liesing Rivers, a canal and a network of suburban railroads and highways constituting a highly-fortified defence belt, units of Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's 3rd Ukrainian Army battled to Vienna's southern city limits.

The suburbs of Ober-Laa and Unter-Laa, adjacent to the boundary and 4 1/2 miles southeast of famed St. Stephan's Church in the centre of the city, were captured in the face of violent German artillery fire from the capital's parks. Two of Vienna's vital supply links with the war arsenals of Germany and Czechoslovakia were cut.

Battle Into Schwechat.

The Russians also battled into the outskirts of the industrial suburb of Schwechat, site of an aircraft plant, captured Laxenburg and thrust a two to three-mile wide wedge through the famed Vienna woods. The old Imperial Austrian castle is located in Laxenburg, six miles south of Vienna.

While Tolbukhin's forces cut the high-speed highway linking Vienna with Linz and Munich, Malinovsky's troops severed a nine-mile stretch of the railroad along the Morava river's east bank linking the Austrian capital with Noravska-Ostrava, Czechoslovakia's third city, and Bruenn (Brno), 550 miles southwest of Soviet columns.

Elsewhere along the eastern front Soviet troops partially flattened a German budge that had extended deep into eastern Slovakia, captured industrial Zywiec in southwestern Poland and seized Doljna-Lendava, 56 miles northwest of the Croatian puppet capital of Zagreb in northern Yugoslavia. Capturing 6,500 prisoners in Yugoslavia, the Russians raised to 63,500 the number of enemy troops taken in that sector and in southwestern Hungary in the past five days.

Armored Columns Cut Thru Defence Lines of Germans

Swing Back From Germany Into Holland at Coevorden

By ROSS MUNRO
(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the 1st. Canadian Army in Holland, April 6 (C.P. Cable) — Canadian tanks, careening northward, gained 18 miles overnight, sweeping back from Germany into Holland at The Netherlands border town of Coevorden, 52 miles southwest of the German North Sea port of Emden.

These armored columns had advanced 25 miles in the last 24 hours, going northeast from Almelo into Germany, by-passing Uelsen, 12 miles northeast of Almelo and then swinging northwest back into Holland again.

They have cut through the defence line the Germans sought to establish before their troops pulling out of northern Holland.

The Canadians burst into the clear and, while the leading tanks which reached Coevorden made the most spectacular gains, other advances also were marked up northeast and west of Almelo in the great operation to clear The Netherlands coast of V-2 sites and liberate northern Holland.

The 4th. Canadian Armored Division now may be identified as operating as far northeast of Almelo as the German town of Gelo, 11 miles distant.

Other troops captured the German town of Neuenhaus, 15 miles northeast of Almelo, and Uelsen, between Neuenhaus and Getelo. Twelve miles from the Ems river th 12th Manitoba Dragoons, an armored regiment, was running wild.

One Canadian force struck northwest from Almelo for eight miles and seized a bridge intact over a canal at Daarleveen. Still another pushed west from Almelo for four miles and it was in the outskirts of Wierden.

In the armored dash to coevorden was occupied. The Germans had hoped ti stabilize the situation at Almelo but when the 4th armored division captured the town yesterday the German plan was disrupted.

In the thrusts from Almelo the Canadian forces met extremely light opposition. Some columns have driven for miles without meeting anything. When resistance is bumped it is gneerally light, consisting of machine-gun fire and snipers.

North of the Twente canal between Zutphen and Lochem, Ontario infantry advanced several miles and the opposition seemed to be loosening. Three miles north of the canal, Laren was captured. A new attack was launched by Canadian forces against stubbornly-defended Zutphen from the northeast and the first line of water barriers in front of the town was reached without difficulty.

In the push northeast of Almelo, the Canadians were on the road to the great ports of Bremen and Hamburg. At Coevorden they were 65 miles northeast of the Rhine, in a good position to sweep up the first northwest German ports — vitally needed by the Allies in the continuing offensive east of the Rhine.

Emden, at the mouth of the Ems, is only 32 miles north of Gen. Crerar's rampaging forces, and Wilhelmshaven is less than 100 miles to the northeast.

War Work, Jitterbugging Shows Women's Feet Are Getting Wider

New York, April 6 (AP) — Women's feet are getting wider. It isn't an optical illusion—it is a fact—and shoe last manufacturers are making new lasts to keep pace with the trend.

The generation to whom a quadruple "A" was a sign of gentility has made way for the jitterbugging youngsters in their wide, flat shoes.

"And those youngsters have much healthier feet than their mothers," in the opinion of John R. Laycock of the Sterling Last Corporation, one of the biggest companies in the United States shoe industry.

The war has had its part in widening women's feet, too, shoe men contend, because women have been walking instead of riding, standing in war plants and turning to wider play shoes.

What this means to the remaining quadruple "A" group and the women with tiny feet is simply that they will have a harder time than ever getting shoes. The situation is made even more difficult because shoe stores generally, during the war period, have bought most heavily in sizes they were sure would sell quickly.

Russian-Japanese History Since 1904 Just Long Series of Squabbles

By TRUDI McCULLOUGH

New York, April 6—(AP)—Since the Russian-Japanese war of 1904 there has been less love lost between those two countries than perhaps any other except Russia and Germany.

Strained foreign relations for the first 25 years were supplanted by a state of armed belligerance for the next 15. Since 1931 Moscow and Tokyo have reported at least 2,500 border clashes. Most were tiny local forays, but a few, utilizing tanks, planes, and artillery, were on battle scale.

But like the trials of marriage in a soap opera, the pattern of dispute, crisis and reconciliation has remained substantially the same. The chief diversion was that after 1935 Russia had strengthened herself to the point that she no longer had to make all the concessions, but began to demand and get some. Still the relationship culminated in the Russian-Japanese neutrality pact and trade treaty of 1941. This pact was renounced by Russia yesterday.

When her border clashes with Japan reached a peak at Lake Buirnor Russia boldly revealed her partnership in a mutual assistance pact with outer Mongolia. Japanese efforts to open outer Mongolia promptly subsides.

The period of eased tension that followed was utilized in further settlement of the North Sea fisheries and North Sakhalin oil disputes.

In mid 1937 Soviet and Japanese troops clashed at the Amur river. Almost simultaneously Japan opened her war on China, and it became known that China and Russia had a non-aggression pact. Japan suspected Russia of aid to China. From then on disputes came thick and fast.

There were difficulties over the workings of the oil concessions. Japan did not meet final payment on the Chinese Eastern Railway. There was a constant exchange of diplomatic notes. Then came a border clash at Changkufeng.

In 1939 when Russia signed a non-aggression pact with Germany, Japan was left isolated. In May, 1939, Soviet and Japanese troops clashed at Nomonhanin in Manchuria. By September the Japanese had lost 18,000 men. In 1941 Japan signed a non-aggression pact Russia had been offering for the past decide.

LITTLE DAMAGE CAUSED BY HEAVY FROST

Despite the fact the district was visited with a sharp frost over the night little damage was done to early growth, it was reported today by one who has studied the matter. On the night the mercury dropped to a low of 26 degrees above zero at the freezing point, and resulted in approximately one-quarter inch of ice appearing on pools of water.

Reason for the frost doing no appreciable damage, is because of the cooler weather of the past few days which made the hardier fruits, such as protection against the weather dropping below freezing. Most damage caused was to a few days really vaguely weather with a sudden frost at this time.

Peaceable were not far enough advanced to be affected by the frost. It is said that while only a very few gardeners had seeds already showing above the ground to be nipped as result of the frost.

NUMBER CHARGED WITH ILLEGAL FISHING

That old cry "suckers are running" has been heard in Belleville along the banks of the Moira river and other tributaries of the Bay of Quinte, but this year the fish lovers may have been having quite a field day, owing to restrictions, and especially supplying the demand for fish, which is always high in a city like this, for the past couple of weeks when questionable fish were reported in the Moira and other district waters during the spawning season.

However, like all good things, the limit has been reached, Conservation Game Warden Fred MacDonald reports, and the first fifteen informations against Belleville fishermen for net charging them with illegal fishing, have been laid, and it is expected that they did illegally fish by means of nets, spearing and gaffing (to wit spearing and grappling) contrary to the Game and Fisheries Act. The sixteen have been summoned into court for next Thursday.

The War Today—
Russia Shows She is Prepared For Any Eventuality in Orient

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Russia's denunciation of her security pact with Japan is a momentous development which fully justified the building-up of tension expressed among the western Allies.

True, this denunciation by Red Army doesn't necessarily mean that the Soviet Union is going to declare war on Japan. We should have learned by this time that Russia's moves cannot be taken for granted, but that we must wait for Moscow to call the turn. That is, for Russia to public must wait. What Marshal Stalin may have confided to President Roosevelt Churchill and President Roosevelt is an unknown quantity.

Nobody Ready To Predict Action.

However, the denunciation certainly does mean that the Soviet has cleared decks for action, and that it would be an easy step from this to actual war, especially since the Russians charge that Japan has been aiding Germany against Russia—a patent lie, by the way.

One important aspect of the Russian move is in its probable salutary good effect on relations among the Big Three. It strengthens the partnership—by partnership I mean circumstance in view of the approaching world conference opening here in San Francisco, since that aids fair to produce problems which will call for all the good will that can be mustered.

Another immediate effect will be to relieve the Mikado's government sit up and face the old question as to whether crime pays. Russia soon will be free of the European conflict, and if she turns her mighty striking power against Japan, along with that of Britain and the United States, it will be just too bad for the little Nips of Japan, as they well know. And to this the fact that the official Japanese newspaper Asahi even try to conceal the government's fear and uneasiness at the trend of the war, and you have something.

Cabinet Crisis In Japan.

There is further indication of this seeking peace, this is the appointed hour for the more—another item from Japanese official quarters is its denunciation. Indeed, there may be a cabinet crisis in Japan over the Russia's notification coincided with the fall of warmonger Gen. Hideki's cabinet and the Mikado's designation of Admiral Baron Suzuki to succeed him.

The Baron belongs to the Liberal group and wasn't identified with the militaristic clique which forced the war.

The Russian earthquake comes at a moment when Japan already is feeling the pinch of the United States landing on Okinawa Island only 350 miles from the Mikado's domains and only 220 miles from the mainland. Japan's air power and their broadcasts don't mince words over the disaster.

They are more than scared. Both their fighting machine and their economic structure are in bad way. They are going downhill fast. It would be unnatural if their thoughts did turn to destruction, of peace.

Action Implies Russia Prepared.

In considering their predicament the Japanese must overlook also the denunciation implies Russia is well prepared for any eventualities in the Orient. It is unthinkable that Moscow would throw bait to Tokyo in such positive fashion, unless the Soviet war potential in Siberia was in shape. The Russians have large war industries in the area, and presumably have continued to maintain strong fighting forces of all categories—air, sea and air.

If Russia comes into the Pacific war, or even if she remains passive but grants the western Allies bases from which to operate, it will shorten the conflict by months. Even the Japanese are flying distress signals.

Two Belleville Sailors on Prince Henry Are Expected Home Soon

The famous Canadian converted cruiser "Prince Henry" which has 26,000 sea miles to her credit, while roaming the seven seas since she was commissioned an infantry landing ship 14 months ago, is no longer a part of the Royal Canadian Navy, it was announced today. She has been formally taken over by the Royal Navy.

And with the announcement came by to the hearts of many Belleville ites whose sons have been members of the crew of the "Prince" and who with her transfer to the Royal Navy, are being paid off and returned to Canada aboard a passenger ship.

Belleville "sails" members on the original crew of the "Henry" and who are expected home in the near future are Able Seaman Leslie Jackson, 24, son of Mrs. Art Cole, 308 George Street, and Leading Supply Assistant Jack Barrett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Barrett, 70 Church St. Both lads are veterans of the "Prince" and have seen many months of exciting adventure during their years of service aboard.

In a ceremony yesterday at a South England port, high ranking officers of the Canadian Navy, with Commissioner the Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey officiating, inspected the crew of 360 lined up under four-inch guns with the gaily painted landing craft slung overside.

The "Prince" participated in the landings in Normandy, Southern France and Greece and saw extensive service during the Sicily and capitals. She was group leader in the D-Day landings and carried hundreds of the first troops of the French coast whence they were taken aboard in the ship's assault craft and landed a few minutes after H-hour.

The "Prince" did much ferry service between Alexandria, Italy and when civil war broke out in Greece she carried patriotrooper from Italy to Piraeus the port of Athens.

Men of H.M.C.S. Uganda Warmly Welcomed By People of Australia

By WILLIAM STEWART
(C.P. War Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, August 5.—(CP Cable)—Men of H.M.C.S. Uganda, the first Canadian warship to visit Australia, have been warmly welcomed by the people of the British Commonwealth.

The cruiser's first call was at Fremantle in Western Australia, and the sailors, people say, shore had no warning of the arrival they promptly dubbed the ship 800 dirty bags, traditional Christmas gifts, filled with canned plum pudding, chocolate, note paper and other items.

The cruiser was in port at Fremantle long enough for one watch of the ship's crew leave and the Australians extended friendly hospitality. During the warship's stay in Sydney all the ship's company were able to go ashore, and visit the city.

Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser, commander-in-chief of the British Pacific fleet, of which the Uganda is a part, paid an informal visit to the cruiser soon after her arrival, then a few days later paid a formal call to inspect the ship and her company. The crew was turned out in spotless tropical whites, which they had been wearing since the Uganda left the Suez Canal on her voyage to Australian waters.

At Fremantle the admiral prompted by made himself popular with the Canadians by his easy manner in conversation with a half-dozen or so of the men in each division as he inspected their ranks.

The ship also was welcomed by Hon. T. C. Davis, Canadian High Commissioner in Australia, who told the men of the significance of their presence in the Pacific. Several visits were paid the cruiser by Australian newspaper men. A radio broadcast was made by a group from the Uganda.

The Uganda's visit to Sydney wasn't without romance. One young Canadian sailor, Leading Cook Harry counsel, married a Sydney girl after an engagement of only a few days and one engagement was reported.

Nazis' Hopeless Hope

How far the might of Hitler that was in 1939 has fallen can be read in the attention that is given in Germany to the Nazi talk of a hideout guerilla war by the selected Nazis and Hitler in the Alpine areas. The Hitler that is the centre figure of this reported plan is the same Hitler who in 1940 in the spring time thought he saw victory standing on his shoulder and then danced a jig for the edification of his officer-friends and the gullible German public who were given movies showing Adolf gleefully capering at the glorious prospect of soon being ruler of the world. There is also a story that Hitler may try to stage a final scene of leading a sacrifice of suicide in battle in the ruins of Berlin, in the hope of winning immortal fame by becoming a casualty. Whether this story is true, no one knows and many will feel that Hitler is too selfish to sacrifice himself for anything. Now he is said to be facing the future in great disturbance because he has been caught in the trap he set for the nations of mankind. If it should be his end it is a tragic charge, it would be a spectacle far from the glory of his wild dreams—the wild thought that he might dominate the earth. That was the spectacle in which he planned to appear with his cohorts of gangsters, Himmler, Ley, Goering, Goebbels and the rest.

Hitler's hope is false. Nothing can save his crumbling ruins of Germany and himself from the vengeance by the very nature of the plot they framed against the freedom of the world. Hitler has been the very spirit of wrongdoing and criminality, and has been opposed to every just principle. It is justice and the good that is in men and women that have brought him to this pass.

Speaking of "Werewolves"

There is a German warning that a secret German organization has been formed with individual murder as its objective, and that its name is the "werewolves." The very name shows the grotesqueness in which the Nazi mind flourishes, its foulness is shown in the terrorism it threw again that the Nazis are the terrorists that they have been charged with being and every known brutality, atrocity and terror can be attributed to them.

This is such a conception of German organization as could spring from a murderous anti-social mind, such as that of Hitler or some other of the Nazi gang.

The hatred Nazis have there for their worst to defeat the armies, the navies, the air forces and the spirit of the right-thinking nations and have failed, they have been frustrated in their despite all the foul means they have used to try and dominate the earth. Now the "werewolves" organization if it does exist, is said to have the object of upsetting post-war planning. But no Nazi organization can win what Hitlerism and German militarism have failed to win.

If there were such creatures in nature as "werewolves" Hitler thought they could aid him there is no doubt he would pledge them everything for their help. For his mind is of the kind that would delight in such a fiendish, grotesque conception.

If a terrorist band of Nazis irreconcilables should try to defy the organised nations who are building peace, they will be routed out and shot and be handed their just penalty by the Allies.

Irrawaddy Crossings

As the pace quickens in Europe it is worth remembering that the Fourteenth Army and the British 36th Division in Burma crossed the Irrawaddy at five times —six of the crossings being against strong Japanese opposition.

The Irrawaddy crossings are from two to four times the width of the Rhine crossings. The river has never been bridged, except for pontoons. Despite its smooth surface, it has a fierce undercurrent that only the finest swimmers can master.

The victory of Monday has been achieved, as the Prime Minister mentioned in his congratulatory message to Admiral Mountbatten, "in spite of the grievous disappointments you have had to sustain in regard to the arrival of strong reinforcements from Europe for which you had been led to hope. These were detained or diverted by the prolongation of German resistance in Europe and by other causes achieved should be far ahead of the sched-

It is all the more creditable that the results proposed on the basis of these large reinforcements.

Germany's Death Throes

(New York Times)

If ever there was an argument for a government of the people under law, instead of a government by a few men under the lash of a tyrant, bastard, chaotic Germany provides it. Their armies beaten, their cities rubble, hope of even a stalemate long since vanished, the German people as such have no means of surrender. Only as individuals can they raise their hands over their hands on the approach of the Allied armies or hang a bed sheet out of a window. All because, twelve years ago, they turned from a government of laws to a government of men, and surrendered their destiny as a nation to a wild-eyed group of fanatics who promised them a world of slaves to rule and have led them to ruin instead.

There probably is no other people, except the Japanese, who would continue to follow so blindly to total destruction the false leaders who brought down on their heads the wrath of the civilized world. The few reports of attempted revolt only tend to prove how docile the great bulk of the German people continue to be after less than a generation of Nazi rule. That is one of the most frightening aspects of the tragedy being enacted these days between the Oder and the Rhine. The people of Frankfurt wanted to quit, but when a few Nazi leaders came back to defend the town they meekly subsided and let their streets become another hopeless battleground that only momentarily delayed the Third Army advance.

It has been said in extenuation of other meek acceptances of dictatorship, such as in Argentina and pre-war Germany, that people with rifles do not go into the streets against machine guns. That is not true now in Hitler's Reich. Twelve years of regimentation and propaganda have left the German people so devoid of will and so unable to recognize the most obvious facts that they have not the spirit left to force their leaders to halt the hopeless fight before Germany has been utterly destroyed.

The Letter You Did Not Write

(Sherbrooke Record)

(We are happy to pass this poem on to our readers. We enjoyed reading it and we believe you will also. It was written by a very busy man. In fact, its author is one of Sherbrooke's leading industrialists. We know he is not desirous of having his name published, but we are going to take a chance and trust that his modesty will not be offended. "The Letter You Did Not Write" is from the able pen of Austin W. Follett, General Manager of the Canadian Sturdy Chain Company Limited.)

If you were here in the blistering heat
With only meals from cans to eat,
In mud and rain, or sleet and hail,
You'd be discouraged to hear, "No mail".

The roar of guns, the shriek of shell
Are bad enough, a living hell,
But under this we do not fail,
What hurts us most—its words, "No mail".

You could help relieve the strain,
Your effort would not be in vain.
For you a line of home to write,
Would cheer the mind and banish blues.

It's not the cold, or sand and flies,
Rumors, whisperings, truths or lies
That gets us down and makes us sigh.
It's the longed for letters you do not write.

Taste depends upon those finer emotions which make the organization of the soul.—Sir Joshua Reynolds.

JUST FOLKS

APRIL SIXTH

This was her birthday. Once, the day
We kept with love and laughter gay.
Brought gifts to her and watched her eyes

Brighten and widen with surprise,
And heard her say: "This shouldn't be!
Too much, too much you've spent for me."

Once more the mother's birthday's here,
When we, her children, year by year,
Put all things else aside, that we
Together round her may be;
A day of joys time can't restore;
A day the family keeps no more.

The Sixth of April once again,
And only memories now remain:
The lovely smile, the twinkling eyes,
The look of wonder and surprise;
The happiness we used to know
When this day came, so long ago!

Pyle and His Pals Approach Okinawa Invasion with Feeling of Tenseness

By ERNIE PYLE

Off the Okinawa Beachhead (by Navy radio)—This is the last column before the invasion. It is written aboard a ship, somewhere at the evening before we storm onto Okinawa.

We are nervous. Anybody with any sense is nervous on the night before D-Day. You'd be a fool not to. You try to think of things, but your mind stubbornly refuses to. It's an awful image of tomorrow. It drags on your soul and you have nightmares.

But those fears do not mean shy lack of confidence. We all talk Okinawa. Nobody has any doubt about that. But we know we will have to pay for it. Some on this ship will not be alive 36 hours from now.

We are in convoy. Many, many big ships are lined up in columns with our warships in protection outsides. We are an impressive sight—yet we are only one of many similar convoys.

We left from many different places. We have been on our way many days. We are the biggest, strongest force ever to sail the Pacific. We are going into what we expect to be the biggest battle of war in the Pacific.

Our ship is an APA, or assault transport. The ship itself is a war veteran. She wears five stars on her service ribbon—Sicily, Salerno, Italy, Normandy and Southern France. She wears the Presidential Heart, Bronze Star and Legion of Merit Silver Star. She has fared well on the other side. We hope her luck holds out in the Pacific.

We are carrying Marines. Most of them are going into combat for the first time. Others are veterans from as far back as Guadalcanal. They are a rough, unshaven, competent bunch of Americans. I am landing with them. I feel I am in good hands.

I've shared a cabin with Marine Major Reed Taylor of Kemington, Md. He is a Quadal vet with a Silver Star and a Purple Heart who weren't through "Green Hell." They had a lot of fun, and a lot of a stripe and we get along fine.

We have the latest combat equipment in the Marines. And we've taken advantage of it by sleeping most of the way. We've been doing plenty sleeping. We've also had plenty of eating.

There is a daily argument on ship whether or not you can sleep the night and eat the ordeal ahead. The doctor says it's nonsense. Some can and some can't.

Between naps I've read two books. One was Bob Casey's "I Never Left Home" (how I wish I never had!) and Bob Considine's "Interesting People." Only I wish I could hear Bob Casey tell all those stories in person. I'll bet on his out in France and roaring and shaking with his head. Considine's laughter might be good for us now. A marine officer said he "hasn't laughed for three days."

Our trip has been fairly smooth and many of the troops were seasick. Down in the holds the marines sleep on racks four tiers high. It isn't a nice way to travel. But they're young and anyhow uncomplaining. They come up on the deck on nice days and sun and read and wash clothes, or lie and read or play cards.

We don't have movies. The ship is darkened at sunset and after that there are only deck lights. The food is good. We get news every morning by radio broadcast from Guam, and once or twice a day the ship's officers broadcast the latest news over the loudspeaker.

They've kept us informed daily of the progress of the Carolina bombardment that preceded our landing. Every little bit of good news cheers us. The ship, of course, is full of rumors, good and bad, but nobody believes any of them.

Meetings are held daily among the officers of the ship to discuss details of the landing. Day by day, the combat troops are fully briefed on what they are to do.

Quota of Draftees Authorized For Overseas Practically Exhausted Commons is Told

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Of Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 5 — The question of home defence troops for the Army was authorized last November to send overseas all who had been enlisted, but a new order last month will be used to draw the troops are needed as reinforcements, Defence Minister Abbott, parliamentary assistant to Defence Minister Mackenzie told the Commons on Thursday.

Presenting Defence Department estimates for Com. Mcnaughton who has no seat in the Commons, Mr. Abbott said that up to the end of March 14,366 of the 16,600 home defence troops the Army was authorized to send overseas had been sent. This would indicate that only another 2,000 would be required to patched overseas before another order-in-council was passed.

Actually a total of 16,836 soldiers who were home defence troops last November now were overseas, but approximately 2,400 of these volunteered for general service before embarkation and they do not count against the 16,600 total mentioned in the order-in-council.

In a general review of army activities that drew praise from all sections of the House, Mr. Abbott, a former Army officer, said: He disclosed:

1. That out of 7,000 men who went absent without leave after being warned overseas service 4,062 still were at large.

2. There were 93 per cent more A.W.O.L. cases in Canada's Army than in the overseas forces that was forecast at a secret session of the Commons last November.

3. That only 1,000 of army activities that drew praise from all sections of the House, Mr. Abbott, a former Army officer, said: He disclosed:

4. Conversions from draftee ranks since November totalled 10,279 including 1,000 who have gone overseas.

5. It had been estimated in February, 1944, that 46,000 men would be needed overseas in the first year ended last month, but 49,000 actually had been sent.

6. That home defence establishments had been reduced from 1,400 to 1,000.

6. Improvement in the reinforcement situation, despite the setback to the fact, that casualties were lower than estimated.

7. Canadian units overseas were reinforced entirely by Canadians.

8. That the question of permanent commission on what punishment has been meted out to men who were absent without leave and apprehended.

Mr. Abbott made his presentation after the Commons concluded study of the Defence Minister's report on Com. C. G. Power, former Air Minister, who resigned from the Cabinet inaugurated for the retirement of permanent officers by the air force.

Mr. Abbott said that at one time 7,000 men warned for overseas service were absent without leave, but the total still at large had been reduced to 4,062 during the past year.

Of those unaccounted for, 400 are from Ontario and 1,600 from Quebec, 2,400 from Quebec districts, he said, "are the toughest of the lot." 1,000 from the prairies and 150 from the Pacific command.

"I think he could not say in open session the exact state of overseas reinforcements," Mr. Abbott added but "I can say that at the present time the Army is overstrength generally, and in the infantry in particular, is much better than was forecast in the discussion just before the House at the session."

Casualties in operations had been less than estimated, he said, and helped improve the reinforcement situation. Credit for keeping casualties down, he said, was due largely to the Royal Canadian Medical Corps.

Of the 16,600 home defence troops available last November, 10,279 volunteered for general service and 14,336 had been compulsorily sent overseas.

The strength of the home defence army in Canada and in the Atlantic territorial area was now about 30,000 men. In addition, there were 1,000 men in the Aleutian Islands, engaged in agriculture, mining and various industries.

About 20,000 of the total were suitable for reinforcements.

The home defence establishments of 179,000 men, some 13,000 less than last November, included 90,000 in non-operational units, 30,000 in coastal defence, compared with 32,000 and 76,000 a year ago, respectively, Mr. Abbott said.

The army overseas had increased during the fiscal year from about 240,000 to 260,000 men, with the increase of approximately 46,000 during 1944 had been in reinforcements employed or held as reinforcements, including those in hospital or were non-effective personnel.

Mr. Abbott said he wished to make it clear that Canadian troops in various and other smaller formations

Everything we read about Okinawa indicates that it will be a tough operation, took a last bath, and packed our kits before supper. We had a huge turkey dinner and, say, we have steak and eggs for breakfast.

At 2 o'clock on the last afternoon that they will be aboard ship—of the Lord's supper. It was the afternoon of Maundy Thursday—and the ship could not help but feel the tragic front of it, knowing about tomorrow's battle.

Would Resume Desertion

Mr. Diefenbaker said the names of all deserters should be made public and it should be made clear to them that even after the war was over they would be punished according to the regulations of how long it took to apprehend them.

Hon. T. A. Crerar estimated when the question of the retirement of Lt.-Gen. Maurice Pope, Chief of the former Chief of the Air Staff and Air Officer Commanding in Chief Overseas, came up.

The government's policy of retiring half-a-million air force officers was inaugurated during his term as minister, Mr. Macdonald said and if there was any blame coming to anyone it was appropriate to and not to his successor, J. Minden Officer.

He developed the policy and against some opposition," he said.

He had asked Air Marshal Breadner when the latter left the Air Council of the Staff Overseas, to report direct to him rather than to the Air Secretary, Air Marshal Robert Leckie, who had been in charge of training and was not familiar with overseas matters.

DRUNK OR CRAZY?

My husband, write an unhappy woman, is good and kind, but, oh, so stubborn. He never used to drink at all. Now he does and I can't help it, he has to have it, and every time he drinks he drinks too much. He says it doesn't hurt any one but him, it is my fault if I won't go and drink with him. Sometimes when he does drink to excess it is because some one has been making to hurt his feelings, or he thinks some one has been making something over—on him. . . .

(Mrs. ——)

If she can persuade her husband, that he is a child emotionally, that he has the mind of a child, and then take such measures as a child is dealt with, she may cure him or just for the hell of it.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Is it possible for a woman to give birth to babies of both sexes after one of her ovaries has been removed at operation? Do boys originate from one ovary, girls from the other? (Mr. and Mrs. H. C.)

Answer—Nobody knows, of course, but which side the ovary came, in any case. Off hand I can find no record of the birth of both male and female children after the mother has lost one ovary, but I'm not sure that is, that it happens so in many cases.

Thank you so much for your help. I have suffered much distress from hot flashes for over five years. Very soon after I began taking calcium lactate, I noticed from your pamphlet I experienced relief and now I scarcely notice them when they do come. (Mrs. W. G)

ORIGIN OF NIAGARA

What is the origin of "Niagara?" This term was applied to the Niagara River before it was to the famous falls.

According to the Bureau of American Ethnology, the most probable derivation of "Niagara" is from the Iroquoian sentence word signifying "bisected bottom-land."

The Iroquois, or Five Nations, Neutes and kindred Indian, tribes formed the original term of many villages that stood on the site of Youngstown, New York.

The earliest known record of the word occurs in the "Jesuit Relations" of 1640-1641, where it appears "Onguiahra," which is probably a misspelling of "Ongniahra."

In 1642 Father D'Allement refers to the Neuter nation itself as "Ongniahra." On the map (of 1657 the term occurs as "Ongiara." The French in 1760 referred to the derivation is pure fiction.

falls as the "Ongiara catarractes."

Our historian found thirty-six distinct forms of the name in early documents.

In 1678, Father Louis Hennepin, Belgian Recollet friar, French explorer, used the word in its modern form in his first description of Niagara Falls of which there is any record. He wrote:

"Between the lakes of Ontario and Erie, there is a vast and prodigious cadence of waters which falls down after a surprising and astonishing manner, as much as the like universe does not afford further knowledge."

For a Smoother Complexion

By HELEN FOLLETT

WITH LESS time for professional beautifying treatments, and operators so scarce that one waits days and weeks for appointments, home care has been stepped up. Among the remedies for complexion ills, the complexion mask has a high place on the list. It is so messy, makes one look terrible, but we fondly fancy that it brings glorious results. It is effective. It softens the skin, stimulates circulation and has cleansing properties that help remove blackheads.

What we used to call a clay pack is really a mask of kaolin, our old friend Fuller's earth, sterilized and made clean. You take three heaping tablespoonfuls of it, mix with enough witch hazel to form a paste the consistency of whipped cream, spread it on a clean skin surface. Then you pick up your mystery thriller, do a flop on a comfortable davenport, stay there until the application begins to flake.

Removing Pack.

The pack is removed with tepid water, the flesh is wiped dry, a light cream used with brisk tapping movements of the fingers. For removing blackheads this is the beauty ticket and no fooling.

The girl with the oily skin will find it an effective treatment; it removes the exudations of the sebaceous glands, along with dead skin scales that add to the shine.

For Dry Skin.

If the skin is dry, mineral oil is used in place of witch hazel.

Clay packs have been used for beautifying purposes ever since Cleopatra was a girl and made eyes at the boys. They have enjoyed wide popularity in beauty shops for the last 20 years.

If you try one, better have the house to yourself. You're likely to scare the children into fits as you'll look like a mummy that has returned to earth again.

WEDDINGS

TUFTS—DETLOR

A pretty spring wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. Wm. J. Detlor, Oak Lake, at 2.30 p.m., on Wednesday, April 4, when his daughter, Hazel Mary, was united in marriage to Mr. William Elmer Tufts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Tufts, of Zion's Hill. Rev. E. M. Cooke, of Foxboro, officiated and spring colours of yellow, mauve and white formed the background for the bridal party. The wedding music was played by Miss Margaret Vanderwater, Chatterton, who wore a floor-length gown of green silk with net bodice, and corsage of pink roses.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charming in a gown of white silk jersey, with sweetheart neckline, and draped bodice. She wore a finger-tip veil, caught with orange blossoms worn by her mother, an heirloom necklace, and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. Miss Norma Detlor was her sister's bridesmaid, wearing a floor-length gown of orchid chiffon and carrying a bouquet of daffodils. Little Miss Sheila Nathan, of Belleville, was flower girl in a floor-length gown of yellow chiffon. She carried a nosegay of mauve sweet peas. Mr. Borden Lee, of Belleville, cousin of the groom, was groomsman.

During the signing of the register, Miss Bessie Walker, who wore a floor-length gown of pink chiffon with corsage of pink roses, sang "Until".

Following the ceremony a reception was held, with the bride's sister, Mrs. Ernest Cain, of Stirling, receiving the guests in a lime green crepe gown with black accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother who chose a gown of Eden blue crepe and French lace, with corsage of red roses. The serviteurs were Mrs. Earl Ross, Miss Leira Detlor, Miss Dorothy Mitts, Miss Joan McCurdy, Miss Romona Bateman and Miss Doris Rose.

After the reception the couple left on a motor trip to Ottawa, the bride travelling in a blue tailored suit, sailor hat, beige top coat and navy accessories. On their return they will reside on the groom's farm at Zion's Hill.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Doubly Happy Occasion

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—After almost three years overseas service our only son is to return home, and we expect that he will arrive in time to be present for our twenty-fifth wedding anniversary! So we are planning to have Open House on the afternoon of the second Sunday of next month, making the occasion a double celebration. Do you think this would be proper?

2.—If so, will you please give us suggestions for decorations?

3.—What would be an appropriate menu?

4.—Whom should I ask to receive with us? And whom do I invite to pour?

5.—When shall I send out the invitations? And is it proper to enclose notes to members of the families for a certain hour?

E. C.

1.—What a gloriously happy occasion this will be, a wonderful anniversary, a wonderful reunion! Of course it's proper, dear lady, to have this "double celebration", and I'm praying for its fulfillment.

2.—In your table-setting (your dining-room table set for tea-service) you might, in some way suggest the double celebration. If possible use a cloth of silvery sheen. And for your centrepiece perhaps use a large silver bowl, and instead of using flowers, have it filled with small flags. Flanking this on one side you might have your Anniversary Cake (with, in the centre, the numerals, (120-1945), iced in pink or outlined in tiny silvered candies); and on the other side of the centrepiece, a cake iced in yellow-gold, with "Welcome Home, Bill" iced, if possible, in Marine-red. Silver candlesticks (borrowed, if necessary!) placed on each side of the cakes, the lighted candles dramatizing the cakes and centrepiece.

3.—Today the customary menu for a late-afternoon party is a simple tea-menu: assorted sandwiches, tea and/or coffee, and accessories such as nuts and candies. Your "sweet" course would be your Anniversary Cake, the 'Welcome Home' cake if you decide to have this, and with ice cream, if you wish. You, the "bride" cut the first piece of your Anniversary Cake and share it with your "bridegroom"; and your son would cut the first piece of his Welcome Home Cake. And also there should be some 'drinkable', perhaps punch, with which the guests drink to your celebration.

4.—I think it would be more significant, on this occasion, if only you and your husband and son received the guests. Then, as deputy hostesses, to pour at the tea-table, you might invite several women relatives or close friends, two for each hour of your party.

5.—The invitations should be sent out from two weeks to ten days before the date of your party. And on or with the invitations to the members of the families, you might suggest their arriving at a certain hour, perhaps the beginning hour.

Roll Your Hips Away

If one has adipose padding, it is best to have it evenly distributed. Then you can starve it to death. Stop eating food elements upon which fat cells live and thrive and have their being and they will evaporate. It is when fat is localized that it is difficult to restore the youthful, svelte silhouette, as every woman who has battled with it knows well enough.

There is a type of woman whose shoulders are narrow, whose chest is not normally developed, but who, from the waist southward, begins to take on bulk. The calves of the legs may be neat, but thighs are heavy. This unhappy lady must put much faith and considerable force and energy into hard exercise. On account of the upper construction of her frame she cannot expect relief in a reducing diet.

For figure remodeling she must set aside a regular time. Otherwise, she will never think of this good-looks duty. She can get up ten minutes earlier every morning, spare ten minutes before going to bed and, if she gives herself a rousing muscle workout, she will be able to delete several inches, and improve the contour surprisingly.

She must lie flat on her back, hands under the buttocks, and lift her legs until she is standing on the back of her neck; lower the legs slowly.

Second exercise: lie on the back on the floor, arms stretched out straight at the sides. Lift the right leg high, send it to the left, touching the toes to the floor at the farthest possible point, rolling on the hip at the same time. Keep the upper portion of the body flat. Six times with the right foot. Lift the left foot, roll to the right six times. Repeat.

Casual movements will not accomplish much. The muscles of the thighs must be stretched so one feels the pull clear up in the hips. The only way to shake off fat is to make muscles so strong and firm that they will not tolerate adipose intruders that ruin the feminine shape.

By using a jumping rope, thighs can be reduced, although this exercise is not likley to have much effect upon hips that have expanded. Walking is an excellent exercise, but it takes a long tramp to accomplish demolition of adipose tissue.

In ordinary cases, where proportions are in keeping—fat being evenly distributed—the intake of fats, sweets and starches should be cut down one half. Tea and coffee must be taken clear. The diet may include lean meats, fish, poultry, eggs, green salads, fruits, vegetables—preferably those that grow above ground.

Buttermilk and unsweetened lemonade are good beverages for Mrs. Plumpie. Cottage cheese is her friend. Unbuttered rye toast is less fattening than white bread.

The Marry Go Round

Getting Away From Yourself

This is one of those days when I long to write something deep and profound, or poetic and beautiful, instead of this trivia. Everybody has those days, when he wishes he were "different". Every man secretly yearns to be something which he is not, or to do "something else". To get away from himself!

The truth is that unless we are terrific egotists we are never quite satisfied with ourselves. And even then we may only be posing as egotists. Nobody is really conceited, down under the skin.

Cute, plump, curvaceous girls always wear high heels and sigh to be tall, slim and willowy. But tall, stunning girls always wish that they were "cute and petite". A popular comedian always longs to play Hamlet, the melancholy Dane, and a brunette always plans, some day, to be a blonde at any price!

Nearly all real celebrities are as shy as quail or stricken deer, and will run madly from a reporter or a crowd or a cameraman, and look like anything else BUT celebrities. While almost any plain, everyday person is delighted to be mistaken for somebody in the lime-light.

A school teacher is always flattered when you tell her that she does not LOOK like a school teacher, and a showgirl is almost as thrilled to be mistaken for a society debutante, as a debutante is to be mistaken for a Powers model!

It is always the good-natured "bromide" who gets off all the wisecracks and insists on being the life of the party, while the brilliant wit or the professional humorist usually mopes around looking like a dark cloud and never speaks unless prodded. He is worrying about tomorrow's column or tomorrow's radio program—and he simply WON'T be "funny"!

The young third-assistant manager is always delighted to be mistaken for a banker or a Wall Street magnate, and usually dresses the part, even to the smart haberdashery and the carnation in the coat-lapel. While the famous financier who counts his small-change in millions, enjoys nothing so much as getting into his shabbiest old sport clothes and going fishing. He loves to think of himself as a rugged creature of the sod. Nothing tickles him more than to clean and cook the fish, and share a can of beans with some guide from the backwoods.

This desire to get away from oneself, to be something else and do something different, is a purely human characteristic. Sometimes it arises from boredom with the monotony of our lives, and sometimes it comes from "dat ole debbil", the Inferiority Complex. But a monkey never wishes he had a beautiful mane and could roar like a lion; and a giraffe never wishes he could swing from the branches of a tree.

It's a clever man or woman who finds an avocation which gets him away from himself and makes him or her feel like a different person for a while.

HUNTING IS WORTH IT, if you are a print enthusiast, for there are some lovely prints extant. Green and red are the colors used for a carnival print featuring carousels and clowns, set against a black crepe ground. Nice in a two-piece dress with deep green grosgrain cuffs lined with red, and buttoned high to the throat.

Bigger and better flowers are blooming on the newest hats. Renoir pink is used for a straw bonnet which is trimmed with giant, deep pink peonies.

New versions of the corde bag appear this season. Corde is used for an oblong box bag with a lucite frame giving side support and holding the box shape rigid. Top closes with a slide fastener.

Lovers of black are going in for toppers of gold or mustard yellow wool to make a very interesting color scheme. The smartest toppers seen are those with much back flare swinging from a shallow yoke. A coat of this type adds interest to a simple black dress and makes a grand costume out of a plain black suit.

Smartly simple print dresses are always finds. For warm weather wear we liked a dress of pale aqua or pink crepe with a vertical fruit design in black. Made with a deep U neck, ruffled cap sleeves and buttoned all the way down, it's the sort of dress a woman wants to wear all summer, in town or out.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

'Whistling Girls and Crowing Hens' You Remember the Rest of That?

The old saw about whistling girls and crowing hens coming to no good end, was handed out plenty to your mother, even in post-Victorian days.

Then, the willful young lady did her whistling in her own home. But now Dr. Henry Bowman, director of Home and Family Living, Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., says girl meets boy with a whistle, on the street. He concludes that the shortage of men, "we are having a war, you know", has done some strange things to girls. They've become huntresses, he says, boldly seeking dates and even proposing marriage. They have, of necessity, lowered their standards in boy friends. "Some", concludes the doctor, "will date anything that grows whiskers or even peach fuzz."

He agrees some girls still cling to their high moral standards, but some are so eager to please their dates that they neck freely. Girls out in at dances, where they so greatly outnumber boys and feel no impropriety in doing so, which repels the average sensitive intelligent man, because this type doesn't fit in with his concept of how his future wife should behave. Under this surplus of attention from girls, boys visualize themselves as, God's gift to womankind".

All of these things, with the accompaniment of bad manners on the part of boys, may seem very distressing, but the situation is hardly new. Blame the war for it, and if you are a Bible student, you may recall that way back, before there was anything worth fighting for in Europe, the Prophet Isaiah, Chapter IV, Verse 1, mentions a similar state of affairs, as follows:

"In that day, seven women shall take hold of one man, saying we will eat our own bread and wear our own apparel; only let us be called by thy name to take away our reproach".

So you see that the girls of whom Isaiah wrote went as far, if not farther, than the girls of today. What is whistling to a boy on the street compared with seven ancient huntresses squabbling over one man?

In spite of the deluge of letters which come to this column telling how girl meets boy, I've heard nothing of such tactics. . . Seven women laying hold of one man, indeed!

DETROIT WINGS READY FOR LEAFS FOR STANLEY CUP

Toronto Proved "Cousins" to Wings During the Regular Season

Detroit, April 8 — (AP)— Confident of winning the Stanley Cup for the second time in three years, Detroit Red Wings engage the Toronto Maple Leafs before an expected capacity crowd here tonight in the first game of the National Hockey League's "world series."

Red Wing hopes were bolstered by the report that Syd Howe, their versatile centre, would rejoin the club for the first time since he was injured early in their semi-final series with the Boston Bruins. Howe scored two goals and set up 10 others during regular season play against Toronto.

The Leafs proved "cousins" to the Wings during the season, winning one of 10 games and losing eight others and they are determined to end this problem in the cup finals. To accomplish this will depend on the veteran group which has considerably more experience than that of Detroit. Eight Leafs were members of the Toronto team that eliminated Detroit in the 1942 finals; only six of the 20 Wings were back to the last Detroit Stanley Cup victories which beat Boston in 1942.

The Leafs entered the finals this year by eliminating the champion Montreal Canadiens four games to two, while the Red Wings were extended to seven games by the Bruins.

HERSHEY BEARS TAKE GAME LEAD OVER CLEVELAND

Norman Calladine, Formerly of Peterborough, Gave Bears Lead in Third

By The Canadian Press

Hershey Bears took a two-point lead in the American Hockey League finals Thursday when they came to Cleveland Barons 3-1 at Hershey. Bears have won two games to one for Barons.

Barons forced in the steam in the start and Les Cunningham scored their only goal of the game within the first minute on a 30-foot drive. Mike Shabega evened the count before the period ended, while Cleveland's Dan Sprout was in the penalty box for tripping.

After a scoreless second period, Norm Calladine gave Bears the lead early in the third. Peg O'Neil added another in the final minute of a rough session after Harvey Tone had been withdrawn from Cleveland net.

The teams meet again at Hershey Saturday and then go to Cleveland for the fifth game of the series Sunday.

Toronto, April 6 — (CP)— The success of the Maroons-Maple Leafs oldtimers game in Toronto some weeks ago has led to revival of the rivalry between the Maroons and Canadiens. The game will be played in Montreal on the evening of Montreal ice fans — and the Rotary Boys' service club, crippled children, the armed forces and boys' work.

Tommy Gorman, general manager of the Canadiens, has gone back to managing the Maroons and in the old familiar style of days gone by, has signed Eddie Shore for the former Montreal squad. That master-move brought rage from Leo Dandurand, who's skippering the Habitants. Leo labels Ex "tigers."

The Canucks of yesteryear have signed Sylvio Mantha and his brother Georges, Battleship Leduc, Jean Pusie, Billy Boucher, Aurel Joliat, Johnny Gagnon, Pit Lepine, Armand -Mondou and Wilf Cude, among others.

Rowing Revival:

Halifax, April 6 — (CP)— Rowing, which has been a major sport in Halifax for more than a century, will also be revived after being a war casualty.

Apparently Hallgonians are anxious to get the oars back in the water and next month may see the Martime waters swarming with four-oared sheils. There are possibilities of two regattas this summer.

Another Halifax enthusiast has suggested that rowing become a part of the school's athletic programme after the war. The latter idea seems very good and might be pondered by rowing and paddling clubs across the Dominion."

More Revivals:

In London, Ont., sportsmen are talking revival, too. But cricket is the topic of discussion at Air Force clubs from nearby stations. They boost the game in the past few years, as London sportsmen are anxious to see a few local teams carry on the game now that the R.C.A.F. schools have closed.

The Southwestern Ontario League is holding its annual meeting in a few weeks. At that time cricket fans for city of London will be made or broken.

STARRY CANUCKS ONLY GAME AWAY FROM FIRST TITLE

Moose Jaw Defeats Winnipeg Monarchs 5-1 and All Over the Better Team

Winnipeg, April 6 — (CP)—Packed with power from the nets out, Moose Jaw Canucks today were one game away from their 1st Western Canada junior hockey championship and a crack at either Toronto St. Mike's or Montreal Royals for the Memorial Cup.

Sparked by a three-star performance of speedy Frank Ashworth, Canucks raced to a 5-1 game lead in their best-of-seven western final with Winnipeg Monarchs here last night before 2,500 fans by scoring a 4-1 victory.

Ashworth, outstanding first string centre, flicked in two goals and laid on passes for counters by Lorne Bert Olmstead and his right winger Clarence Mackenzie.

Gerry Couture, who missed the club's debut in Winnipeg Tuesday night through a bad cold, scored the other Canuck marker.

Forward Al Buchanan accounted for the lone Monarch tally.

Victory was the 14th registered by Canucks in 15 playoff encounters. They won the first two games of the present series in Moose Jaw last week by 6-4 and 6-2 scores but lost to the Manitoba champions Tuesday 5-4. Fifth game will be played Saturday night.

Charity Exhibition Won by Ottawa Team

Ottawa, April 6 — (CP) — An all-star team of the Ottawa Interservice Hockey League swamped a Petawawa all-star team of Petawawa hockey forces 15-7 last night in a charity exhibition which closed out Ottawa's hockey season.

Proceeds went to the Rideau Military Hospital.

Ottawa all-stars overshadowed the invaders throughout with Centre Brown leading their forces with nine goal mark and two assists. Pioneer New York Ranger Alex Shibicky got one and the other Ottawa scorers were Cope with three, Boucher and Kuntz, two each and Green, Foster, Pantalone and Jones one each.

Simpson got four for Kingston-Petawawa and Dunn, Woodward and McNaught for the others.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, April 6 — (AP) — Texas sports writers offer the suggestion that it would be both smart and profitable for the major leagues to sponsor a high school baseball tournament in each state every year . . . they could turn the schools and instructors at each meet and possibly pick up a few players. Otherwise school authorities would run the show . . . The suggestion sounds, but Red Trautman can tell you it isn't as easy as that . . . The American Association club chairman of baseball's high school committee, has enough grey hairs on one headache trying to find ways to help school kids play baseball. It seems are a bit touchy about the eligibility of their boys and the possibility they can't even grab the kids before they finish their education.

Sports Before Your Eyes:

Izzy Maities, Louisiana Boxing Commissioner, recently was appointed a colonel on the staff of Governor J. H. Davis. The right man . . . there now claims Maities is on a par with New York's Col. Eddie Eagan . . . when an outstanding football star at a southern college wrote to Tulsu's Henry Frnka offering his services to Tulsa, Frnka shipped the letter back to the boy's coach with a note saying he wasn't answering the player. The southern coach was surprised, but it wasn't the first such communication Henry has received and he handles them all that way.

GIANTS HAVE 1944 LINEUP INTACT TO START SEASON

Medwick on Injured List but Will be Ready When the Barrier Goes Up

Hollywood, Calif., April 6 — (AP) — New York Giants finished fifth in the National League last year, 38 games behind the pennant-winning Cardinals and eight behind the fourth-place Chicago Cubs, but it's the only team in the loop to break from the Barrier April 17 withbesbly the same lineup intact.

There is one little "if" to the Giants statement but manager Mel Ott is not unduly worried. The "if" is Joe Medwick, whose sacroiliac started acting up again a couple of days ago. The veteran left fielder was "doubtful" of his New York debut.

There is high hopes that Joe will be okay by a week from next Tuesday's exhibition game.

If Medwick isn't able to start the opening game, Leon Treadway, who hit .300 in 50 games with the Giants last season, probably will team with Johnny Mize, Bill Nicholson and Danny Litwhiler.

The infield won't be the same as played the final 1944 game with the Cubs. The veterans, Phil Weintraub will be on hand, little George Hausmann again will hold down second with Billy Jurges at short-stop and Nap Reyes on third.

Ernie Lombardi, still alive but in bettey condition than he has been in years, will be the catching staff.

In the pitching staff Ott has a fine array of names headed by Bill Voiselle, who led the Giants in strikeouts with 170 while compiling a 21-16 record.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

The U. S. War Department handed out an unexpected monkey wrench jolt in an announcement yesterday that "deferment from military for essential industry is subject to immediate withdrawal" if the deferred forces if he leaves that job, regardless of his physical condition.

Players in war plants without deferment were subject to usual draft procedure if they refused to baseball, it was stated. The ruling once more threw baseball into chaos, with uncertain status. Some baseball bookmakers said players were being reclassified and turned over to the army in increasing number.

Manager Art Ross of Boston Bruins announced last night at the Hub that Aubrey (Dit) Clapper had been released unconditionally by the N.H.L. club for next season and, if he wanted, would not play unless the team gets short-handed.

Paul Thompson, former manager of Chicago Black Hawks, yesterday succeeded Lou Marsh as sports columnist, B. C. Forum from the Vancouver Province. Marsh has gone to enter a team in the Pacific Coast Hockey League with Seattle, Portland, Los Angeles and San Francisco, it was stated.

The Toronto Board of Control yesterday decided to withdraw from the International Baseball League should pay a $3,000 annual rental for Maple Leaf Stadium instead of 15 per cent of the gross gate. The proposed 1944 season totalled $12,000 but the rental had been set at $4,000. The club was said to be agreeable to the new arrangement.

Both Saskatchewan and Alberta failed to enter teams for the Canadian senior basketball championship playdowns before the March 31 deadline but E. W. Bowering of Vancouver, secretary of the C.A.B.A. last night suggested a further chance for senior entries teams with later dates for the western segment to accommodate Edmonton and the Alberta champions.

With a five-under-par 84, Bryon Nelson captured the first round yesterday of the Open golf tournament at Atlanta, Ga., followed in second place by Sam Snead and Jud Mc-Clelland with 85's.

Hamilton, Ont., will have two senior baseball teams this season, it was announced last night. One club, led by Brian Timmis and Art Mullen, will operate in the Niagara circuit, while the other, directed by Matt Krusto and A. Thurston, will enter a Toronto league.

Owen Sound Orphans Take Port Colborne Tars

Owen Sound, April 6 — (CP) — Owen Sound Orphans last night defeated Port Colborne Tars in their best-of-five series for the Ontario Hockey Association intermediate "A" championship by recording a 8-2 victory against Port Colborne Tars. Orphans' stepped into a 1-0 lead in the first period then broke out for seven goals in the middle period to walk off with victory. The teams matched goals in the last period.

Faced by 16-year-old Jerry Reid, playing his first game in intermediate company, Orphans dominated the play throughout. Hyslop, Orphans' defenceman also turned in a stand-out game.

Something Like That.

A spinster living in a London suburb was shocked at the language used by two men repairing the sewer pipes in front of her home. She wrote to the company on the matter, and the foreman was asked to report. This he did in the following way.

"Me and Bill Fairweather were on this job. I was up the telegraph pole installing a wire, and he had a feed fall on Bill. It went down his back. Then he said: 'You really must be more careful, Harry'."

Around the Town.

"It rumoured along the main street that Mrs. Ethel Smith, of 1944 O.A.S.K. finalists, Sask., "Mamie," is in a quandry seeking players to fill at least two vacancies on his roster. . . . Third baseman Jack Wardlaw, one of the best of a young crop of local "mushrooms" to come up in years, has been in the army for the past few months. . . . Now we hear Jim Hunter, Sask. outfielder, is short of the strength, is also army-bound sometime next week. . . . The loss of these two outstanding players will prove quite a blow to the Mamie's pennant chances. . . . One team Prexy Joe Stamos can depend upon for a return engagement is the Fort St. John Columbian Squire juniors, also 1944 O.A.S.K. finalists. . . . Secretary Eddie Schrieber is preparing for the annual meeting of the Belleville Ladies' Softball League early next week and here has a general redistribution of executive posts anticipated. . . . Taking two games from the Stars on Toronto ice the Montreal Royals should be odds-on favorite with the next two games at the Forum.

Home Again.

"Jumping Joe" Savoldi, who gained fame with Notre Dame's four horsemen of football before upsetting Jeem London in the rasslin' ring, has returned home after 18 months of secret mission for the American government in Europe. He is referred to as "one of the top mystery men" and it is no secret Joe speaks Italian without the trace of an accent. He resumed wrestling in Philadelphia this week, while the muscle-benders return to local mat wars at the Maple Arena next Wednesday.

Savoldi believes the war will have two affects upon wrestling. "There will be a boom in the sport when it comes back as the 'old' thousands of service boys have become interested in it because of their training in commando tactics. And this commando training probably will make future wrestling much rougher than it is now—with a tendency toward gouging, chopping, butting and kneeing. Meanwhile, modern-day wrestling of the present would be given credit for contributing much to commando tactics—improvements that have out-dated the old ju-Jitsu of the Japanese."

The Last Word.

Bill Stewart, who has doubled in brass long enough as a referee in the National Hockey League, manager of the Chicago Black Hawks and a major league umpire, to know his way around really took good care of a New York Giant rookie recently. . . . This rookie, one Frank Mediamolle, is trying to win an infielder's job. . . . During a scrub game, Stewart called what Mediamolle thought was a bad strike on him . . . "Why don't you open your blankety-blank eyes!" snapped the rookie. . . . Young man, snapped Stewart, taking off his mask and squaring away, "I don't even allow major league players to talk to me like that!. . . Don't take too

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 668
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You never know which one of the $35,615,500,000 bands will be held by one of your opponents. How do you know how many cards in each suit will be held by each, but you frequently can find out.

When you play a hand as declarer, you know how many cards in each suit are held by you and dummy. You thus know how many spades, hearts, diamonds, clubs are held by both opponents, but not by each.

However, you can come close to determining what each opponent has in most cases. There is a mathematical table that tells you the probable distribution of outstanding cards.

Three cards will be divided two-one in 78 out of 100 hands; three-none in the other 28. Five cards will split three-two in 68; four-one in 36; five-none in four cases out of 100.

Four cards will divide two-two in 40; two-two in 41; four-none in 10 of 100 cases. All cards split four-two in 48 three-three in 36; five-one in 14; six-none in two cases out of 100.

Now, look, gals and boys. Don't be sore. Don't burden your brains with memorizing that percentage table. An expert ought to, but he took to look important. Even as I do in this column.

But it is not essential to his liberty and the pursuit of your happiness in a bridge game, the knowledge may be. But the exact figures are not. What is of easier way of remembering what you need of it.

Horse Sense covers it all in this one simple rule: An even number will split evenly; an odd number as evenly as possible. That is how they divide most often.

Look at this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠ A Q 7 6 5 2
♥ A 7 5 3 2

NORTH
♠ K 10 9
♥ K J 4
♦ 9 6 2
♣ A K 10 7 5

You see eight spaces. Opponents must have five; odd number. Most likely, one opponent has three and the other has two.

No expert knows better.

Rev. A. McLaughlin To Reside Here

The Rev. Andrew McLaughlin, retired United Church minister, and well-known in the Bay of Quinte Conference of the church will take up residence in Belleville in the near future, it was learned today.

$6,000 Donated By Citizen to Purchase Property

Picton, April 5—A resident of the town, who wishes to remain anonymous, last week donated a generous sum of money to the town with which to purchase the Barker property for the municipality. This gift was accepted with appreciation at meeting of council Tuesday night.

The spacious grounds, in the centre of the town, at the rear of the post-office, contains a large residence and other buildings and lovely beds of perennials. It will be used for the community centre which is proposed. Plans being discussed include a new arena, swimming pool and a centre for various types of recreation and meeting purposes.

The estate was offered the town for a nominal sum by the estate, following the death of Miss Lillas Barker, K.C., daughter of the late late Sheriff D. J. Barker.

The town will be responsible for the upkeep to keep them in repair, but will not take over the buildings until June.

Recent building permits indicate building activity here. Council granted a permit to the Imperial oil company to make alterations to the R. C. Gibson block on Main Street, a modern service station being planned, the cost of which is $10,000.

A permit was also granted Chester Storms for the erection of a tourist camp at a cost of $3,000 on Bridge Street, which will include a recreation hall and tourist cottages.

Application for permits were made by the two constables that their salaries be increased per month each. It was stated that they worked eight hour shifts, were given a day's rest per week, covered clothing allowance. Council also refused an offer by R. A. Collyer to purchase the building used as a fire hall for $1,000. It was stated that the building is needed by the municipality.

Council decided to prepare a by-law, which would prohibit erection of gas or drive service stations on Main Street.

Figures have just been released showing the amounts which Prince Edward County schools will receive in government grants this year under the Provincial Government's plan to assume half the cost of education. Whereas, the grants for all schools last year totalled $30,645,309.47, this year they will be $37,758.36, an increase of $57,358.90, and possibly more.

The grants by townships are as follows — Ameliasburg — $3,152.23 formerly $10,086.00; Athol — $2,578.37 last year, $4,957.63 new; Hallowell—$1,419.46 now $7,387.77; Hillier — $2,456.34, now $4,707.43 North Marysburg—$1,425.75, now $6,960.28, South Marysburgh—$2,750.89, now $4,728.21, Sophiasburgh — $4,272.01, now $7,293.54. Bloomfield village—$559.17, now $2,551.18, Wellington, Picton Public — $2,902.56, now $4,901.29, Picton Public — $1,740.80, now $3,816.46, Picton Collegiate—$1,425, now $10,987, Picton Separate School, $779.36, now $1,043.19, Wellington Separate — $631, now not to be $6,964.

These grants are based on the 1942 expenditures, but payment will be on 1944 costs and therefore will likely be increased.

In Prince Edward-Lennox, grants total $165,368.37 this year.

BLOODY BUTCHER OF POLAND TAKEN

London, April 6 (CP)—Gauleiter Arthur Greiser, whose grim rule in Poland earned for him such names as "the bloody butcher of Poland" and "hangman of the Polish people," has been captured in Posnan by the Russian army, it was reported by the Soviet War News, a publication of the Russian embassy here.

Complaints that soot and smoke from a nearby dairy is ruining the household clothes in the neighborhood of West Moira and Yeomans Streets were received by city police on Wednesday. Housewives complained that the soot and smoke from the dairy chimney dirtied clothes whenever a southwest wind blew. The matter is being looked into by the authorities.

It was following this alleged attack that the elder Sanford and Alley were soldiers, members of a camp which during the weekend had demonstrated in favor of peace.

REPORT 3 GESTAPO MEN ARE SLAIN

Another Story Unconfirmed Says Goering Killed in Car Hold-Up

London, April 6 (Reuters)—The body of a car in the Berlin suburb of Grunewald Saturday, in which two passengers and the driver were killed was the result of a plot to assassinate propaganda Minister Goebbels, Ralph Hewins, Daily Mail Correspondent in Stockholm, reported Thursday, quoting German sources.

But instead of Goebbels the plotters killed three Gestapo men in the car preceding his, Hewins said.

His informant said the killers were soldiers, members of a camp which during the weekend had demonstrated in favor of peace.

Meanwhile, the London radio station was heard by Reuters radio station broadcasting the following story which is entirely without confirmation.

"According to Swedish reports, Marshal Hermann Goering was one of the passengers murdered in the plane bringing the said leading out of Berlin which was reported by the German radio a few days ago."

The German announcement referred to did not mention any names but offered a reward of 100,000 marks (approximately $10,000) for information leading to the capture of bolshp men who had killed the two ambulance and the driver of a car on a road leading out of Berlin.

AT THE BELLE
The Very Thought of You

The problem of the relationship between soldier and civilian, an important current and post-war item, is lucidly and sincerely surveyed in Warner's new film, "The Very Thought of You," now at the Belle Theatre.

The cast offers the most promising of that company's new stars—Dennis Morgan, Eleanor Parker and Dane Clark. A brilliant supporting cast includes Faye Emerson and the veteran performers, Henry Travers and Beulah Bondi. Delmer Daves, who represented most recently as director of the highly successful "Destination Tokyo," both directed and produced on the screenplay for this film.

"The Very Thought of You" is concerned with soldiers who meet two girls in Pasadena after a long stand in the Aleutians. One of them is brought home for dinner and most endure the opposition of a tense, war strained family. It's a condition which will prevail again and again before returning servicemen will finally be absorbed back into civilian life. A believable adult solution is offered in "The Very Thought of You."

Also featuring for the Boys "Something For The Boys," the sensational, long-run Broadway musical that critics acclaimed as the show "that made Broadway a better place to laugh in," comes to the screen of the Belle Theatre this weekend. In 20th Century-Fox's brilliant Technicolor filmization, starring Carmen Miranda, Michael O'Shea and Vivian Blaine with an outstanding, supporting cast.

Rounding out the tuneful film, packed with laughs and an unusual romance, boasts 42 new songs by famed tunesmiths Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson that are already slated for hit parade popularity. All three stars as well as Perry Como, singing sensation of radio, night clubs and recordings, who makes his screen debut in the film, the vocalizing of the latter is Vivian Blaine ('The Cherry Blonde') is heard in the Cole Porter title song, "Something For The Boys."

Featured players in the hit directed by Lewis Seiler and produced by Irving Starr include Phil Silvers, Sheila Ryan and Glenn Langan.

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 12

Basil said, "If I were you, Hagen, I would take my meals outside the house for a while."

"I c—certainly will, sir!" Her voice was muffled by the apron.

"Have you quarreled with any one in the household?"

"N—not exactly. But—"

"But what?"

"When I was dusting one day, I b—broke a flask of hand lotion Mademoiselle Victorine brought from Paris."

"What did she say?"

"She didn't say anything. She just looked at me. It was awful. I would rather have had her say things—no matter what. . ."

"Did Victorine ever show antagonism toward Miss Kitty?"

Hagen stared in amazement. "Oh, no. She was fond of Miss Kitty."

"Well, there's no doubt about her innocence," said Foyle, when Hagen had gone. "She's too dumb to commit murder."

"If she'd had her adenoids removed and her teeth straightened when she was a child her whole personality might have been different," remarked Basil. "I wonder why she was so frightened?"

"Frightened? She was just dumb!"

"Her pupils were dilated and there was a little pulse visible in her throat. I tried to time the beating and I made it around twenty-two to a quarter of a minute—that is about eighty-eight to the full minute."

"So what?"

"Anything over eighty is excessive in most people."

"She was probably scared because I told her Kitty had been poisoned."

"No. Her pulse was going fast before you told her about Kitty. And yet it looked normal to me when she first came in. Something else that she heard or saw in this room must have startled her."

The other servants denied knowledge of the X-Why bottle. They all seemed to believe that Kitty had been taking X-Why herself. The chef explained at some length that "cette'Agen" was an hysterical woman and a miserable Boche who was insufficiently civilised to appreciate the delicate shades of taste that were the glory of the true French kitchen. . . .

"This sure is a queer set-up," said Foyle, when the inquisition was over. "Wages not paid on time, half the rooms in the house shut up in dust sheets, house and furniture mortgaged, money for a coming-out party supplied by a relative, pocket money from testimonials and indirect advertising, everything else bought on credit—and then the build-up of Kitty in the newspapers as 'the loveliest debutante of the season.' What you might call rigging the marriage market. . .Well, I guess we've done all we can tonight."

"Aren't you going to take a look at Pasquale's quarters next door?" suggested Basil.

"Oh, I suppose we must! There are several things I want to ask that fat slob."

The former coach house stood between the Jocelyn house and an apartment house. Pasquale took out a latch key. A spiral stairway brought them to the "love nest," as Foyle insisted on calling it behind Pasquale's back. It was furnished in the modern French manner—pale wood, with a figure like watered silk, in suave lines unbroken by corners, moldings or oraments, Basil marveled at Rhoda's folly in squandering so much money here. But there was something cat like about Pasquale which would always demand the cream of life. That was doubtless why he had chosen the role of an old woman's darling. His morphine habit, his slack, unexercised muscles, and his full, feminine contours all seemed part of the same trait—self indulgence. How could such a man achieve the selflessness of the artist?

The answer was quite simple. He couldn't.

Foyle stood before an easel, arms akimbo, eyeing an unfinished canvas in which a nude, who seemed to have been recently flayed, sat on top of a taxicab, playing a guitar under an ominously stormy sky, while three watermelons and a toothbrush occupied the foreground. Considerable skill in draftsmanship had been lavished on this singular subject. But there was no sense of design. It was a romantic outpouring of Pasquale's personal wishes, feelings and fixations expressed in grotesque, dreamlike symbols — no more a work of art than the psychological trash of the confession magazines is literature.

"That how you earn your living?" demanded Foyle.

"Oh, no." Pasquale smiled with gentle superiority. "Rhoda — Mrs. Jocelyn—has saved me from the humiliation of prostituting my genius in the market place, so I can devote myself to pure self-expression."

"Art begins where self-expression ends," murmured Basil.

He had seen painting equally subjective produced by mental patients in a hypnoid state, and it had often helped him in diagnosing their secret thoughts. For that reason, he studied every detail of Pasquale's psycho-analysis in paint. Was it imagination —or did the face of the nude really bear a faint resemblance to Kitty Jocelyn, hardly more than a pictorial echo?

Pasquale eased his fat body into one of the low chairs and Basil dropped into a chair opposite. "Just what did you mean by your remark that Mrs. Jocelyn had always hated her stepdaughter?"

"I meant what I said," Pasquale had recovered all his assurance when he found he was not under arrest. "Rhoda was always jealous of Gerald Jocelyn's affection for his first wife's child. That's why Kitty was sent off to school in Florence when she was hardly more than a baby. It was only after Gerald died, and Kitty began to mature, that Rhoda realized Kitty's beauty was a marketable asset. Then she kept Kitty with her and spoiled the girl. But the old hatred was there underneath."

Something caught the light and winked at Basil from the edge of the rug. A bit of broken glass? He stooped and picked it up. A platinum ring set with a rose diamond. He lifted his eyes and saw Pasquale watching—his face a sickly, greenish gray. A bead of sweat gathered on his forehead. Foyle had seen the whole thing.

"That your ring, Mr. Pasquale?" he demanded, sharply.

"Er — yes — of course." Pasquale ran his tongue over his lips. "I—er—mislaid it."

"It looks like a woman's ring. Suppose you try it on."

Even his little finger was too fat. He couldn't get the ring past the first joint. He gulped and sputtered. "I haven't worn it lately. It's an heirloom. Belonged to my mother. I keep it for sentimental reasons."

"The platinum setting looks modern."

"I had the diamond reset."

"For sentimental reasons?"

Pasquale's eyes shifted and he wriggled in the chair. "Well, Inspector, to tell the truth—"

"That'll be a novelty!"

"—This ring belonged to a little friend of mine and I couldn't let her down by telling you about her—could I? she was here the other night and tooke it off when she washed her hands. I found it after she'd gone and then I—er—mislaid it myself."

"What's the name of this little friend? She must be worried about her ring. Let's phone her right now and tell her it's O.K.—if she can identify it."

Again Pasquale's eyes shifted. "I—well—the truth is—I—er don't know her name or address."

"Not even her phone number?"

"No. She was—well, what you would call a 'pick-up.'"

"How convenient! Of course it didn't occur to you to advertise in the lost and found columns until you found it?"

"No. You see she was married. Her husband might have become suspicious."

"You think of everything—don't you? Does Mrs. Jocelyn know about your habit of picking up little friends and entertaining them here?"

"Of course not!"

Basil glanced inside the ring. Someone must have worn it for some time. The jeweler's name and mark were obliterated.

Foyle slipped the ring into his pocket. "I'm keeping this for the present."

He went through the rest of the flat briskly. The tiny kitchenette looked as if it had never been used. In the bathroom was an enormous, built-in tub worthy of Imperial Rome. A most imposing array of tinted and scented soaps and bath salts glittered on a glass shelf.

"What's that thing?" Foyle pointed to a machine not unlike a bathroom scales in appearanc. A loop of webbing dangled from it.

Pasquale lunged forward and pressed a button. The webbing began to vibrate violently with a humming sound like a vacuum cleaner.

"It's for reducing my hips," he explained candidly. "I've tried everything else — massage, gymnastics, fencing, horses — all no good. So I decided to try this, and it hasn't done any good yet. Do you suppose there's something wrong with my thyroid gland, Dr. Willing?"

"Have you ever tried X-Why?" Basil's tone was casual.

"That Persian stuff?" Pasquale's voice betrayed no emotion. Evidently Rhoda had not seen fit to tell him about the X-Why bottle found in her bathroom closet.

"No, I haven't tried it," he went on. "Some people say it's none too safe."

"Kitty Jocelyn tried it," said Basil. "Unintentionally."

"Oh, no! Kitty never took it. She only endorsed it. She was actually trying to put on weight."

"I said—unintentionally."

Pasquale's jaw slackened. "You mean—?" He gasped. "It was—that?"

"We believe so. And the medical evidence suggests that it was slipped into the cocktail she drank the afternoon of the dance—the one you finished by mistake."

Pasquale sat down on the edge of the tub grasping the shower curtain with both hands for support.

"Then I—it might have killed me!"

"Why you should be alive and Kitty dead, is something of a puzzle," said Basil. "It may be the cocktail wasn't poisoned after all."

"But—suppose it was!" Pasquale buried his face in his hands.

Basil and Inspector Foyle looked at each other. Could this be acting?

"In that case, you may be able to help us," pursued Basil. "Do you remember if Kitty's cocktail tasted different from your own?"

Pasquale gulped. Then the words tumbled out of his mouth. "Hers was too dry—drier than my own. I remember wondering if Gregg had used two shakes with French vermouth in one and Italian in the other."

"Are you sure that the dry cocktail you drank by mistake was Kitty's cocktail?"

"She said so. I don't know anything about it! I wish you'd let me alone! I don't see why I have to be worried and bullied and harassed just because Kitty is dead! I won't be able to do any work for a month after this!"

"Work. . . ." Foyle stared at the nude on the taxicab.

Outside, the police car was waiting.

"I want something to eat," said Foyle. "What about going to a cafeteria near here on Lexington."

As the car started, Foyle took out of his overcoat pocket and opened a small tin box with the familiar trade mark of a firm of manufacturing pharmacists and the words "sodium bicarbonate." It was full of fine, white powder.

"Happy dust," he announced.

"Happy dust? That's poetry, Inspector!"

"No, doc, it's morphine — crook slang," explained Foyle, earnestly. I pinched it in the bathroom when you were asking him about the cocktail. It was there on the shelf with the tooth-paste and other things. So obviously I nearly missed it."

"There was a complete set of Poe in that bookcase!" murmured Basil.

"This'll be a jolt for the Narcotic Squad. They thought they had things pretty well sewed up."

"Couldn't you have arrested Pasquale for being in possession of a narcotic?"

Foyle grinned. "I want him to get some more — soon. That's why I pinched this."

"So you can trail him and nab the distributor?"

"Yeah. Poor devil! He'll have to have it—even if he guesses he's being trailed." The inspector replaced the box in his overcoat pocket. "He had nearly an ounce there, and I've known it to be as high as three grand an ounce during a shortage. He can't make much dough out of those pictures. Do you suppose Rhoda buys it for him?"

"It's possible."

"That would explain her hold on him."

The cafeteria blazed infernally with lights. A loudspeaker was blaring the after-midnight program known as the "Milkman's Matinee." There was not another customer in the place.

Basil went to the steam table, selecting a hot roast beef sandwich, and a salad. Foyle joined him at table carrying a tray laden with corned beef and cabbage.

When Foyle leaned back with a sigh of repletion, he said, "The thing that interests me most of all in this case is that X-Why bottle we found in Rhoda Jocelyn's bathroom. Maybe you psychologists have never heard of it before, but a crook nearly always makes one fatal blunder. . . ."

". . . that gives him away to the police in spite of all his efforts to hide his crime!" chanted Basil.

"You can laugh all you like, doc, but it's true. When the fingerprint boys get busy on that bottle, I bet we'll have something!"

Basil's eyes twinkled. "The clue that interests me the most was Rhoda Jocelyn's upsetting that ink bottle!"

"What?" The Inspector stared at Basil in amazement. "That was just an accident!"

Basil was silent as the radio blared again.

"I don't get you, doc," went on Foyle when the noise subsided. "Did Rhoda Jocelyn spill the ink on purpose? Do you think she wanted an excuse for going upstairs before us. She did say she wanted to change her dress, but Sobel wouldn't take a chance on it."

"It was nothing like that," answered Basil. "It was really an accident."

"Then—what the heck do you mean when you say it was a clue?"

"That's the sort of thing I mean by 'psychic fingerprints.' You see, Freud—"

"I've read about that guy in the Sunday papers," grunted the inspector. "I shouldn't think he'd be much use to a detective outside a sex crime!"

"Freud and his followers have a theory that the human body cannot set itself in motion by mechanical 'chance,' and therefore no individual human act is ever 'accidental.' In unhealthy people, the cause may be disease or abnormal growth; palsy can cause a slip of the hand, brain tumor can cause slurred speech. But in healthy people, thoughts and feelings are the only spark plugs of the human engine and it cannot move unless they are ignited, directly or undirectly. Even a reflex is regarded as a fossilized feeling."

"So what?"

"So unintentional acts, or 'blunders' as we call them, cannot be purposeless 'accidents.' If all individual human acts are caused by thought or feeling, then any act not caused by conscious thought or feeling, must be caused by unconscious thought or feeling."

"But I thought awkward blunders were due to not paying attention?" protested Foyle.

"No act are more graceful than those that are purely inattentive," returned Basil. "Sleepwalkers perform amazing feats of skill. Athletes, muscians and conjurors 'practice' in order to acquire the smooth action of habit—which is unconscious. Wild animals, like snakes and panthers, are models of grace, because they are unconscious.

"According to this theory, awkwardness, or 'abstraction' is not due to lack of conscious attention but to conflict between conscious and unconscious. This conflict is liable to occur when the consciousness represses the unconscious. Then, the unconscious can only express itself by speaking through dreams and works of art, or by acting through blunders. Once you recognize an unconscious purpose in blunders, you'll find that the unconscious seems to use great skill and precision in attaining its purpose in defiance of the conscious will."

"Then the kids are right when they say 'accidentally-on-purpose'?"

"Perfectly right — if Freud is right. Even 'accidental' deaths that involve individual human action—a doctor making mistake in a prescription, or a chauffeur running a car into a tree—may be unconscious suicides, or unconscious murders."

"I can just see how you would go down with a jury! You might as well try the the Einstein theory as a comic strip!"

"Apparently, the only true 'accidents' are coincidences— that is, accidents known to involve more than one active factor, such as an accidental meeting of two people on the street, or the accidental meeting of two chemical substances, without human intervention."

Foyle considered this. "Then if this fellow Freud has the right dope, Rhoda Jocelyn had some unconscious purpose for upsetting that ink bottle and spoiling her own dress?"

"Exactly. And if we knew what that purpose was, we'd know a lot more about Rhoda than she would ever tell us of her own free will. Blunders, like dreams, are messages in code. By decoding them we are able to eavesdrop on the unconscious and get at the truth. For no one can control his blunders any more than he can control his reflexes or his dreams. 'The unconscious cannot lie.' Freud himself said that after studying blunders he felt like King Solomon who understood the language of animals. His friends could hide nothing from him. . . .

"So you see the blunders a suspect makes, the things he drops, and breaks and forgets, his stumbling and stuttering might tell the psychologist as much about his mind as the marks of a bullet tell the ballistic expert about the gun from which it was fired. Yet I know of only one case in this country where blunders have been used as clues."

AN 'IMPERIAL MESS'

London, April 6 — (CP) — One of Britain's top-ranking military leaders said yesterday that Allied aerial attacks had made an "infernal mess" of Germany's transportation system.

He was plain the Russian bombshell had caused the greatest excitement in Japanese diplomatic circles. Moscow since January has went to war with the United States and Britain.

In Chungking, Russia's action caused a stir. Belief was expressed that Moscow's action probably would halt further transfers of Japanese troops from Manchuria to the China front. There also was considerable speculation on the possibility that the Japanese, who sportrust into Siberia, might abandon this project.

SOVIET'S ACTION

serious breach between the two countries. The broadcast observed that while the non-aggression pact was a power to run 24 months' notice was required for denunciation — Japan "is fully prepared to meet any sound change in existing Japano-Soviet relations in view of the rapid progress of the world situation."

In the opinion of some foreign observers here, the Russians only signed the pact with Japan in an effort to end the war in Europe by being fearful of Hitler's intentions from the beginning.

Electric Effect

News of the Soviet government's action, given to the Russian people by the Moscow radio four hours after the pact was announced to Molotov's office, created an electric effect throughout the Russian capital.

It was plain the Russian bombshell had caused the greatest excitement in Japanese diplomatic circles. Moscow since January went to war with the United States and Britain.

In Chungking, Russia's action caused a stir. Belief was expressed that Moscow's action probably would halt further transfers of Japanese troops from Manchuria to the China front. Consolidation of Small Cheese Factories into Larger Units Advised

Consolidation or small factories making but five or six cheese per day into larger units, with the advantages of lower operational costs and to increase quality of product was advocated before cheese maker members of the Central Ontario Dairy Products Association at their annual spring conference.

Speaking before the some fifty members present Thursday morning, Mr. G. C. Hart, director of dairying for Ontario, indicated that much of the lower quality cheese being produced in Ontario today was from these small factories where operating costs were in instances with antiquated equipment. Larger units, equipped with modern equipment and labor saving devices, he said.

Losses In Prescott Area

Considerable progress, up to a point, had been made in regard to consolidation of small cheese factories in the Prescott area, stated Mr. Lecker. Farmers had shown no interest in the operation of larger cheese making units but had backed at the point of buying of any new milk factories and then diminishing them in favor of construction of larger factories.

This had been the case despite the policy of the Provincial Government in subsidizing factory owners to the extent of one-half the cost of the new factory. Loans were also procurable to finance the balance.

Quality Important.

The question of increased quality of the finished cheese from production costs was most important when considering the export cheese trade in the post-war period. Lower production costs would be necessary to compete with other countries and consolidation of small factories was the method of achieving this, it was stated.

There was no way of predicting whether Canada's dairy production would increase following the war, or how the export trade would be affected. In anticipation of any possible decrease in the export trade, Mr. Lackner recommended efforts be made to bring about greater increase of cheese consumption in Canada. Publicity, propaganda and education would be necessary to help in this respect as would strengthening the dairy industry generally.

T. J. Hicks dairy produce grader, interjected that a great deal could be done in encouraging greater home consumption of cheese would be to see that the quality was right.

Why Disposal Discussed.

Discussion of matter pertaining to the cheese making industry was a highlight of the conference with periods set aside for this purpose at both afternoon and evening sessions when the matter given discussion with Jack Bain, district representative for Central and Western Ontario, indicating this problem was one of rising importance. Dumping of super into sewers or streams brought objection from health authorities and was also detrimental to fish life.

President of the Association Mr. Harold Henderson of Campbellford presided over the two-day conference which was attended by rank-ing dairy experts and officials.

MANPOWER SITUATION BAD

Wiarton, Ont., April 6—(CP)— Veteran chairman of the Georgian Bay and Lake Huron district reported yesterday that the manpower situation in the fishing industry was worse than it has ever been and that initial catches this season have been disappointing.

Financial Reports Given Commission

A record for all time despite the reductions in rate was the report of the hydro utility presented to the Public Utilities Commission at their regular meeting yesterday. Submitted by the veteran secretary-manager, Mr. Nicholl, the report showed a net profit of $90,851.26 which, after the payment of interest on net loss of $19,629.45 but included in that amount was the payment of $14,000 in lieu of taxes, interest of $62,660.80. The hydro utility report showed a net profit of $97,882.44.

Mr. Scott stated that the power used was increased 800 H.P., but the cost was decreased approximately $9,000. "Even the trucks in the hydro utility pay all the charges," said Mr. Scott. There were 3,250 domestic consumers of electricity in Belleville in 1944 an increase of 40 over the year 1943. The manager told the commissioners that an application for subsidy for coal used at the gas plant had been made and acknowledged by the assistant fuel controller at Ottawa.

An advertising machine at a cost of $1,503 was purchased for use in mailing the several bills to be sent out from the office. It was explained that the present machine was put in good condition and if a bottleneck came in this department it would enable it to accept the workings of the whole Utility. The old machine will be kept in case of emergency. The Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario approved the construction of a sub station on Dundas Street and also a high station line from the Reid Street sub station to the new building.

Little Red Schoolhouse Continues To Hold its Own in Modern Scene

By DOUG HOWE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

As a considered and weighted opinion, it can be reported that predictions of an imminent passing of the little red schoolhouse from the Canadian scene are both considerably premature and happily misguided. At a physical entity, surrounded by the verbal foliage of the years, it is liable to be around in Canadian education circles for a long time yet.

But as a symbol of a remote and static individualism, it is on its way out from one end to the other in the face of advances by the current trend in educational regimentation—the larger school unit.

Only in Prince Edward Island has the larger unit failed to sink the roots that already have sprouted firm and spreading branches in the eight other provinces of the Dominion.

Changing With Times.

For no greater reason than the war, the little red schoolhouse has withstood the modern trend and now, in the view of one Ontario official, is simply fitting itself into the trend itself, said he:

"There just aren't the materials to replace them even if we didn't want to use them. No, the little red schoolhouse is going to be around for a long time yet. It's just going to pool its resources with the little red schoolhouses a few miles away and it's going to have better and broader teaching and other advantages, that's all."

Absorbing, changing, improving in their pattern the larger units were shown in a national survey by The Canadian Press to be making definite progress amid the welter of directing bodies that constitute the Canadian scholastic pattern:

Nova Scotia — Municipal units have been accepted by 20 of 24 municipalities in the last three years.

New Brunswick — Only Restigouche county has not adopted the non-compulsory larger unit and it is expected to do so this year.

Quebec — Roman Catholic schools have made no move to change their administrative system but substantial advance are tending toward larger units. Enabling legislation was passed in 1944 but there is no compulsion.

Ontario — There are now 248 township school areas, result of the union of 1,423 sections. There were 3,747 sections before the larger unit system began, so 38 per cent have been reorganized as compared with 17.5 per cent in 1941.

Advantages Cited.

Officials, predicting "very splendid progress," cite these as advantages already proved:

More equal advantages for rural pupils because it is easier to engage school nurses and provide adequate health programs; better grades JK and X courses can be offered in centrally located schools; night classes, easier transportation, itinerant teachers of special subjects may be engaged more easily; more equitable distribution of school costs; saving in the purchase of supplies; more efficient teaching; improved administration and supervision.

The consolidation of schools is entirely separate from the organization of township school areas. It depends entirely upon the wishes of the people.

Manitoba — Any municipality which fails into financial troubles and has to be administered automatically becomes a larger unit.

There are no more than 30 teachers in the largest unit.

Saskatchewan — The C.C.F. government's policy is for larger units, and the legislature granted authority Nov. 9, 1944. Fourteen units have been established and the government hopes the entire province will be covered in 1946.

Alberta — Larger units system, started eight years ago, now compulsory and, education officials report, "entirely satisfactory."

British Columbia — In municipalities, only 19 school units have voted for the larger unit, thus losing seven. In rural areas, mainly in the Interior, 179 units have been formed into 23

Washington Spotlight

By C. B. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, April 6 (CP)—One of the biggest, most perplexing government branches is the Veterans' Administration, and it is about as poorly prepared for peace as some departments were prepared for war four years ago.

The administration right now desperately needs 14,000 workers to keep up with the mounting applications for benefits.

There are 84,000 employees in the branch throughout the country and the total is expected to reach 100,000 when returning veterans are available for the jobs.

Because the government was so busy getting ready for war and prosecuting the war, the Veterans' Administration was neglected, although its responsibilities started to grow as soon as the second Great War started.

Now it is apparent there may be 15,000,000 applicants for various veterans' benefits when the war is over and the disbursements are expected next year to reach a rate of nearly $8,000,000 annually—double the present outlay.

The United States, like Canada, arms 1st ex-service men and women with unprecedented, practical generosity, but delay in handing cases inevitable in the face of the present shortage of staff, is likely to create resentment among war veterans.

In all the talk about Canada having so much meat and not sharing it with the United States nobody seemed to realize that if Canada had given half the meat they consumed last year to Americans it would have made only a few meals for each citizen of this country.

A survey by the Air Transport Association here reveals that more than one-third of all jobs in United States civil aviation and that 20 per cent of air line passengers are of the weaker sex. There are 8,000 stewardesses, but women are in almost every phase of the industry except actual flying of planes and their number is constantly increasing.

JAPAN'S LARGEST BATTLESHIP SUNK IN ACTION
CANADIANS ROLL TO WITHIN 47 MILES OF EMDEN

Fourth Division Hurtles Northward 50 Mi. in Two Days

Clear Communications Centre in Important Area

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army in Holland, April 7.—Canadian Troops of the 4th Canadian Armored Division have cleared Meppen—vital communications centre of the Ems river and Ems-Weser-Ems Canal, 47 miles south of Emden—after the Germans failed three days of counter-attacks supported by strong artillery and tank fire.

It was this 4th Division which broke loose along the German-Netherlands border on the northern flank of the western front, hurtling northward 50 miles in the last two days to Meppen and German aid Dutch towns behind the enemy.

(A field dispatch from Douglas Amaron, United Press war correspondent, Saturday, identified the Lake Superior regiment of Port Arthur, Ont., as the unit which had blazed the way deeper into Germany than any armored advance.)

Greatest Ram Since Falls

This was the greatest push the division has had since its pursuit of the Scheldt estuary ended. France and Belgium last August and September.

The spearhead of the 4th was a battle group of Armor and Infantry commanded by Brig. Bob Moncel, St. Maurice. His forces dashed more than half-way to Twente Canal bridgehead, thundered through Almelo and moved into Germany to Ems.

Other Canadian columns drove northward through Holland in the drive to Emden. The Netherlands and recover the V-Bomb menace to southern England by capturing and knocking out enemy launching sites.

Bridges across the Ems river and canal at Meppen still have been blown and the Canadians must force a crossing at both spots before thrusting farther north or east.

South of Meppen, British 2nd Army troops have bridgeheads at Lingen and Rheine.

Advance Three Miles

Another force of 4th Canadian Division armored advanced three miles north of Coevorden, Holland, to reach Dalen, on the Assen-Coevorden highway.

Meanwhile the 12th Manitoba Dragoons of Virden reported a broad area was cleared of enemy in the dis-section of Zwolle and the Ijssel Lake. The Dragoons still were about 20 miles from Zwolle.

Security restrictions were lifted from the 4th Division when Ottawa was permitted to say it was the 3rd Canadian Division which captured Zwemer and was fighting in Zutphen while the 2nd Canadian Division advanced north from Twente canal immediately east of the Ijssel. The 2nd Canadian Infantry Brigade was supporting these formations.

Strong Small-Arms Fire.

The 3rd Canadian Infantry Division, moving north on a road skirting the east bank of the Ijssel river now is little more than a mile from Deventer, 18 miles west of Hengelo, and is meeting stiffer small-arms fire.

The Germans may defend Deventer, as they are doing in Zutphen, where other 3rd Division troops are having to fight inside the town after the "Water Rats" crossed a canal and a river 2,000 yards north. They are fighting through narrow, winding streets, and the battle is coming to an end.

The heavy bombers have just about done their part of the job. Of the targets they were given to attack Britain 1,000 to 2,000 strong now have been reduced to a range of more economical bombing and rocket-firing attack by fast, low-flying fighter-bombers.

What should be done with the Ruhr—Germany's industrial heart—is a question for the future.

Fighter-bombers now are operating from captured fields so deep into Germany they could give front-line support to Russian armies. But so far, although the Russians have called on heavy bombers from the British Bomber Air Force, they have not asked for close-up fighter-bomber support.

Air Operations Take Spotlight In Philippines

Manila, April 7 — (AP)—Allied air operations have taken the spotlight in the Philippines theatre. A communique issued today reported that United fliers shot down 31 Japs.

Heavily attacked Hong Kong a third consecutive day, wrecking 3 merchant ships with direct hits and starting tremendous fires along the waterfront.

Loosed 72 tons of fragmentation bombs on Tokyahara airdrome, Formosa, flaring many parked planes.

Sunk or damaged three sizeable lankers and two small freighters in the Pescadores Islands, west of Formosa.

Sunk 17 small Japanese cargo ships south of Hong Kong.

Started large fires in Tarakan oil storage area, of northern Borneo.

Troops of the 11th Airborne Division were fetched 20 miles in one-passenger hops or for reconnaissance flights, carried a small force of the 11th Airborne Division to unopposed landings on the two Lioosa air strips.

Ground forces had advanced to within 3 miles of Lioosa from the north.

Another Philippines provincial capital, Bangued on northern Luzon, fell to guerillas, and two other airfields were seized to make a total of four drones for the day. The fields were Alicante and Silay on Negros Island.

DISTRIBUTION SUCCESSFUL

Ottawa, April 7 (CP)—Transfer of distribution of penicillin to ordinary commercial channels has been successful and all civilian as well as military needs now are being met, the Munitions and supply Department announced yesterday.

MARRIED AT 61

Washington, April 7 (AP)—Kirke L. Simpson, a veteran reporter for the Associated Press and Pulitzer Prize winner, was married yesterday to Miss Ella May Field, a friend since childhood days in Sag Harbor, N.Y. Both bride and bridegroom are 61.

Allied Heavy Bombers Nearing End Of Gigantic Task in Europe

Paris, April 7 (AP) — The day of sky-darkening fleets of heavy bombers is passing from the fast-shrinking European battle theatre and many are being scrapped in the "notable experiment" which Prime Minister Churchill said the world was trying to knock out Germany — is coming to an end.

The heavy bombers have just about done their part of the job. Of the targets they were given to attack Britain 1,000 to 2,000 strong now have been reduced to a range of more economical bombing and rocket-firing attack by fast, low-flying fighter-bombers.

What should be done with the Ruhr—Germany's industrial heart—is a question for the future.

Fighter-bombers now are operating from captured fields so deep into Germany they could give front-line support to Russian armies. But so far, although the Russians have called on heavy bombers from the British Bomber Air Force, they have not asked for close-up fighter-bomber support.

So far as is known by correspondents in Paris, no decision has yet been reached on the disposition of four-engined bomber fleets.

Certainly a considerable force must be kept both as a threat and to fill gaps remaining in the final crushing of all German resistance. But there is something like surplus fly much of the force to the eastern theatre.

The heavy bombers are shifted, they probably would be American-manned Flying Fortresses and Liberators. Britain's big Halifaxes, Lancasters and Stirlings probably will stay where they are.

Because the British planes are designed to fit specific conditions in this theatre, many airmen doubt they would become a great effective in the Pacific area.

It is said that many of the big bombers will be converted for the purpose of flying food and supplies into isolated sections of Europe.

The fleets could parachute thousands of tons of food into hungry western Holland or could reach isolated liberated districts, in middle Europe, where direct access is impossible or where the needs of war are taking priority on normal transport facilities.

RUSSIANS SEIZE FOUR SUBURBS OF AUSTRIAN CAPITAL

Nazis Face Possibility Of Early Encirclement If They do Not Make Withdrawal

By MOLLY GILMORE

Moscow, April 7 (AP) — The Red Army today commenced driving the Germans from Vienna, and there were good indications that the enemy faces the possibility of an early encirclement if he does not make a withdrawal.

Border garrison columns to the south and southeast pushed northwards yesterday, and mounting assault groups presumably were protecting both flanks in the Austrian capital.

Fighting machine gun and sniping fire which the Germans have left behind them as they pull out ever but Soviet pressure appeared to be too much for the defenders.

Russian troops which severed the Vienna-Linz highway earlier in the fighting fought their way eastward today toward the capital. Approaching Russians were cutting the tired places north of the deer park, and were preparing to cut off German artillery in the Vienna area.

Heavy battles were in progress for the western suburbs of Wadlingau and Hietzing, the latter a transport junction for railway and highway traffic. Tanks and motorized infantry of this same Soviet wing appeared to be pushing into Hadersdorf, a northwestern suburb leading to heights overlooking the capital. The hills and the German artillery was located on these heights.

Suburbs taken by large numbers was being moved up to the latter subsided to back up the forward storm units which first battered into the city's defences.

Near St. Stephen's

Russian veterans of Stalingrad and Budapest battered their way today to within four miles of St. Stephen's cathedral in the city of Vienna.

Berlin announced that the Germans not only were fighting for every factory and stone building in the Austrian city, but a number of counter-attacks which were reported to have thrown back troops a bitter fighting.

Capital forces captured four suburbs along the city line, cleared the south bank of the Danube River east of Vienna in its 15th day of attack and reached the Morava River bridgehead opposite Lake Comachsle from the Adriatic was carried out by the British 2nd. Commando Brigade, which captured nearly 1,000 prisoners.

There was nothing in the official reports to indicate that either the 8th or 5th. Army thrusts were on a major scale. In both instances they were made on secondary sectors. While they improved forward positions, they had not made many important changes in the battle lines.

In the aerial warfare more than 2,000 Allied planes participated in a day-long attack on enemy troops in northern Italy yesterday, losing only four aircraft.

This fiying arsenal is the newest addition of the famed Republic Thunderbolt — the P-47N. It carries 10 five-inch high velocity rockets, two 800-pound bombs and 400 gallons of gasoline. Added internal fuel capacity gives the plane a combat radius of more than 1,000 miles. The pilot, still flying a single engine, single seater plane, is also navigator, bombardier, gunner and radio operator.

MONTE FOLGORITO NEAR LIGURIAN COAST CAPTURED

Allied Troops in Italy Continue Offensive Begun First of Week

Rome, April 7 (AP)— Allied 5th. Army troops, continuing their attack near the Ligurian coast in western Italy, have captured the dominating 3,000 foot Monte Folgorito, and are driving forward against scattered resistance, Allied headquarters announced today.

Monte Folgorito is 4% miles from the sea coast and 19½ miles southeast of La Spezia.

North of Folgorito, half-way between Monte Folgorito and the sea, the Americans were compelled to withdraw slightly from enemy positions. The enemy put up a heavy fire in that sector. A small German counter attack northwest of the town was repulsed.

Two British destroyers, the Maarse and Lookout, and swarms of American fighter-bombers supported the 5th. Army operations in the Monte Folgorito area. The destroyers, lying off shore, pumped shells into the German artillery positions. The Allied communique reported that some enemy guns were silenced and others were compelled to move.

Across Reno River.

On the eastern coastal sector British 8th. Army troops, in what was described officially as a "local attack," drove across the Reno River in northwest Italy on a number of counter-attacks which were repulsed by Russian shock troops in bitter fighting.

Capital forces captured four suburbs along the city line, cleared the south bank of the Danube River east of Vienna in its 15th day of attack and reached the Morava River bridgehead opposite Lake Comachsle from the Adriatic was carried out by the British 2nd. ABBOTT REPLIES TO CHARGES MADE BY DIEFENBAKER

Says Canada's Record of Absentees Compares Favorably With That of Any Other Country

By HARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 7 — (CP) — A charge that the government was making no serious effort to enforce the call-up of "zombie" conscripts was denied in the Commons yesterday and brought from a government spokesman a counter charge that the Progressive Conservative Party was making a political issue of the desertions question.

The charge was made by John Diefenbaker (PC — Lake Centre) during a heated exchange with Angus MacInnis, parliamentary assistant to Defence Minister Mc-Naughton, who had tabled detailed information about desertions was given in his statement yesterday to accuse the subject was being made a political issue by the official opposition.

Says Record Favorable

Mr. Abbott said Canada's record of men absent without leave compared favourably with that of any other country. He was "getting a little sick" of Canada being blamed as a nation of deserters.

Mr. Diefenbaker said that the way the call-up is enforced with regard to deserters was making "a farce of law and order in this country."

The exchange came during continued study of Defence Department estimates. The study was resumed after Speaker Gladstone Glen disposed of a motion of J. F. Poulin (Ind. L — Temiscouata) that the House adjourn and discuss the contention for one year of the life of parliament which expired April 17.

Mr. Abbott made these disclosures:

12,281 Posted as Deserters

1. A total of 3,223 of home defence troops have been absent without leave on being ordered overseas have been given the right of appeal under units and posted as deserters.

2. Soldiers who go absent without leave from overseas embarkation are usually shipped overseas and dealt with on enemy soil by their commanding officers there on summary procedure.

3. A total of 99 men have been tried by court martial for desertion and sentenced to terms of from one to 14 months at hard labor to 15 days detention.

BRITISH ARMOR 12 MILES FROM PORT OF BREMEN

Americans Break Out Of the Weser River Bridgehead, Advance Close to Hannover

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 7. (AP)—American tanks struck to within ten miles of Hannover today in a breakout from their Weser bridgehead, and British armor fought less than 12 miles from the great port of Bremen. The German High Command reported a British drive in U.S. 3rd Army territory east of Muehlhausen.

That is near the Kiaseln area in which the Germans yesterday had announced a counter-attack involving within 90 miles of Berlin.

Correspondents said the 3rd Army said they were unable to confirm or deny the German operations.

The British tanks flanked the great Weser river port of Bremen and struck to within 60 miles of Hannover on the Elbe.

A spectacular 3-mile drive by the British 7th Armored division carried to a point less than a dozen miles southeast of Bremen, a report disclosed, and slab toppled the crossroads town of Ahrensburg, 22 miles due south of the city of 340,000.

The British 2nd and U.S. 9th armies had deepened their bridgeheads over the Weser to five miles but had not yet begun their assault on Bremen.

(The BBC said without confirmation from Berlin that less than 40 miles from Hannover.)

The U.S. 1st Army attack on the Weser and Aller crossings up to the river in a 22-mile push that placed it 16½ miles west of Celle.

British tanks in twin drives charged from Verden, 26 miles southwest of Bremen, in a bee-line toward Hamburg, Germany's third city of 1,682,000, and reached an unidentified point a scant dozen miles from Luneburg, 30 miles taken, 22 miles southwest of the Trans-Atlantic City.

Another British column 12 miles to the west of Verden in the Oldenburg campaign, as it shelled and bombed the southern Rollyrad May 31 through April 2.

"Some major units" were slightly damaged, Berlin said it reported in a special press release on the British action.

Britain's 80,000-ton battleship H. M. S. King George V was the largest for five Japanese aircraft, which one British naval observer said were driven off. The British task force, which also includes the 32,000-ton battleship Howe, launched a carrier-aerial attack earlier on the British Pacific fleet, operating as a self-contained group from the bases of the Okinawa campaign, as it shelled and bombed the southern Rollyrad May 31 through April 2.

Five Other Ships Bagged and 391 Planes Destroyed

American Losses Placed At 3 Destroyers, 7 Planes

By LEIF ERICKSON

Guam, April 7 — (AP)— Six Japanese warships, including the largest remaining Imperial battleship—the 45,000-ton Yamato—and 391 enemy planes were destroyed in a two-day battle between planes and surface units yesterday and today, 50 miles from Japan, Admiral Nimitz announced.

Three United States destroyers were sunk, several others and some smaller craft damaged. Seven planes were lost.

Japanese fleet losses in addition to the battleship were one Agano class light cruiser, one lighter cruiser, and three destroyers.

The battle opened Friday afternoon when heavy forces of Japanese planes attacked United States ships and shore installations in the vicinity of Okinawa. Three destroyers were sunk and several damaged. One hundred and sixteen of the attacking planes were shot down.

No larger fleet units were hit.

Brought Under Attack

Early today navy search aircraft sighted an enemy surface force 47 a point about 80 miles southwest of Kyushu, southernmost Japanese island. Admiral Nimitz announced. Admiral's task force 58 steamed toward the enemy and during the middle of the day brought him under aerial attack.

No air opposition was met but heavy anti-aircraft fire greeted Mitscher's airmen as they bored in to the attack.

The Tennessee, reported damaged last month in a carrier raid on Japan's inland sea and last October in the Battle of Leyte Gulf when her sister ship, the Musashi, was sunk, returned after being hit by eight torpedoes and eight bombs.

The continuing attack finished off the last Agano class cruiser, the small cruiser and three destroyers. Three destroyers were left burning and about three others escaped the attack. All the enemy ships were attacked heavily with rockets and machine-guns.

Seven Planes Lost

Seven United States carrier aircraft were lost in this action.

Admiral Nimitz said Thursday 345 other enemy aircraft in separate actions Friday and added 46 more in minor engagements today.

Japanese planes launched a carrier-aerial attack earlier on the British Pacific fleet, operating as a self-contained group from the bases of the Okinawa campaign, as it shelled and bombed the southern Rollyrad May 31 through April 2.

Army Calls System Will End at Close Of War With Germany

Ottawa, April 7 — The army callup system will be discontinued when the war with Germany ends, Douglas Abbott, Parliamentary Assistant to Defence Minister McNaughton, announced Friday in the Commons.

His announcement followed a statement Wednesday by Prime Minister Mackenzie King that no compulsion would be used in the selection of men for operations against Japan after the close of the war with Germany and was in answer to a question from Howard G. Green (P.C., Vancouver South).

Refused information on the number of men called up for service overseas who have refused to go, Mr. Abbott suggested the Government know what the plan was, "for election purposes considers it wiser to give the people no indication of it."

Shipping on Great Lakes Booming Along at Unusual Rate for April

(By The Canadian Press)

Shipping on the world's greatest inland waterway, the Great Lakes system—already is booming along in unusual fashion for the month of April, aided by mild March weather which cleared the lakes and their connecting rivers for navigation at a time when they are normally clogged with ice.

The first vessels headed for Port Arthur, Fort William and Duluth to help meet two great bungers. Increased Canadian and United States lakehead elevators to help meet the world shortage of food and feed grains, and the call for Lake Superior iron range, to feed the giant steel mills here but the sun and wind had provided plenty of open water for early navigation.

From lower lake ports where many vessels wintered came reports that the steadily-growing canales were having no trouble getting there. At Port Colborne on Lake Erie, firemen and others were plentiful for the 14 vessels expected to arrive there. At Kingston seaway service officials co-operated in obtaining the men necessary to man the vessels.

Shipping company officials at Kingston predicted that eastbound freight traffic on the lakes and the St. Lawrence River probably will establish a record this season. They said there will be no difficulty getting cargo because there is so much freight of all types to be moved.

$1,100 Collected By Restaurant, Theatres in Drive

Wholebearted co-operation of city theatres and the Belmont Restaurant in the recent Red Cross campaign for much-needed funds was evidenced in the handsome amount of $1,110 collected during the last days of the drive.

The Belmont Restaurant and Capitol Theatres patrons contributed $760 in voluntary donations during performances given on March 31st and 31st. The Belmont Restaurant donated its receipts amounting to $250 taken on Sunday, March 25.

The donations taken at the theatres was a more unprecedented in the history of local entertainment houses, and was the results of an idea born in the United States last year, when theatre audiences all over that country contributed millions of dollars to the Red Cross.

Canvassers officials today expressed their wholehearted appreciation of the generous response of the general public to this form of appeal and also to the theatre managements and that of the Belmont Restaurant for their co-operation.

Chinese-Operated Laundry Gutted; Contents Ruined

Sweeping through the bone dry structure with lightning speed, fire early this morning gutted the central part of the building badly gutted the Chinese-operated Hong Lee laundry at 238 Front Street with $7,000 damage.

Fire damage to the structure was confined principally to the rear section of the building by firemen who battled the blaze for hours in the inferno, but the entire premises, both upstairs and down, is almost a complete loss, it was stated this afternoon. Owned by a Toronto man, the building was partially insured, but no insurance was carried on the laundry equipment and other contents.

According to the operators of the laundry the fire started in the drying room and when the door was opened the blaze spread to the rest of the building. When firemen were notified and after making the short run fire was already rolling out through archway windows.

Chief Cut Out

Practically excited at the sudden outbreak of fire, the Chinese laundrymen dashed down to the basement to investigate. Chief Cut Out was almost immediately cut off from escape as the blaze developed into a fiery arch, forcing him to being trapped, the man was freed by firemen who broke down a door in the lone basement window. The Chinese, Hong Lee, was another Chinese racing to the rescue.

The entire lower storey of the building was filled with dense flames on their arrival and with the aid of two powerful streams of water firemen under Assistant-Chief Percy Vatou, feared for the safety of the Boy-Mor apartments in the next door to the north and mounted ladders and cut holes in the shingles to flood the upper storey with water. Quick action by the fire crews raced to the sight smoke damage resulted to the apartments.

Bedclothes Scorched.

Damage, too, was last in rises as the upper front storey used as living quarters was scorched dry and the bedclothes of the laundry owners had already scorched bedclothes when firemen arrived and dragged to extinguish the flames.

Fire also took a portion of the building which suffered the greatest fire damage, however, with the upper storey of the laundry being almost completely gutted. Here again water damage resulted to a point of disintegration, while upstairs all the walls and rooms along a wooden way adjoining the apartment building.

Clothing and other articles being custom laundered were practically a complete loss as result of fire and smoke damage.

Tolerance One of Basic Factors To Practise if Nations, World Survive Says Archer Wallace

Toronto Cleric Addresses Open Forum of Chamber of Commerce Banquet

With the traditional Wallachian humor interspersing his eloquent points of philosophy, Rev. Archer Wallace, B.A., at the annual Open Forum of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce banquet Friday night, emphasized the fact tolerance is one of the basic factors that must be practised if the nation and the world are to survive.

The dynamic United Church clergyman, well known to Belleville audiences, and who incidentally is an author, traveller and lecturer, with emphasis on the fact that he is a journalist, spoke in a rambling way, yet in his usual elongated style brought home his philosophic points in a manner, that could not help but leave a lasting effect upon him.

"A good philosophy," he said, "was to let the other fellow do the talking. If some politician sent their speeches to me I would be amazed." It is a lot easier, he added, to keep your mouth closed. He told of people find it easier when they don't. The up to what they are talking about.

Thomas Arnold, the principal of Rugby, was a man who strongly abolished what he termed the college bullies. He believed that the boys should have their own lives. "All geese were swans", he believed, he said Wallace.

It is infinitely better to look at people and expect the best of them than to think and expect the worst of them, Wallace declared the point that teachers should look at pupils through their pupils' eyes and see their point of view. Illustrating this point, the speaker quoted a juvenile court judge, "there are no antagonistic to parental attitudes?"

"You, as business men," he told the banquet audience, "are the envy of everyone, then those to whom you talk will rise to your opinion.

"The word I know," continued is the word 'opposite'. How many hypocrites have we in the world. It is the key to the sense of the word." there are a lot of people who don't live up to their ideals and resolutions but that is not anything.

People have got to believe that others are doing their best, Mr. Wallace declared. Intolerance, intolerance after this war if ever there was one, would be devastating. Many are calling for discipline of the Germans. "But we must not get the spirit of punishment and vengeance through punishment."

Can Help People.

"When you are about to strike a man, if you stop to take a look and see what you are doing, then you will not strike him."

"You can help people, even if you despise them", Mr. Wallace said, "by trying to find the kind of intention which we are going to need. Intolerance is a psychological thought. It is put in the right direction, then it and I are the people who can do it."

There is a great resentment of people by when sullivan are not belong, the speaker asserted, "and we should remember that this is a world of business."

"Tolerance" he said is like a mirror. "What we find in life depends upon ourselves. If people have jaundice that makes the world look yellow they think the world is wrong. In the same way what we find in life depends largely upon ourselves."

Dr. Wallace was introduced by Howard Treadwell while Chamber of Commerce president was introduced by R. Madden.

During the address the meeting presided over by Chairman Madden was held in a hushed discussion on several important problems now confronting the city and district. Mayor Ellis Anderson, Mayor Frank Follwell was present and voiced his views on several of the points brought up which appear in another column.

Chamber of Commerce to Seek Resolution Urging Surv Of the Moira River Valley

Mayor Follwell Explains Parking Meter System to be Considered by Council

Members of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce at the annual Open Forum dinner Friday night endorsed a motion that directors of the organization seek a series of committees to secure a combined resolutions recommending Provincial-Regional Planning and Development of Quinte and a survey of the Moira River valley.

The motion was an aftermath of a discussion during which several members moved and supported a motion to that effect and later endorsed drew it in order that co-operation of villages, towns and communities bordering the river be secured.

Ald. Lorne McDougall read and commented upon a report of members of the survey of the Ganaraska River Valley and pointed out how many advantages to be derived from soil conservation, water control and reforestation projects. He dwelt at some length on highlights of the River Valley project and urged a keen Ontario meeting which he attended.

Parking Meters.

With reference to the proposed parking meter system, Mayor Follwell told the Chamber of Commerce that a committee had been appointed it advisable to instal such a system in the city. "Personally speaking" he said, "and investigated the possibilities of such an idea, especially in the city of Watertown, N.Y. There," he continued, "the committee had found that the same problems would be well known and highly esteemed in the Sommerville city. In religion he was a member of the United Church at Consecon and when able he took an active part in church work. He was a member of the Session and of the Board of Trustees.

Surviving him are two daughters, Mrs. C. A. Greenley, Toronto, and Mrs. Alvin Sprackett, Belleville; four sons, George, of Mossbank, Sask.; Frank, Harry and Roy, all of the 3rd. concession of Thurlow Township; one sister, Mrs. George Sprackett, Belleville; five grandchildren and one great grandchild. "sold on the idea inasmuch as it would bring revenue to the city and would pay way help to reduce taxes." Put In 300 Meters.

"The city council," Mayor Follwell said, "was considering putting in 300 meters, which must be put in the city during the period of one year. The city would retain 50 per cent of the income from the meters and at the end of the year they decided to retain the service. The 75 per cent paid to the installing company would be slowed a set credit on the purchase price.

Speaking of the Riverside Drive project, Mayor Follwell said that originally it embraced only the east side of the river, to divert traffic from Front Street, but it was learned that a known as Firemen's Park. This would necessitate a retaining wall being built out in the river for some distance from the shore line between that and the mainland being filled in. No plans, he said in answer to a query by Ald. Wills, have been made to care of the west side of the river.

Howard Clarke told the gathering that the situation "would be all topsy-turvy if the bridge was placed on the east side of the river."

Mayor Follwell reminded Mr. Clarke that the bridge idea was to deviate traffic from Front Street, the flood of which was a beautification of the river front, then the bridge would be taken into consideration.

Camera Corner For Prize Snaps At Corby Library

Brightened by the display of photographs submitted by local camera fans, the Corby Library camera corner recently established at the Corby Public Library is the object of much interest these days, according to library officials.

Although already considerable interest has been shown in the new corner, Librarian Miss Olive Delaney feels the addition to the library service would have even greater appeal if more photographs were on display. So again Miss Delaney asks local camera fans to send in their prints for the display and public approval. All will receive the credit due them and will be returned to their respective owners when the purpose has been served.

Lower Rations For Canada, U.S. A Possibility

BY C. R. BLACKBURN
(Of the Staff Writer)

Washington, April 7 —(CP)— Lower rations for Canadian and American civilians may result from discussions on Europe's critical food situation when split open here shortly between high British, Canadian and United States officials.

Col. J. J. Llewellin, British Minister of Food, and Oliver Lyttelton, Production Minister, are here already and it is understood that Resources Minister Howe and Agriculture Minister Gardiner of Canada will arrive in a few days.

The British ministers are expected to outline to the meeting the danger which hangs over the stability of Europe, where swiftly-increasing numbers of persons are on the fringes of starvation.

Allied success in Germany are adding thousands daily to the number of mouths to feed and the Nazi High Command is reported to be deliberately seeking to leave Germany as entirely as independent on the Allied forces for food.

Furthermore, German areas falling to the Allies in the west are largely industrial.

This German problem is added to the already desperate situation in France, the Balkans, Italy and the Low Countries where the people are on bare subsistence rations.

Officials here admit it may be necessary to lower drastically the rations now enjoyed by American civilians, and probably will expect Canada to follow suit, with the corresponding of meat rationing one of the first measures.

Bone Criticizes Rates Of Income And Inheritance Taxes

Toronto, April 7 —(CP)— Jamieson Bone, of Belleville, president of the Ontario Property Owners' Association, Thursday night criticized present rates of income and inheritance taxes in Canada saying they "would not be tolerated in any other country."

Speaking to the Toronto Property Owners association, Mr. Bone, former mayor of Belleville, said: "Compared with the United States, our taxes are 14 per cent higher in the $500,000 brackets and 153 per cent higher in the 50,000 class."

Mr. Bone said present taxes were crippling over-taxed people on earth, not excepting even Great Britain."

NEW LOCUST KILLER

Nairobi, Kenya — (CP) — A new locust killer, called "Basudin" is being introduced in the Middle East and South Africa. This is a chemical compound still on the secret list and provisionally called "606." It may replace arsenic, arsenate, the usual poison bait for locusts.

Japan's Anxiety Grows

Events are doubling up to give anxiety to the Nipponese member of the Axis, long since discredited throughout Europe and Asia. The war has been pushing closer and closer to the homeland of the Japanese and even Jap home territory has been bombed, with Tokyo suffering a number of times. Allied successes in the stepping-stone islands about Japan have had the result that Premier Koiso and his cabinet have resigned "in view of the gravity of the war situation."

Well might Japan worry. She has seen the evidence that everything she had stolen is going to be torn from her grasp, much having been already recovered. She has seen her partner in "international crime, Germany, 'losing' day by day and hour by hour territory which to the smaller Japan looked so impressive to the Japanese before Pearl Harbor. Japan has a great neighbor, Russia, and she has had a neutrality treaty with her. On Thursday Russia informed Japan that she had denounced the pact. What will be the ultimate outcome of the denunciation of the pact remains to be seen.

Defence of British Convoys

The Admiralty announces that during the most critical period of the Battle of the Atlantic, a number of British merchant ships were equipped with flight decks for defence aircraft to fly off and land on. As a superimposed flight deck renders the normal provision of derricks, winches and hatch openings impractical, this provision was confined to the grain carrying type of merchant vessel, which can be loaded from the side by chute and unloaded by suction pipe.

This contribution, closing at one time a five hundred mile air gap in the Atlantic (the extent beyond the range of shore based aircraft) fits into the whole remarkable story of the development of defensive measures for vital British Atlantic convoys.

Originally the unescorted ship convoy system was worked out on the basis of last war experience and put into operation. The insufficiency of naval escort vessels was made up by the use of armed merchant cruisers (e.g. the Rawalpindi, Carinthia and Jervis Bay.) From the outset merchantmen were fitted with anti-aircraft and anti-submarine guns (in the first six months about 1,900 merchantmen were armed; in the first year nearly three thousand.)

The greatest danger at first was from mines and shore based aircraft; therefore, convoys normally operated only as far as ten degrees or exceptionally twelve and a half degrees west. In the autumn of 1940 U-boats began operating in packs, principally between fifteen and twenty degrees west, while the enemy's use of the long range Focke-wulf Condors also extended the danger from air attack.

These new dangers brought a number of new defensive measures. Escorts were extended to cover at first to twenty-three degrees west, and later right across the Atlantic. In May 1941 the British first put into operation the catapult armed merchantmen ships, fitted with a rocket to discharge a fighter plane (usually a Hurricane), manned by the Fleet Air Arm, or later by R.A.F. pilots. (The disadvantage was that once the plane was launched it could not be retrieved, though the pilot could be picked up.)

In September 1941 the first escort carrier "Audacity," converted from the captured German ship Hanover was put into operation. So far over forty escort-carriers are mentioned as in service—apart from the large "fleet carriers."

Also in 1941 Army Navy gunners first went aboard British merchant ships. (Now the "Defensively Equipped Merchant Ship Service"—D.E.M.S.—numbers 35,000 men of Maritime Royal Artillery 13,000. This is apart from ten thousand merchant seamen who are trained gunners and over 100,000 more who have passed through gunnery courses.) 1941 also saw the addition of fleet corvettes and rescuing ships to convoy escorts, the latter carrying naval surgeons, etc.

In 1942, the Germans, as a result of all these measures, were forced to send the U-boats further afield, for example, to the Caribbean and off West Africa. In 1943, when complete shore-to-shore aircraft cover was provided for the Atlantic convoys by land based planes from Britain, the U.S.A. and Canada, and by escort-carriers and merchant aircraft carriers, the U-boats themselves became the prey. In May, June, and July, the average sinking of U-boats was one every day. While for the whole of 1943 the tonnage sunk by U-boats was only 40% of that sunk in 1942. In November 1945 Mr. Churchill could announce "We have broken the back of the U-boat war, which at one time seemed our greatest peril." Nevertheless in the Churchill-Roosevelt statement of March 1944 pointed out, the defence against U-boats still "calls for powerful efforts": efforts which the Royal Navy, the Royal Canadian Navy, the Royal Air Force Coastal Command, and merchant seamen themselves are continually making with the aid of the above defensive devices, and others whose nature still remains secret.

Major General Rose

(New York Times)

Casualties even among the high command of armies dashing across Germany at such breakneck speed as ours must be expected. The situation is as fluid as it is battle at sea. Officers in charge of these thrusting tank columns must move freely along the fighting front, taking all the risks of the wild cavalry charge of former days. Yet only Gen. Maurice Rose, commanding the Third Armored Division of the American First Army, was not killed in battle. He was shot to death by the enemy after capture.

We have eyewitnesses to what happened, but we may never know why it happened. German remnants stood for a while at Paderborn and gave us a hard fight there. General Rose, who went wherever his men went from Africa to the other side of the Rhine, was hurrying with his aide, Maj. Robert Bellinger, from one of our advanced elements to another. At a turn in the road their jeep almost ran down a group of enemy Tiger tanks. The general's jeep swerved across a field directly into the path of another Tiger. Resistance and escape were alike impossible. Rose and Bellinger mounted and surrendered. Obeying what he supposed was a command in German to remove his holster and pistol, he was shot through the head by an enemy tankman. It may have been the tragedy of a nervous trigger finger. It may have been a collapse of discipline. It may have been murder.

We have taken more than a million German prisoners, frequently by private. None has been shot after surrender. In the battle of the Ardennes Nazi SS troops deliberately and under orders of their officers massacred American prisoners. To annihilate all who oppose you or have opposed you is the ultimate residue of Nazi philosophy. That accounts for this sinister Nazi talk of "werewolves" to prey on the occupation troops after the war has ended.

Tell Them

(Sunday Chronicle)

Let the Germans who drag the remnants of their homes along shattered roads remember the Nazi bombers that destroyed the homes of Rotterdam and the shells that tore through the roofs of Leningrad. Let them hear again that gloating commentaries that filled the air when the German radio told of the havoc wrought in the wake of Goering's Luftwaffe. They coined a new word in those days. Coventrate! That word was born of the agony of an English town; and they spoke it gaily. It became a German word and it meant destruction. They must be reminded of that, too. But most of all they must remember the bombs that began the war. The bombs that fell on Warsaw. Germany began them the long misery which now ends in her own shattered cities. Now is the time to tell them of these things. Every hour let them hear that message. You asked for it. Now you are getting it."

THE QUIET MAN

The world's way is to strut a bit,
But quietly, far back, he'd sit
And watch the clever, bold and loud,
Attract attention from the crowd.

The world's way is to make the most
Of everything with pompous boast,
But very simple he remained
And from all talk of self refrained.

And we remember, now he's dead,
That once to us he softly said:
"If man does well he needn't shout.
The world will surely find it out.

"The noise men make to naught amounts;
It's just the job they do that counts.
It's by the calm at every gun
And not by trumpets wars are won."

Marines Could Hardly Believe Their Luck in Easy Landing

By EMMIE PYLE

With the Marines on Okinawa Beachhead—(by Navy radio)—You wouldn't think it could be so darn easier. It just can't be true. And yet it is true.

The landing of marines that I am with landed this morning on the beaches of Okinawa was absolutely unopposed, which is indeed an odd experience for a marine.

Nobody among us had dreamed of such a thing. We all thought there would be slaughter on the beaches. There was some opposition to the right and to the left of us, but on our beach, nothing, absolutely nothing.

We don't expect this to continue, of course. The Japanese aren't that harmless, after spending months in the big troops, rescued a while ago. This weather feels more like American weather than anything since I left home.

It is sunshiny and very warm. We had heard it would be cold and many of the boys were heavy underwear. Now they are sweating and regretting. I were two pairs of pants, but I am about to take off one of them.

We are dressed in green herring-bone combat uniforms. Everybody made the trip in khaki and changed this morning aboard ship. The men left their old khaki lying on their bunks and they'll be collected by the Navy, cleaned and used to clothe prisoners and our own casualties who have lost their clothes.

On our ship we were up at 4 a.m. We had done our final packing of gear last night. We brought ashore only what we could carry on our backs. When we put on our new fatigues, one marine remarked, "We look Easter style—herring-bone twill."

My schedule for landing was an easy one. I was ashore a couple hours after the first wave. Correspondents were forbidden to go before the fifth wave. I was in the fifth.

I had dreaded the sight of the beach littered with mangled bodies. My first look as I went down the beach was a reluctant one. And then like a man in the movies who opens his eyes and sees that he evidently looks back unbelieving. I realized that there was no slaughter—and no wounded. What a wonderful feeling!

In fact our entire regiment came ashore with only two casualties. One was a marine who hurt his foot getting out of an amphibious tractor. And the other was, of all things, a case of heat prostration!

And to fulfill the picnic atmosphere—

Aboard ship we had turkey dinner last night. So this morning the first man I met up with a big sack of turkey wings. Turkey wings are my delight. Instead of grabbing a hasty bite of K rations our first meal ashore was a cold lunched on turkey wings and oranges.

There are low chalky cliffs on this island. In these cliffs are caves. In the caves are brick colored tombs. Many of the Japs killed in these tums are the ashes of many generations ago.

Our bombardment had shattered many of these burial vaults. When our big guns ceased, the soldiers and marines took a precautionary look into by poking off the stone slabs at the entrances.

Then I, looking out to sea, stands our mighty fleet with scores of little black lines extending to the horizon. Thousands and thousands of landing craft bringing more men and big guns and supplies.

And behind me, not two feet away, is a cave full of ex-Japanese. I think I'll go back to it and look in. What a nice Easter Sunday after all.

Soft Cancellous Bone of Value in Plastic Surgery

Ottawa, April 7.—(CP)—Soft cancellous bone in the human body long considered "one of the most revolutionary developments in plastic surgery to come out of the war," was described today by Lt.-Col. Gordon Murray, of Ottawa, Director of Surgery.

The Canadian Army Department said Friday Col. Gordon, who returned to Canada from overseas, was in charge of the plastic surgery unit of the Army's surgical consultant group. Col. Murray, who is a graduate of Toronto University, is Director of Surgery at Military Hospital in Toronto first established only a year ago. He is also surgeon in charge of the Queen Alexandra Hospital, where he personally handled many cases. He was able to come back from Dieppe.

Col. Gordon, adviser in plastic surgery to the Canadian Director of Medical Service, said the idea first was suggested to him by a Canadian surgeon.

Chandelier in the medical term for the malleable, porous material found in bones between the hard ivory of the bone and the hard "block" bone, or outside shell. It is usually taken from a patient's own bones because of the quantity available there.

In building a new section of bleak bone, an eye socket, or a nose, the cancellous bone may be moulded into the shape required, and in the course of time, instead of becoming as hard as "block" bone, it takes on the form of living bone.

The department said the use of cancellous bone, which Canadian surgeons have pioneered and developed so successfully that plastic surgeons from Britain and other countries are expected to visit Toronto, has also broadened the use of metal plastic and the skin grafting process. Previously, grafts with pieces of hard "block" bone, painstakingly cut and shaped to fit.

Capital Closeups

Ottawa, April 7.—(CP)— One of the toughest jobs of the last session of the 19th parliament was that of presenting the controversial defence estimates—fell to tall, good-humored Ralston, Canada's parliamentary assistant to Defence Minister Mobilizer Ilsley.

But the slim, Montreal member with horn-rimmed spectacles enjoyed the chore. And when he finished a 75-minute speech the other day he had the house in a mood for a round of cock thumping.

Ralston, who is a barrister by profession, came to the Commons, in 1940 and when the system of parliamentary assistants was established he was appointed Lieutenant to Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie. Then Mackenzie was defeated in Vancouver North and Ralston became Minister Mobilizer.

From entering the House to present departmental estimates, Abbott was given a baptism of fire and given the job of preparing the important estimates speech.

The governmently military policy has been subject to nation-wide criticism. Mr. Abbott grappled philosophically and went to work. Then other Liberals rallied to help him in his cramped little office on the fourth floor of the Victoria Commons, stripped down to his shirt sleeves paring over material that was to go into the speech and to be prepared for reference.

He was in the middle of a circle of rabbited staff officers which included Mrs. Mabel Kent, Ernest Walford, Adjutant-General.

The First Great War gunner was obviously pleased with the result. He had gone overseas at 18 with a battery of artillery, had risen to be a general and there he was doing business with nothing under the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel.

New Knesher: When a new session of parliament reassembles later this month Knesher will be the name of the new leader of the Conservative Chamber.

Severe wounds suffered at Passchendale in the First Great War have undermined his health and he is going to a warmer climate to Cayuga in the Ontario County of Haldimand, which his family have represented in the Commons.

Mr. Knesher has been from the capital after 30 years service will never one of the last links with Sir Robert Borden's cabinet, for when his grandfather — David Thompson — represented Haldimand as a Liberal.

Later his father, Col. Andrew T. Thompson, representing the riding but was more widely known for finally lampooning the great at the turn of the century.

Col. Thompson, whose duties are, at present being performed by his assistants — C. B. Carson — ever had a more distinguished opponent than Sir Wilfrid Laurier, his only successful counter-candidate was the Sergeant at Arms, Colonel Eaton called it, to secret recalcitrant members from the more argumentive chamber.

Allied 5th Drives Thru Mountains North of Azzana

Rome, April 7.—(AP)— Allied 5th Army troops, attacking through the mountains near the Italian west coast, have gained nearly two miles in a swift advance north of Castiglione in the Serchio River valley, Allied headquarters announced Friday.

The U.S. Atlantic coastal sector, British 5th Army troops occupied four small islands in Lake Comacchio, northeast of Ferrara, and Liberation on the newly-won sandspit of Spit Alice, Rome announced.

The 5th Army drive opened Thursday and heavy fighting was continuing as the attackers pushed the attack with strong mortar fire.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

INTELLIGENCE AND CANCER

If there is one advantage youthhood, the intelligent person over has undoubted sister in reference to the cancer problem it is that she is more likely to be alert to the peculiarity factor if she reaches forty years. She is more likely to go to her family physician for examination upon the appearance of any trouble at all, whereas her ignorance and hence prudish sister may procrastinate. And if the trouble is cancer, is well advanced.

Thoroughly informed, nurses' institutes, social service agencies and hospitals appeals, in 1939 immediately and wisely, some single, some married and with families, of all walks of life, ages from 20 to 60 years, volunteered to report twice a year for five years for pelvic examination. Drs. Catherine Macfarlane, Margaret C. Shingle and Ruth S. Betterman conducting this study. The examination was just the simple examination any good doctor makes to determine whether there is any indication of cancer of the uterus. Now 846 of these volunteers have completed the five year period. Four cases of cancer of the cervix or neck of the uterus and one case of cancer of the body of uterus were found — under advantageous circumstances. All of these patients have remained well, 4 for over 5 years, 1 for almost 5 for 18 months. In addition to the five cases of cancer first discovered in the routine pelvic examination, 46 were found to have precancerous conditions. Of these 46 patients, 41 have been treated and 39 of these have been treated successfully. Many of the women who were found to have cancer or precancer had had no symptoms at all. Of the 46 patients, 41 had borne one or more children.

WEDDINGS

FORBES—ELLIOTT

A very lovely early April wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride, 168 Albert Street, this afternoon, the seventh, at three o'cock, when Mary Elizabeth Elliott, daughter of Mrs. Elliott and the late Mr. R. A. Elliott, became the bride of Hugh Donald Forbes, B.Sc., Deloro, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Forbes, Toronto. The Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth was the officiating clergyman.

On the occasion, the home was beautifully arranged with Spring blooms in multi hues. Mrs. C. Barlow, of Deloro, played soft wedding music during the ceremony.

Given in marriage by Mr. S. R. Burrows, the bride wore a particularly striking gown of white satin and marquisette. It was fashioned with satin top and marquisette skirt that fell into soft sweeping folds from a basque-tight bodice. Around the bottom of the skirt was a deep satin encrustment and the sweetheart neckline was edged with tiny Dutch points in satin. The long tight fitting sleeves ended in points over her wrists. She wore a dainty Dutch cap of marquisette from which fell a cape length veil of tulle illusion, and she carried a cascade bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and sweetpeas.

Miss Jean Elliott, her sister's bridesmaid, was attired in a charming net over taffeta gown of azure blue shade. The waistline was made in blue lace and the neckline was in sweetheart design. She wore long blue net gloves to meet her cape sleeves. On her hair was a bandeau of rosettes misted with shoulder length veiling. She carried a Colonial bouquet of pink roses and sweetpeas.

Lieut. Elwood Frost, of Camp Borden, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony, Mrs. Elliott entertained at a small reception in her daughter's honor.

On the wedding trip to Montreal, the bride selected a poudre blue suit complemented with chocolate brown accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Forbes will take up residence in Marmora.

LATTIMER—WEST

An interesting wedding took place at St. Martin's Church, Scarboro, England, on February 28th., at twelve o'clock noon, of Susan Evelyn Mary, daughter of Mr. F. P. West and the late Mrs. West, to Pilot Officer Douglas Locke Lattimer, younger son of Mrs. W. H. Lattimer and the late Mr. Lattimer, of Belleville. The vicar of St. Martin's, the Rev. H. Spence, officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a French gray two-piece costume, complemented with blue accessories and corsage of carnations.

After the wedding reception, the bride and groom left to spend a honeymoon in London.

A Pedicure Given at Home

Leslie Brooks enjoys having one pedicure a week.

By HELEN FOLLETT

DO YOU know that you can give yourself a fairly good pedicure? We're not suggesting that you treat defects that call for professional attention, but that you keep the toenails in condition and presentable. The pedicure is easier than the home manicure; you have both hands free, which isn't the case when you are glorifying the nails on your fingers.

If you have polish on the toenails, remove it as the first step in this program. Oily polish removers are a help if the nails are inclined to be dry, break easily. Shape the eaves with slippers or emery board, forming a straight-across line, never cutting down at the sides, a practice that invites ingrowing nails to form. Get into the bath tub, give your feet a rousing old scrubbing with soap suds and a heavy brush; this ritual will soften the flesh, making the pedicure more thorough in results.

Apply Cream.

Dry, apply mineral oil or cuticle cream, lift the flesh away from the nail with the orangewood stick, just as you treat your fingernails. If more women did that little thing once a week, there would be less trouble with the flesh banking up on the nails and hardening.

Use a toilet pumice stone on calloused spots. Massage corns with mineral oil. And don't forget that corns are caused by pressure and friction, so get wider, bigger and better shoes.

Another Washing

Another foot washing is in order to remove oil or cream; if any or either of these substances remain on the nails, your polish won't last very long. Dry well.

Tint carefully. If the polish runs into the flesh at the sides of the nails, dip it out with a piece of absorbent cotton. Put on a light film, let it dry, make a second application. Your rosy glitter will not flake away in spots.

Most women prefer a polish slightly darker than the shade they use on their finger tips, but harmonizing.

Couple Married 50 Years Honored By District Friends

Immediate friends in the Shannonville community paid honor to two of their members, Friday evening, when at the town hall they held a social evening and presentation in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Cook, who on Saturday observed the 50th anniversary of their marriage.

During the evening the principals of the wedding party of 50 years ago were presented with a walnut mantel clock with Mr. Cook also being given a smoking set. The couple were married in Belleville, on April 6th., 1895.

Both natives of the Shannonville district, Mr. and Mrs. Cook have lived all their lives in the community, until recently on the Second Concession of Tyendinaga, where the couple were engaged in beekeeping. Now retired, they reside in Shannonville while a son operates the apiary. Mrs. Cook is the former Lize Jane Graves. She is 67 and her husband is 68. They are members of Shannonville United Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Cook have three sons and two daughters, all of whom were home with their parents on the anniversary. They are Mr. Ira Cook, of Shannonville; Asa Cook of Aurora and Ray Cook, residing on the homestead, and Mrs. Thomas Childerhose, of Cobalt and Mrs. Earl Copson, of Aurora. They have 15 grandchildren, two of whom are in the armed forces overseas, and two great grandchildren.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Typical Mother-in-Law of Fiction

Dear Miss Fairfax:

After a good deal of persuasion, my girl friend agreed to marry me before I was sent to a certain post, too far away for her to follow me. At my suggestion she went to live with my mother, and the arrangement hasn't turned out well. I was the youngest child and mother's favorite, and she didn't want me to marry anybody.

My wife gave up a good job in another town to live in our old home. Mother has written me complaining criticisms, and brought charges which are absolutey untrue. My sister writes me to disregard mother's mischievous tattling. But I continued to write and begged my wife to stay with mother. Now I get a letter from her saying she has left, gone back to her old home, and she thinks it would be well for us to separate. I blame myself entirely; am devoted to my wife and wish to become reconciled. Shall I write her directly or ask Mother to apologize to her?

L. M. C.

In any negotiations for peace with your wife, I beg you to leave your mother entirely out of the case. Don't ask her to apologize, and above all things don't suggest that your wife return to your mother's home. Write to the girl, with whom I deeply sympathise, and tell her you realize it was a mistake asking her to share a home with your mother. And that when you come back, you will make her a home in which she will be complete mistress.

Tell her you're sorry you promised this arrangement which has been so trying to her, adn that you're counting the days when you'll have a home together.

Soldier-Husband Refuses to Believe Wife Was Hospitalized for Operation.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband is 23 and I'm 19. We were married in February of last year, and he went overseas on April. We were very much in love, and everything was wonderful until I stopped writing for a short time. That was due to a small operation I had to have performed, and I did not want to worry him.

It started him to thinking I was being unfaithful to him, and nothing I can write him now will make him change his mind. He doesn't trust me and says he's not a bit impressed with my words of devotion. I've never wanted another man, and I love my husband very much.

His mother gets an allotment and is beneficiary for his insurance and he writes her every week and says he's "On the outs" with me. I don't care about his insurance but want, more than anything to have him believe in me.

Wondering.

The remedy in a similar case brought apologies, love-letters and a general groveling from the Othello-like husband. But the "cure" is almost too much to expect of a high-spirited girl. My correspondent who was too much in love to be high-spirited, got the doctor in the hospital where she was operated on, to write to her over-jealous husband.

The mother-in-law element in your letter makes your situation difficult. If she were a "nice" person she'd back you up. Why doesn't she write to her son and tell him you've had an operation? If he follows the usual pattern of jealous husbands overseas, however, he'll make up when his anger subsides.

JOHN LEWIS WARNED

Washington, April. 6 (AP)—The War Labor Board last night warned John L. Lewis that unless work stoppages in approximately 200 bituminous coal mines end promptly "the government will have no alternative but to seize and operate the mines on strike."

NEW COAL REGULATIONS AFFECT EVERY HOUSEHOLDER

Householders given priority in delivery of next winter's fuel if they order before June 1st . . . .

● Every Canadian householder is strongly urged to continue conserving coal, and to place his order for next winter's supply as soon as possible. The demand for coal is greater than ever before in history. In particular, the demand for household coal, up about 40% since the war began, now far outstrips the supply. It will be absolutely necessary for every householder who ordinarily burns anthracite coal, to use a proportion of substitute fuels. If every householder co-operates with his coal dealer by placing his order at once, and accepts his fuel whenever his dealer is able to deliver it, the trucking problem will be greatly lessened.

Read these 3 Important New Regulations

1 Coal dealers must, until September 30, 1945, give priority on deliveries of available supplies of fuel to consumers who place their purchase orders before June 1, 1945.

2 Between April 1 and September 30, 1945, a consumer must not accept delivery of more Class "A" fuel than 75% of his normal annual requirements. However, not more than 50% of the normal annual requirements may be in anthracite (Class "A" fuel). A consumer of Class "B" fuel must not accept delivery of more Class "B" fuel than 75% of his normal annual requirements, of which in the Maritime Provinces not more than 50% may be chestnut sized anthracite.

3 Every householder who buys hard coal or other Class "A" or "B" fuel is required to accept 25% in substitute fuel with each delivery. Coal dealers are prohibited from delivering Class "A" or Class "B" fuel without at the same time delivering substitute fuel.

You can buy no more than 75% of your normal annual requirements in Class "A" or Class "B" fuel. This is the maximum and not a ration.

If you burn Class "A" or Class "B" fuels you are required to use substitute fuels in conjunction with them, for the remaining 25% of your normal annual requirements.

As an example, if you ordinarily use anthracite coal and burn six tons of fuel in the coal year just ending, the regulations permit you to order three tons of Class "A" anthracite, 1½ tons of coke or other Class "A" fuel, and 1½ tons of Class "C" fuel.

If you regularly use coke or pocahontas coal and burn six tons of fuel in the coal year just ending, you may order 4½ tons of Class "A" coke or pocahontas and 1½ tons of Class "C" fuel.

Class "B" fuel is provided for burning in equipment in which no other type of fuel can be satisfactorily used, such as blowers, Spencer heaters, magazine type heaters and anthracite stokers.

If you are a user of this type of equipment and you burned six tons of fuel in the coal year just ending, you are permitted to order 4½ tons of Class "B" fuel and 1½ tons of Class "C" fuel.

The quantities of Class "A" and Class "B" fuels allowed under this Order are a maximum and are contingent upon sufficient supplies being available.

CLASS "A" FUELS
Class "A" fuels comprise: United States anthracite coal — grate (broken), egg, stove, chestnut and pea, except that chestnut is not included in Class "A" fuel in the provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island; Welsh anthracite coal — cobbles, French nuts, Stove nuts; any screened coke (except reclaimed beehive coke), the largest (top size of which will not pass through an inch and one-eighth screen); low volatile coal—screened sizes, nut and larger; briquettes—anthracite, low volatile bituminous or coke; petroleum coke—in domestic sizes.

CLASS "B" FUELS
Class "B" fuels comprise: United States anthracite—Buckwheat No. 1 size and Buckwheat No. 2 (Rice), in all provinces to which this order applies, and Chestnut in the Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island only; Welsh anthracite—all blower sizes; any mixture containing any of the above classifications of Class "B" fuel; range coke in the province of Quebec only.

CLASS "C" FUELS
Class "C" fuels comprise: United States anthracite—Buckwheat No. 3 (Barley), Buckwheat No. 4, anthrafines and screenings, Welsh anthracite — screenings only; reclaimed beehive coke of any size and any other coke which is not Class "A" or Class "B" fuel; low volatile coal (unscreened) and any screened sizes smaller than nut; briquettes—high volatile bituminous; any bituminous or other coal which is not Class "A" or Class "B" fuel.

Toronto Maple Leafs Gain Edge On Detroit Red Wings Winning First Game of the Finals 1-0

Sweeney Schriner Scores in First Period and Then Holds on to Tally

By TED AFFLEGATE

Detroit, April 7 — (AP) — Detroit Red Wings, who started the Stanley Cup hockey final series last night confident of victory, found themselves one game down today to a team that had been able to do just that only once in the regular season.

The third-place Toronto Maple Leafs, who conquered the champion Montreal Canadiens in the semi-final series, blanked the Red Wings last night with a stellar checking display and shot out a 1-0 victory on Dave (Sweeney) Schriner's first-period goal.

Eight times in 10 meetings during the season Wings had defeated the Leafs, but last night, playing in the big-pay-off series before a crowd of 15,045, they seemed helpless. Their pre-game hopes had been bolstered by the return of veteran Syd Howe, who was injured early in the seven-game semi-final series with Boston Bruins, but Howe too found the way to the Toronto net cordon. Bert Saint Laud's defence and the smooth goal-tending of rookie Frank McCool.

Schriner broke loose from a defrost rush and, picking up more speed than his two Red Wing pursuers could muster, skated in alone on Harry Lumley, Detroit 18-year-old goalie.

Coolly the veteran fehited Lumley to the near side of the net, then ripped a 10-foot low drive into the far corner. Time was 13:56.

Maple Leafs tightened up to such an extent that as the game went on that lone goal loomed as big as the nine-foot wall of Toronto defencemen in front of McCool.

Twice Detroit had a manpower advantage — first when Mel Hill went off for tripping Jud McAtee early in the second period and again when Lorne Carr drew a major penalty for a high stick that closed Bill Hollett's eye late in the period and drew blood.

Each time the Wings were unable to solve the Toronto defence. Although in the last few seconds before Carr returned early in the third period Modere (Mud) Bruneteau, Carl Liscombe and Earl Seibert all were driving shots into a tightly-packed mass of Leafs near the Toronto goal.

The second game for the 25-year-old trophy donated by Lord Stanley will be played here Sunday night, then the teams move to Toronto for the third and fourth contests of the best-of-seven series.

Tunney Signs Singh To Meet Vagnone as Wrestling Resumes

No sooner did Nanjo dingh, the mad Hindoo who possesses no wrestling scruples, beat Ivan Rasputin, the terrible Russian at the Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto Thursday night, than promoter Jack Tunney grasped the opportunity to match the hated Hindoo with Ken Vagnone, the California Rocket and wrestling's new sensation, to reopen wrestling at the Belleville Arena on Monday night.

"He'll be a snake for my cobra hold," was Rasputin and Garibaldi in the same week with my unbeatable hold and the youngster from California is asking for it when he even so much as suggests getting in the ring with me. I'll not be responsible for what happens," moaned Singh as he was overanxious to sign Tunney's papers yesterday.

A tall handsome adonis Vagnone leaped at the chance to better his wrestling standing and comes to Belleville eager to advance his wares in the grappling world. Vagnone didn't attain the moniker of the California Rocket over night but has a long list of impressive victories behind him before breaking the eastern part of the continent. Only last week he wrestled to a draw with Pedro Martinez in Cleveland, he boasts.

Second main return of wrestling to the Hume Arena Promoter Jack Turnbull back Belleville favourite—Tear Morgan to meet Abe Zvonkin, the Hamilton rugby star, who spoiled the show the popular Joe Maich meets a newcomer, Johnnie Dempsey of Idaho.

By Appointment.

The big business man had died and gone to Hell, not to Heaven. But hardly had he settled down for a nice long smoke when a hearty hand slapped him on the back, and into his ear boomed the voice of a persistent salesman who had followed him much on earth.

"Well, Bill," shouted the salesman, "I'm here for the appointment."

"What appointment?" "Why, don't you remember?" the salesman went on. "Every time I entered your office on earth you told me you'd see me here!"

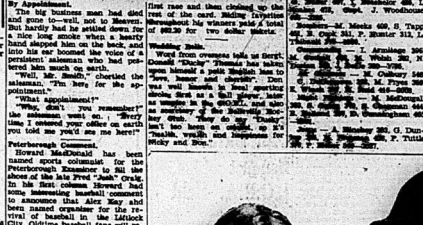
Peterborough Comment.

Howard MacDonald has been named sports columnist for the Peterborough Examiner to fill the shoes of the late Fred "Jash" Gay. In his first columns Howard had some interesting baseball comment to announce that Mel Kay had been named organizer for the revival of baseball in the Lifdick City. Oldtime baseball fans will recall Alex Kay as an outstanding umpire in the old O.B.I. for upwards to 20 years. It was under Alex Kay's personal supervision that the department broke into the athletic business of a small way just 36 years ago next month. A keen student of baseball Alex Kay was one of the better umpires who helped to keep the game up to dizzy heights in the "roaring twenties."

Commenting on Mr. Kay's appointment as organizer and chief executive of the newly-organized Peterborough minor baseball league, Mr. MacDonald says: "Mr. Kay they have chosen a man who has given generously of his time and ability to the youth of the city in the interest of baseball over a long period of years. His heart is in the game and his one object will be to give the boys the kind of inspiration that will retain them the game the right way and at the same time lay the ground work for moulding them better citizens in the future. No better choice of a man could be made for this grand piece of work among boys."

City Fathers Note.

One of the primary factors in the movement to revive baseball in Peterborough is the fact the city council is not only solidly behind the issue, but taking an active part in the organization. The Lifdick City council, headed by Aldermen Hurrell Doddz, Roly Clover and Max Swanson, realize the value of civic advertisement that baseball had brought to their community in years past. No doubt the Peterborough council is sufficiently farsighted enough to appreciate, that fact baseball is headed for boom times after the war is over and the fence where Trouble-maker had his fatal fall.



What of our own city council in Belleville. As a body have these august gentlemen ever done anything towards the uplift and advancement of sport in Belleville? Do they realize the value of civic advertising that can be obtained through the medium of good baseball, hockey or even football team in the community? The answer is quite obvious, but apparently they're not interested in the welfare of the youth of the community.

Remember When.

Johnny Adams rode six consecutive winners at the Bay Meadows track, San Francisco, some years ago today. He finished third in the first race and then cleaned up the rest of the card. Riding favorites throughout his winners paid a total of $62.30 for two dollar tickets.

Wedding Bells.

Word from overseas tells us Sergt. Donald "Ducky" Thomas has taken upon himself a pesky English bride to "love, honour and obey". Then it was well known in local sporting circles first as a "Bill Stover" later as another "Bill O'Neill", and also as secretary of the Belleville Rugby club. Ohm, boy do we envy him! too keen on cooking, as R's "health, wealth and happiness for Ricky and Don."

Blockade

On the day after Man-o'War celebrated his 21st birthday, his famous stablemate, won the Maryland Hunt Cup. In doing he lowered the great Trombinker's record for the course by more than seven seconds. Curiously, Blockade's only trouble was with the fence where Trouble-maker had his fatal fall.

Over the Top!

Blockade, famous steeplechaser, was a product of the Blue Grass country around Winchester, Kentucky, famous for champion horses. Here in Canada, the name Winchester is famous for the delicious taste and aroma of cigarettes which are blended — and "blended right" — from the world's outstanding tobaccos — Virginia, Burley, Turkish. OLD CANADIENS DEFEAT MAROONS OF YESTERYEARS

12,000 Fans Turn Out to Watch Performance for Crippled Children

Montreal, April 7. (CP) — Old Canadiens defeated Old Maroons 7-3 here last night before 12,000 fans turned out to watch a benefit performance for crippled children.

The Leo Dandurand-coached Canadiens had the Tommy Gorman-coached Maroons both had plenty of "fingers" in the form of present-day players but they didn't use them in the fight too as they revived rivalries of a decade ago.

Camillien Houde, mayor of Montreal, made his debut as a hockey referee for the contest, and handed out, two penalties in the two-period contest, one to Jean Pusie of Canadiens in the first and the other to Dee Smith of Maroons in the second. The mayor also contributed a couple of beautiful nose-dives to the evening's fun.

There was no official lineup, with each side playing some 23 players. Red Dutkin, property man of the Montreal National League, was on hand to present the Trophy to Hinsley Lach, the Yeslin Cup of Canadiens and the Prince of Wales Trophy to Captain Tex Blake of the present-day Canadiens. There was also a floral presentation to Maurice (Rocket) Richard, a bandanna filled with "goodies" and clothes for a new rocket, orrockette expected momentarily.

The Canadiens took down 8-5 before an all-star aggregate from Sperling and the teams of the Montreal National Defence League in an added attraction.

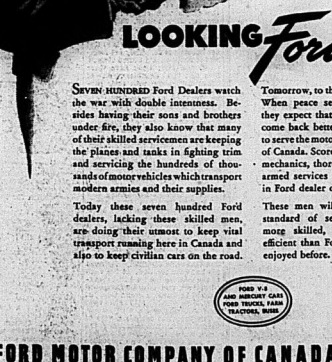
What's Doing in Sport

Word from Washington, D.C., yesterday was that home grounds would be allowed to ship their steeds before the racing ban is terminated, which is expected to take effect immediately after the "declaration of victory" in Europe. Owners of thoroughbreds in Florida have made it known they want to move their stables to eastern tracks which will probably be the first to open.

The explanation was forthcoming that regulations of the office of Defence Transportation prohibit the moving of horses for racing purposes but, as there are no U.S. tracks in operation, the rule does not hold.

Gunder Haegg, Swedish miler and Hakan Lidman, his fun-loving fellow-countryman, both plan to remain in the United States until April 27-28 in order to compete in the Penn relays at Philadelphia. Lidman, the hurdler has decided to stay over while Haegg has cabled for permission to prolong his visit.



Byron Nelson continued to lead the $10,000 open golf tournament at Atlanta, Ga., yesterday as he added a 68 for the second round to give him a 144 135 holes-to-the-halfway mark. Sam Byrd, of Detroit, moved up to second place with a four-under-par 66 for a 139 aggregate.

The proposed "good will" tour of Soviet Russia by a series of exhibition hockey games on the Pacific Coast has fallen through because of expense difficulties, it was announced by President Gerry Macdonald of the Quebec club last night. Martineau also said Montreal N.H.L. Canadiens had declined to play the Aces in a benefit game for the Red Cross.

Catcher Al Lopez of Pittsburgh Pirates, starting his 17th season in major company, has played in 1,714 games and was reported last night at Camp Lee, Va., to be aiming to exceed the mark of 1,790 set by Leo (Cubby) Bierneski, while receiving for Chicago Cubs and New York Giants from 1922 to 1941.

HOLE-IN-ONE IN TOURNEY

Atlanta, April 7. (AP)—Had rare performance—a hole-in-one in tournament play—was turned in yesterday by Danny Champayne, long-hitting Orlando, Fla., amateur in the $10,000 Atlanta "iron lung" tournament. He made the ace on the 164-yard sixth hole on the capital city club layout. His tee shot, with a No. 6 iron in the hand, landed just past the centre of the green and went in on the first hop.

LOOKING Forward.!

SEVEN HUNDRED Ford Dealers watch the war with double intentness. Besides having their sons and brothers under fire, they also know that many of their skilled servicemen are keeping the planes and tanks in fighting trim and servicing the hundreds of thousands of motor vehicles which transport modern armies and their supplies.

Today these seven hundred Ford dealers, lacking these skilled men, are doing their utmost to keep vital transport running here in Canada and also to keep civilian cars on the road.

Tomorrow, to them, is full of promise. When peace settles over the world they expect that their mechanics will come back better equipped than ever to serve the motorists and truck owners of Canada. Scores of additional young mechanics, thoroughly trained by the armed services will find employment in Ford dealer organizations.

These men will help to provide a standard of service more prompt, more skilled, more complete and efficient than Ford owners have ever enjoyed before.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 650
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

What do you expect? Miracles? ... each deal you never know the exact number of cards of each suit held by one opponent. Not without a peek.

But you should know what each opponent may have most often. Here is an easy rule to guide you. It is: An even number should split unevenly; an odd number, as evenly as possible.

Keep stalking this deal:

NORTH
♠ K 10
♥ K J 4
♦ 9 6 2
♣ A K 10 7 5

WEST
♠ 9 8 4
♥ 10 7
♦ A K 8 4 3
♣ J 8 4

EAST
♠ J 5
♥ 9 5 3 2
♦ Q J 10
♣ Q 9 6 2

SOUTH
♠ A Q 7 6 3 2
♥ A Q 8 6
♣ 3

You are south as declarer at a contract of four spades. When dummy cards are spread, you see eight spades, seven hearts, five diamonds, six clubs. How many of each suit are held by each opponent?

Opponents have five spades, an odd number. An odd number usually divides as evenly as possible. So, expect to find one opponent with three trumps and the other with two.

In the hands of opponents are six hearts. An even number. An even number should divide unequally. So, look for one opponent to have four hearts and the other two.

In the opponent hands are a total of eight diamonds, an even number. So, you must assume that one opponent has five diamonds and the other has three.

In the club suit, opponents have seven cards, an odd number. So you must assume that one opponent has four clubs and the other three.

It is not always so, of course. But every good bridge player plans on that kind of unseen splits. If he later finds a division screwy, he modifies his plan of play to meet it.

No system will ever be evolved to guarantee the exact opponent division. Horse Sense tells you the easiest way of doing the best you can with what you have.

That goes for brains or cards.

He was awarded the highest Scout decoration, The Silver Wolf, for services to the Movement in 1941.

Toronto, April 7 — (CP) — The performance of Gus Ogilvie's Montreal junior Royals against Toronto St. Mike's has proven to be a surprise — at least to St. Mike's. The teams are in Montreal today for the fourth game of their best-of-seven series with the young Royals holding the upper hand.

The advantage that Royals hold is three-fold. First they are up one game in the series, second they will be on home ice for the first time and last, two of their best players will be back on the lineup. If they don't go onto the ice over-confident and if they play the same type of close-checking hockey that won them the first and third games of the Canadian semi-final, it may be that the highly touted Majors will be well on their way — out.

Without defenceman Doug Harvey and fleet forward Johnny Chenier, the Royals hung on tenaciously Wednesday night to wear St. Mike's lads right into the ice. Tonight both Harvey and Chenier will be in uniform and the difference will be telling.

Hero of the third tilt, as well as star of the series to date, was Edmonton's Eddie Cutts, a fine gridder as well as hockey rearguard. Eddie, a student at West Hill high school in Montreal, did a three-man job on the ice. He was a second goaltender, a powerful rusher and a steady defenceman. Toronto Maple Leafs' coach, Happy Day, watched Eddie with a smile from ear to ear — for Eddie is Toronto property, contrary to the belief that he belongs to Canadiens.

Hap was also extremely happy about the performance turned in by Royals' youthful goalie, Howard Harvey — Doug's brother. Young Howie — who was supposed to have been on the Canadiens' list — was signed by the Leaf organization a few weeks ago. The lad is cool, calm, collected and as careful as they make them. In the face of blistering shots one after the other, he brushed aside the puck without batting an eyelash.

Royals seem to have St. Michael's number — much to the delight of Toronto fans, surprisingly — and checked the Majors' marksmen into submission.

Maybe St. Mike's won't be in that Dominion final, after all.

Nine-second Century?

According to Lieut. Ralph Metcalfe, it will not be long before some short-distance sprinter covers the 100-yard distance in nine seconds. That means clipping two-fifths of a second off the mark — so little, and yet so much. Metcalfe, a track star of the 30's, says it will take several years of development after the war before it is done and adds that it will take two sprinters to accomplish it.

The prerequisites would be someone born with the right kind of muscles, who from a very early age would engage in the right co-ordination exercises and games to develop the muscles needed for speed. At about the age of 15, the lad would first wear spikes.

He would have to learn to start like he was going to run 40 yards and finish like he had only run 60. That's a tall order requiring mental as well as physical conditioning. And then the nine-flat mark is not a certainty.

Port Colborne Tars Defeat Owen Sound

Owen Sound, April 7 — (CP) — Port Colborne Tars last night cracked back into the best-of-five Ontario Hockey Association intermediate "A" finals with an 8-5 victory over Owen Sound Orphans in the fourth game. The series is tied 2-2.

Exhibiting smoother finish around the nets and improved clearing in their own defence zone, the Tars were masters all the way. They jumped into an early first-period lead and maintained a margin all the way. They were ahead 2-1 at the end of the first period and 5-3 at the end of the second.

Reversal of form has been a feature of the series. Orphans won the first game 9-5, lost the second 9-1, won the third 9-2 and then lost again tonight.

Chamber, Fitzgerald and Kilpatrick proved most dangerous for the winners. Chambers scored two goals, Fitzgerald and Kilpatrick one each. R. Brown, Castle, Leitch and E. Brown also produced goals.

Shears and Wendorf, each with 2 goals, stood out for Orphans. Foster accounted for the other counter.

The Port Colborne defence of Gallinger and the two Browns turned in a steady game, checking hard and chasing the Orphan forwards harmlessly into the corners.

The deciding game is scheduled for tonight.

In Manhattan

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, April 7 — (CP)—Outstanding among Broadway arrivals in recent weeks is "The Glass Menagerie," in which Laurette Taylor one of the most distinguished performances of any actress this season.

The play, written by Tennessee Williams and staged by Eddie Dowling, is far from perfectly contrived, but it has excellent moments of theatre in it, and of these Miss Taylor, Mr. Dowling and Julie Haydon take excellent advantage.

All New York critics received it with extreme cordiality, and some even predicted it might make off with all the year's drama awards.

"The Glass Menagerie" concerns a mother — Miss Taylor — of good but delapidated southern family, whose major ambition in life is to find a husband for her crippled, depressed daughter — Miss Haydon.

The mother's role is imperfectly written, with its comedy of meanness and incompetence never thoroughly blending with its appeal of pathetic sincerity. But somehow Miss Taylor has pulled the role, and with it the whole show, together into a performance that brought whistles from the gallery and bravoes from the orchestra seats when she took her curtain-calls opening night.

In a year in which Broadway has seen plenty of good entertainment but no glut of new plays of merit, "The Glass Menagerie" rates high.

The latest racket on Broadway: A couple recently received a pair of coveted tickets to "Oklahoma!" sent anonymously through the mail. They went to the show and came back to find burglars had ransacked their apartment.

AT THE BELLE

"Something For The Boys"

If one can find fault with "Something for The Boys," 20th Century-Fox's brilliant Technicolor filmization of the sensational Broadway success, it's the title.

For "Something for The Boys" is more than just that, as all who see it today at the Belle Theatre will enthusiastically testify. Actually, the film starring Carmen Miranda, Michael O'Shea and Vivian Blaine (the luscious "Cherry Blonde") is everything for everyone in the way of grand and glorious entertainment.

Twentieth Century-Fox has taken the original Cole Porter song-studded hit and, as is this studio's outstanding way with musicals, given it a wonderfully rich and exciting film production, packed with hilarity, dazzling dance spectacle, an enthralling romance and scintillating new hit songs you'll be hearing everywhere.

Frankly, this writer admits it difficult to be thoroughly objective about Vivian Blaine who, in this, her second Technicolor musical, is well on her way to joining Alice Faye and Betty Grable at the head of the class. In brief, "The Cherry Blonde" is something terrific! She sings, she dances, she's got looks—plus! — and the most bewitchingly vivacious personality to hit the screen in a long time. Keep your eye on her! (As if we had to tell you.)

The film's outstanding featured cast includes Phil Silvers, who does his usual bang-up job of reaping laughs; Perry Como, the singing sensation of radio, night clubs and recordings (he's something special for the girls!) svelte Sheila Ryan, and Glenn Langan.

Orchids, too, to Lewis Seiler for his smooth direction; Irving Starr for the eye-filling production; Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson for their swell songs.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma had to cook the dinner today on account of being Nora's day off, and this morning pop was finishing his first cup of coffee with an expression as if he was thinking about his second, and ma said, William, shall I stuff the chickin?

Oh, have you got a chickin? pop said and ma said, Now William you know very well we went through all that yesterday when I gave you your choice between chickin and fish for today to conserve my meat points for tomorrow's roast. The only question is, shall I stuff it? she said.

Maybe you'd better, I'll be too busy at the office to do it, pop said, and ma said, What I mean is, William, you're so fond of my poultry stuffing. I mean it's quite a little exter work, but you always seem to enjoy it so, she said.

By gollies that's no joke, I could make a whole meal on your stuffing, pop said. You just seem to put the right stuff in it and leave the wrong stuff out, he said, and ma said, That's the point, William, whenever I stuff a chickin or a duck you invariably eat so many helpings of filling that you hardly touch your green vegetables and your salad. You can hardly call it a well balllenced meal when you just eat chicken and filling and then more and more filling. After all there's such a thing as vitamins. So perhaps I oughtn't to stuff it, but on the other hand in that case you're sure to make a long face, she said.

Well, there's something to be said for long faces, pop said. Many strong caracters have had long faces especially religious reformers, he said, and ma said, Then I wont bother to stuff it, if you really feel that way.

Okay, and I wont touch a bite at dinner except green vegetables and salad, if you really feel that way, pop said.

The result being she stuffed it, tasting swell.

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 13

"I bet I know what case that was!" cried Foyle, on familiar ground now. "The Lindbergh case."

"Yes. Dr. Dudley Schoenfield, secretary to the New York Academy of Medicine's Committee on Medical Jurisprudence, built up a synthetic portrait of Hauptmann's mind and character, long before he was discovered, by analyzing style of the pen in the ransom notes, and slips of the tongue in table talk with Condon. Of course, in this case of ours, we have no notes or talks with the criminal to go on. So we will have to analyze the slips and blunders with each suspect in turn."

"There's only been one blunder in this case so far," began Foyle.

"No." Basil cut him short. "There've been at least four. Pasquale drank half of Kitty's cocktail—by mistake." And he claims himself that he 'mistook' a diamond ring. Rhoda not only splashed her dress with ink—she has just 'lost' her cigarette case. It's too soon even to guess why. Psychic clues have to be studied and sifted like physical clues."

"Does losing a thing count as a blunder?"

"Of course. To 'lose' a thing is merely to forget where you put it. There's always comfort behind that cry of memory. You see, all blunders are mental diseases in miniature—the insanities of the sane. Forgetting or losing something is amnesia on a small scale. A slip of the pen, changing only a word or letter, is produced by the same mental process as the pages of 'automatic writing' recorded by self-styled 'mediums.' A slip of the foot is sleepwalking in principle; a slip of the tongue is delirium. The Mrs. Malaprops and Dr. Spooners of real life are mildly psychopathic."

"It all sounds pretty psychowell, sorry to me, too. How do you decode a blunder anyway?"

"If you were to get a bill and a check by the same mail, and you 'lost' the bill, and didn't 'lose' the check — I should conclude you were unusually greedy, or unusually hard up. If an engaged girl were to 'lose' a valuable engagement ring, I should conclude she wasn't very deeply in love. In the first case, you might be quite unconscious of your greed. In the second case, the girl might believe herself sincerely in love.

"In decoding a blunder, you ask yourself what unconscious wish could be back of it. Why should such-and-such a person want to do such-and-such a thing? The idea is that no one ever does anything he doesn't want to do—either consciously, or unconsciously."

Foyle smiled quite wide while he got himself a wedge of lemon meringue pie.

Inspector Foyle brought his fist down on the saucer, table with a crash.

"I might have known there was catch in it!"

"In what?" asked Dr. Willing.

"Listen, doc. Suppose these suspects don't make any blunders?"

"Most people makes several blunders every week of their lives."

"Mebbe, but suppose the guilty one just doesn't make any at all?" Basil smiled a little sadly. "He's the one person who's absolutely sure to do so—poor devil! The criminal who pretends he is innocent has only repress all his natural impulses of flight, fear and triumph. He has to lie, and lying is a form of repression. It invariably sets up conflicts, which in turn causes blunders. That's why awkwardness and guilt have been associated from time immemorial. Not only that, but he has to repress his conscience, and that causes as much mental trouble in civilized people as the repression of animal instincts. Most of the so-called 'shell-shock' cases I treated were due to memories of having bayonetted a wounded enemy."

Foyle pondered this. "You aren't used to dealing with crooks, doc. Take it from me, those babies are tough birds. They don't feel remorse."

"No? What about that one fatal blunder of every crook you ever just talking about? Like the piece of rope the murderer 'forgot' in the Titterton case. When a criminal makes an obvious mistake that can lead only to his capture—what unconscious purpose can cause it except remorse and the wish to give himself up to the police? Stekel calls such blunders 'unconscious confessions.'"

After they had paid their checks, Basil said, "One thing about this case puzzles me.

"One thing?" Foyle laughed.

"Yes. Why did Pasquale himself suggest Rhoda Foyle. There were plenty of murder jobs—apparently—she had every reason for keeping Kitty alive?"

"Ask the murderer, doc." Foyle sighed. "This sure is one murderer who doesn't seem to have made one fatal blunder."

"Give him time, Inspector. He will!"

Outside, the newsboys were shouting.

"Debewtante Moldered! Read All-about-it!"

"Debewtante Murdewered! Latest!"

Basil bought a paper.

"Read it to me, Hec."

"How Did Kitty Jocelyn Reach 5th Street?

"Was Cocktail Fatal?

"Exclusive Interview with District Attorney Sobel.

"I wish he wouldn't talk so much," grumbled Foyle.

"He didn't talk as much as you might think," answered Basil, his eyes on the paper. "Not a word about the impersonation, and no mention of X-Ray—just nameswerely 'a refreshing medicine.'"

The newspaper in question had padded out its scanty array of facts with luscious stake of hokum. On the gossip page, there was an article on "Kitty Jocelyn As I Knew Her" by Lowell Cabot. And, of course, there were photographs. "Kitty Jocelyn at Cannes"—in a bathing suit. "Kitty Jocelyn with a Friend on Fifth Avenue"—the friend was Victorine.

Altogether, there was so much space given to the arraignment of not notice the photograph about the crisis in South America, until he reached home. But there he read that diplomatic relations were strained between the republics of San Fernando and Montemfijter. There had been a series of frontier incidents. . . .

Just those two lines — tucked away in a lower corner of the second page, when the makeup man ran out of crime and scandal news. Yet Basil marked it with a red pencil clipped it out, and filed it with private records he was keeping of the Jocelyn case. Which might have puzzled Inspector Foyle, had he been present.

As Foyle appeared outside the District Attorney's office Monday morning, he was dazzled by two flashlight bulbs and a flood of questions.

"What's the 'Mystery Man' doing here?"

"Is he mixed up in the Jocelyn case?"

Foyle had no idea what the newspaper men were talking about. But he kept his own counsel, and went into the private office.

"Sorry I'm a bit late, D. A. . . ." His voice trailed off as he saw Sobel was not alone. Of the two other men who faced him, one was a solemn, colorless and correct, obviously a clerk or a secretary. The other was just as obviously a personage. His eyes were somber under arched brows and heavy lids. His subtle mouth was set in lines of tragedy. But something debonair in the swing of his raglan coat suggested the gallant sweep of the arm. One gloved hand was holding a gold topped malacca stick as if it were a rapier or a wand.

"This is Inspector Foyle, Mr. Danine," explained Sobel.

"Oh. . . ."

The brows lifted slightly, and the hooded eyes looked down. There were a pale, cold blue. "I am glad you are here, Inspector Doyle—"

"Foyle." The inspector corrected him involuntarily.

"I beg your pardon—Foyle, of course," said Danine, affably without a trace of foreign accent, except for the slight hiatus of his "s."

"I have just been telling the district attorney what a shock the news of Miss Jocelyn's terrible death was to me. I am—I was very fond of Miss Jocelyn." He paused. Then with a visible effort, he went on. "I might as well be frank, Inspector. I had hoped to make Miss Jocelyn my wife."

Foyle muttered something consolatory.

"Thank you, Inspector. I am indeed grateful for your sympathy. As I was telling Mr. Sobel, I have decided to offer a reward of ten thousand dollars for any information leading to the capture of Miss Jocelyn's murderer. If there is anything else I can do to help you, please call on me."

"It's very generous of you, Mr. Danine."

Sobel was beaming. Foyle listened sullenly to the outpourings of courtesies. The more the guy talked the less he said.

"Now if there are any questions you wish to ask me. . . ."

"None at all, Mr. Danine." Sobel's voice was unctious.

"Just a minute, sir." Foyle intervened. "Were you actually engaged to Miss Jocelyn before her death?"

Danine seemed on the point of resenting this bluntness. Then he capitulated with a slight shrug.

"Yes, Inspector, I was." He added, wistfully, "She must have known my feeling for her. Women always know these things—even young women."

"Afraid I must ask an even more direct question," went on Foyle. "Have you any reason to believe that Miss Jocelyn returned to—to—feelings for her?"

"Look here, Foyle!"—cried Sobel. "That's unnecessary!"

Only One Active Case of Tuberculosis Found in X-ray Survey in City

The summary of a large number of industrial workers, shop and plant employees, and workers in general, who underwent X-ray examination or they should be can be taken as definite proof that the war against tuberculosis is being waged on a front where it is most needed. The summary, according to leading physicians, discloses a splendid record of which the city might well be proud.

In short, or well over 3,000 people of all classes who underwent the chest examination, only one was found to be a victim of active tuberculosis, and following up in an institution for treatment. This is considered a very low percentage of the city's war industry plants.

Of the 864 people who represented small industries, hotels, restaurants, shops and offices, there was only one case of minimal pulmonary tuberculosis the activity of which was questionable. Another case was diagnosed as minimal, inactive, and another was classed as a suspect.

The above information was rendered by Dr. A. Hall, Medical Officer of Health from Mr. J. D. McLellan, Clinician of the Division

Sidney Boy on Destroyer 'Sioux' Which Took Part in Daring Raid

When the saucy "Sioux" Canadian Tribal destroyer, in a daring raid with three British destroyers thrust down a Norwegian fjord and rescued 200 prisoners of war from beneath the mumies of Nazi guns, a Sidney Canadian, Petty Officer Christie, son of Mrs. Annie Sailer and the late Percival Christie, went through the action unscathed.

A Norwegian naval communique disclosed the secret action against long chapter to the long saga of British naval exploits against Nazi chids such feats as the "Cossack's Raid" in 1940 to rescue imprisoned British seamen from the Nazi hell ship "Altmark".

Most of the prisoners rescued were women and children who had been holding in slave camps in the high snow-covered mountains of the bleak island of Soeroy in West Finmark, moving equipment and supplies running German patrols.

As the Germans began withdrawing, the patriots related, the Norwegians were ordered to leave their homes and move south. To make certain the order was obeyed, the Nazis methodically burned down every house on the island, slaughtered all animals and destroyed food supplies. Many women, too ill to be moved, were rousted alive by flames from their homes, the Norwegians said.

The Norwegians took 1,300 of the healthiest men and women away to slave labor, while other patriots were left to care for the sick. Many of them had eaten nothing for the last 13 weeks but fish and pieces of bark and heather.

Their rescue—at a date not specified—was made after the destroyers steamed in unexpectedly into the Soeroy harbor and returned the Norwegians to a British port.

Petty Officer Christie is an original member of the crew of the "Sioux". He joined the Navy when she was first commissioned.

ABBOTT REPLIES

4. The Army's demobilization policy will follow the "Battle Instruction" principle.

5. The Army call-up system will be discontinued after the war in Europe.

6. Canadian casualties since Nov. 1 have been below estimates for the period by December last by 10,000.

7. Physical standards of men accepted in the Army have not been lowered to any extent.

Charges Army Standards Low

The debate brought from Mr. Poulin the charge that the physical standards for acceptance into the Army now were so low that a man "has to be a cripple" before being classed as unfit.

"In the case of Private Lloyd Green (PC) — Vancouver South—I request that National Resources Mobilization Act troops be used as occupational troops in Germany and to fight against Japan."

Roy Graham (L — Swift Current) suggested that all merchant ships were not available, air transports be used to bring Canadian troops home after the war in Europe ends.

Mr. Diefenbaker said that 50 per cent of the N.R.M.A. troops from Quebec were of French origin and had gone absent without leave before embarkation. This compared with 26 per cent from the prairies, 10 per cent from the Maritimes, 9 per cent from Pacific Command and 5.8 per cent from Ontario.

These men were being rounded up at a rate of about nine per day and that was not serious enough punishment, he said.

"I am getting tired of this blasting of Canada's soldiers and deserters," said Mr. Abbott.

"This is not blaming Canada at all," said Mr. Diefenbaker. "This is pointing out the facts. I am trying to present my arguments fairly, and I am pointing out the fact that there is no serious effort on the part of the government to enforce the law."

Replied Mr. Abbott: "I deny that, and I deny it most emphatically. I can make an argument that as well as my honorable friend can."

Enforcement Serious Matter

Mr. Diefenbaker said the matter of enforcement was a serious one and one which affected the question but action on the part of the government was limited but the whole force of public opinion designed to ensure that the law should be enforced.

Mr. Abbott said that when defence regulations ceased to be in force they would be removed by the Commons last year it was disclosed there were 11,000 men who were unaccounted for and "it did not cause a ripple."

"Nobody asked any particular questions, any embarrassing ones of us on. Everybody knows that in an army of 600,000 or 700,000, many things will go astray without leave and as this is a large country they get lost in the sand.

"Yesterday I gave the total number — 16,000 — of the accumulative total of men who were still absent without leave.

"I may say that I am personally favorably impressed with the figures of the armed forces of any other country. I personally I am getting a little tired of the criticism being trying on this matter in our country."

No Deserter Has Ammunition

Of the 3,228 men posted as deserters, about 1,400 of them were in possession of rifles when they left, but not with ammunition. Up to date there were still 126 rifles which could have been recovered.

Mr. Abbott said that the army's demobilization plan would be based on principles of "service, length of service and compassion."

Veterans' Industrial Troops

Dr. J. L. Ralston, former defence minister, urged that man discharged from the armed forces have an advantage in the post-war labor market. He suggested also that the men with the longest overseas service, but not necessarily the longest service in the army be brought home first, and that a married man be given priority over a single man with similar service.

Mr. Abbott said Canada's occupational troops in Germany would be made up of men who volunteered for the task and any deficiencies in numbers would be made up from men with the shortest service overseas. Shipping would be occupied with the re-deployment of troops to the Pacific and for this reason there would be a delay in getting Canadian forces home.

In the Pacific War

Mr. Green said it was unfair to let the men who fought the war in Europe to go to the Pacific while there was plenty of civilians who had done no fighting at all.

He cried unsuccessfully to get Mr. Mosher, labor member of the air force to be sent against Japan. Mr. Abbott said that it was a matter of government policy which would be announced in due course.

Mr. Abbott said the government knows just what the plan is but for security reasons prefers to give the people no information," said Mr. Green. .

In reply to questions by Mr. Green Mr. Abbott clarified an earlier statement as to a number of N. R.M.A. men who have gone overseas as such. A total of 11,836 of the 16,000 the army was authorized to and overseas have been dispatched. Ten thousand men still remain to be sent under the original order-in-council, with a reinforcement of 4,000.

He disclosed that N.R.M.A. men may voluntarily convert to general service status after arrival overseas, but men who did this were not discharged from the 16,000 figure set in the order-in-council.

Profiled Critique of P. C. Party

Mr. Poulin, at one point in the debate, turned from the estimates to criticize the Progressive Conservative party.

"I regret to say the Progressive Conservative party which was a great party, is split into what are not members of parliament," he said. "As No. 1, John Bracken; as No. 2, Harry Leader; as No. 3, Mr. McTague; as No. 4, the former private secretary of R. B. Bennett."

The defeat of Gen. McNaughton in the Grey North by-election was not brought about by the successful Progressive Conservative candidate but by the C. C. F., Stanley Knowles and members of the cabinet who organized an overseas trip for Mr. Bracken just prior to the election.

William H. Finkle Elected President and Reports Given At Annual Meeting of YMCA

325 Former Members of "Y" on Active Service and 20 Pay Supreme Sacrifice

Many years interested in youth welfare work and well-known manufacturer of this city, Mr. W. H. Finkle was the assistant of the Belleville Young Men's Christian Association at its annual meeting and election of officers held Thursday evening.

Brief reports of the many committees activities of the past year were submitted by the respective chairmen, while the report of the Women's Auxiliary of the "Y" was also given. Last year's president, Mr. Lloyd Hicks presided over the meeting.

In the membership report submitted by Peterton Thompson it was shown that 325 former members of the "Y" are on active service with 20 having paid the supreme sacrifice. During the past year there were 500 members, a net increase of 51 over the preceding year. Membership revenues increased $202.70 during the year.

Fitting Gesture.

A fitting gesture on the part of the "Y" is the extension of free memberships to sons of men on active service with six months free membership being given to active service men or women discharged from the service or through hospitalization.

Conducted Regularly.

As chairman of boys' and girls' work W. H. Finkle reported that gymnasium classes, showers, swimming, club meetings, educational and social affairs had been conducted regularly with the building throughout the year, as well as seasonal outdoors sports and activities.

Spring softball league activities in co-operation with the Kiwanis Club had provided competition for 800 in the Ki-Y series, while during July and August indoor camp or a summer fun club had been conducted, consisting of games, showers and swimming and hikes. Also 70 campers had been accommodated at the Moira Lake summer camp.

In co-operation with the Board of Education, supervision of playgrounds on the East and West hills had been given with regular program of activities. October saw the Halloween party in co-operation with the Kinsmen Club entertaining a total of 1,200 children, while in November the weekly party of the Teen Age Club began with 250-300 attending each week.

Groups meeting regularly at the "Y" are the Business Girls' Club, the Employed Boys' Brotherhood and the Hi-Y Club.

Sixty Classes Held.

The physical department under E. M. Wilson reported sixty classes with a total of 1,200 children held with an attendance of 29,608. Special classes of first year nurses and airmen's wives have been conducted. Swimming instruction given resulted in 109 learning to swim with 176 passing graded swimming tests. A four wall hand ball court had been put into service.

The house and dormitory report showed bed occupancy had totalled 17,900 with 30,289 using lobby and games facilities. Group meetings held during the year totalled 155 with an attendance of 4,759.

The bowling alleys had been repaired last August with 36 teams using the alleys during the year. These included Ladies' afternoon and evening groups, the Bell Telephone Co., airmen from No. 6 R.D., business men and girl bank employees.

Operating Statement.

Operating statement for the year ending December 31st showed total receipts of $21,516.88 as compared with expenditures of $20,898.76. The year's operating deficit was reduced by receipts from the 1944 four-in-one financial campaign the "Y" share of which was $8,186.67. Bank balance as at the year end was $6,076.35.

Belleville had donated $400 to the general world service fund with the Women's Auxiliary of the "Y" contributing $95; boys' camp collection $10.21, and "Y" boys profits from Christmas card sale, $15.85.

Pats, Bathe, Swims Given

The war services committee headed by Mr. W. Adamson reported lobby, personal service and checking being rendered which cost to 36,750 persons during the year. Free baths and swimming had been given to another 8,240 and free bowling to another 3,187. Room and overnight bed had been supplied to another 6,697 service personnels at 50 cents. Service men's dances had been held in the gym each Wednesday and Saturday evening during the winter season with Sunday entertainment from October to May.

With the Y. M. C. A. movement having been in operation 100 years, the Y. M. C. A. centennial year was observed with fitting observance of the occasion being marked in the city with special addresses. Dr. Chas. Bishop addressed the evening service at Bridge Street United Church, and special addresses were delivered at each of the three local service clubs.

Expand "Y" War Services

The expansion of the "Y" war service program since the beginning of the war is evidenced by the fact that last year 17 hostels are operated, as well as 26 town or urban centres and 1,766 rural service centres, and served men at 906 canteens. The "Y" has a total of 1,845 staff members working full time in the interest of Canada's men in uniform.

The following friends of the local Y. M. C. A. were noted to have died during the past year:

J. W. Noble, Director—August 1, 1944; R. R. McBride, Former Director—October 1944; Vern Davis, Camp Cook — January 3, 1944; Spence Clarke — January 16; Frank Graham — December; Harry Hall; Charles Cochrane — December 30 years — February; R. A. In the financial report of the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. given by Mrs. Jamais Attockle, receipts for the year were shown as $1,798.66 with expenditures being $1,595.81. An operating balance of $202.15 was shown.

Catering to supper meeting held at the "Y" was shown to be the most lucrative activity of the auxiliary with $1,364.33 having been collected from this source. A bank balance of $202.85 from the year previous, together with supper receipts and incidentals made up receipts, while disbursement included $400 given to the "Y" 's $792.31 for supper expense; donations to war relief funds and to the four campaigns. The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. Jamais Fairfield.

Special tribute to the president of the auxiliary, Mrs. J. Shortt, for her efficient work was expressed in the annual report, while other workers of the auxiliary were also highly commended. Mrs. Shortt was re-elected as president with express, Mrs. Jennings, and treasurer, Mrs. Fairfield.

ON the threshold of another Victory Loan Campaign this public tribute is paid to all who have bought Victory Bonds. Particular credit is due to those who, week by week, year after year, have saved money to buy Bonds.

All have done magnificently. More than three million citizens now own Victory Bonds — a per capita record of which we can be proud.

. . . . . .

When first they bought Victory Bonds, people did not buy them so much as an investment, but from the noble motive of supporting those who had gone forth to war.

But they know now that they are owners of the safest and finest investment in Canada.

The patriotic motive for buying Victory Bonds should still inspire us to keep faith with those enduring the ordeal of battle. But there is another reason for buying Victory Bonds which becomes of increasing importance as the struggle reaches its climax. That reason is to accumulate personal savings in the form of Victory Bonds so as to provide your own personal capital with which to take advantage of post-war opportunities.

There is no better security for a Bank loan than Victory Bonds, and no better evidence of character upon which to establish credit. If an emergency arises they are readily saleable. Meantime, your savings earn the attractive interest rate of 3%. Victory Bonds are your Pass Key to open the door to Post-War opportunities.

. . . . . .

Finally, when you buy Victory Bonds on your firm's Payroll Savings Plan, you help to win a "V" Flag, the emblem of honour awarded to all organizations that attain their Victory Loan objective.

Be ready to buy when called upon.

8th Victory Loan Opens April 23rd.

Russians Battle Near Centre of Vienna

Nazi Escape Route North of Danube Is Almost Closed

Fall of E. Prussian City Koenigsberg Expected Soon

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

London, April 9 — (AP) — The flame of battle rolled over three-fourths of Vienna today and the Germans said the Russians had fought into Schoenbrunn Park, site of the summer palace of the Hapsburg monarchs, and also had reached Franz Josef railway station in the northern part of the city.

In the south the Russians were fighting within a mile of the Ring, the circular street around the heart of the city, and in the north within 1 1/4 miles of the city's centre. They were reported within eight to 12 miles of closing the escape gap on the nrth side of the Danube.

Just east of Grinzing, the Germans said, the Russians were attempting to storm across to the eastern bank of the Danube at Nussdorf, a suburb. Moscow dispatches said it was believed the Russians already had crossed farther out, in the vicinity of captured Klosterneuberg.

Other forces had stormed across the 325-yard-wide river east of Vienna and the twocolumns were driving toward a junction on the Marchfeld, the flat Vienna Plain north of the river.

Near Aspern Airport

The eastern column, from captured Pframa, was reported to have pushed within sight of Aspern airport, inside Viennna's city limits on the northern bank of the Danube. Already having cut the railroad leading to Bruens, Czechoslovakia munitions centre 65 miles north of Vienna, this column was driving for the main highway leading north which was under long-range fire at some places.

Only one railway, the north bank line running to Prague, Czechoslovakia capital 150 miles northwest, remained open and it was menaced if not cut by the force reported to have crossed the river northwest of Vienna.

In East Prussia, the Germans reported, Soviet forces battled into the centre of Koenigsberg, long-besieged fortress capital of the Junkers province.

The city was ablaze and shrouded in smoke from heavy assaults by artillery and dive bombers.

The Red air force, which made 1,400 flights over Vienna yesterday, renewed its attacks today and also was heavily pounding another encircled city, industrial Breslau, in Silesia.

Southwest of Vienna, Marshal Feodor Tolbukhins, 3rd. Ukrainian army made bold strides in the direction of Graz, Austria's second city, and reached positions on the Lagnitz River, 30 miles from the northeastern suburbs and less than 150 miles from Berchtesgaden.

Another Tolbukhin unit was swinging through the Fishbacher Alps between Graz and Vienna.

Drive May Have Started

An announcement of the Koenigsberg drive came as the German radio declared the Russians may already have started their long-expected offensive against Berlin. Fall of the East Prussian fortress would release thousands of additional Soviet troops for the push on the German capital.

"Reconnaissance in force in the area of Frankfurt-on-the-Oder and Kuestrin (33 to 18 miles of Berlin) suggests the beginning of the Russian offensive toward the Reich capital," the enemy Transocean agency said.

As the Russians smashed three miles inside Vienna other forces hastened encirclement of the Austrian capital by crossing the Danube and Morava Rivers east of the city.

Soviet troops west of Vienna struck along the Danube River valley and burst out of the Vienna woods on a 14-mile front. They captured Neulenbach on the Vienna-Linz railroad 75 miles east of Linz, and only 12 miles east of St. Poelten.

The Soviet high command called upon the Viennese to conduct an organized struggle against the Germans in order to prevent total destruction of a great cultural centre of Europe.

Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's 3rd Ukraine Army troops captured the east, west and south rail terminals in Vienna, and seized the main arsenal.

NAZI OFFICER HUNG FOR WISHING TO SURRENDER

American infantrymen stand beside the body of the German lieutenant they had just cut down from a street sign where they found him hanging by the neck when they entered Aschafenburg. The officer was hanged by his superior officer, a major in charge of the German rearguard, because he wanted to surrender.

CANADIAN ARMOR PATROLS REACH MEPPEL SUBURBS

Germans Blow Dikes Flood Area Twenty Miles Square—Huns Vitually Isolated

By ROSS MUNRO
(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the 1st. Canadian Army in Holland, April 9 (C.P. Cable) — Canadian armored car patrols today reached the outskirts of Meppel, ten miles east of the Zuider Zee in northeast Holland and the Germans blew dikes flooding an area 20 miles square between Meppel and Zwolle, 12 miles south of Meppel. This action virtually isolated German forces remaining in western Holland.

That part of northern Holland west of the Ijssel River now is isolated except for a road along a 25-mile dike causeway across the northern end of the Zuider Zee. This is the only land communication route for the Germans in the big Netherlands cities of Amsterdam, Rotterdam, The Hague and Utrecht.

It is estimated there are 60,000 to 80,000 Germans still west of the Ijssel River but only about 20,000 to 30,000 are believed likely to be well trained fighting troops. The others are naval units, administrative groups, and Todt Organization troops, whose job is the building of defence works.

Units of the 4th. Canadian Armored Division meanwhile struck north from the bridgehead over the Dortmund-Ems Canal and reached Tinnen, eight miles north of Meppen and 39 miles south of the German naval base of Emden. These formations by-passed Hemsen, 3 miles north of Heppen. Hemsen is still held by the enemy.

The Germans, however, seem to have abandoned attempts to hold the Ems River line in this area and are falling back into Emden. They are likely also to defend another major naval port, Wilhelmshaven, 35 miles east of Emden.

In its advance the 4th. Division liberated a prisoner of war camp holding Russian and French prisoners—the first camp freed by the Canadians.

Allied airborne units which were dropped in northeast Holland Saturday continued their task of disrupting German communications south of Groeningen and when the 12th. Manitoba Dragoons linked with one party of paratroops they found the airborne men had blown one important railbridge. The paratroopers and the Canadians then teamed up to capture an important road junction.

Tank Forces Move East of Cities Toward Elbe River

Simpson's Men Fight in Essen, Home of Krupp Works

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 9 (AP)—The Allies having exacted 500,000 casualties from the enemy in 10 days, cut the Lest Railway from western Holland today, trapping the bulk of 80,000 Germans believed still in the Netherlands.

The British 2nd and United States 9th armies fought within sight of the shelled and burning north German cities of Hannover and Bremen. They were within 50 miles of the Elbe river at Hamburg and 70 of the stream at Magdeburg. The Elbe is the last water barrier on the flat country leading to Berlin and flows within 50 miles of teh capital.

Hannover and Bremen both were five miles from Allied infantry and tanks. An entry into both was imminent, although the Germans were fighting hard for Bremen, one of their ports and shipbuilding centres.

Great and small cities and towns all over northern Germany burned mysteriously, even though Allied bombers stayed away from most. Flames were reported specifically in Hamburg, Hannover, Brunswick and Luebeck. Of these Luebeck and Brunswick had not been raided recently.

Tanks by-passed both Bremen and Hannover, outflanking both.

United States 9th army troops were expected to enter Hannover during the day. They crashed into the great Ruhr industrial centres of Essen, Dortmund and Gelsenkirchen.

The estimate of German casualties came from headquarters of Gen. Bradley, whose 12th army group has captured a total of more than 1,080,000 Germans. German losses were estimated at 50,000 a day during the last 10 days in captured, killed and wounded. About 45,000 a day were taken prisoners. Allied losses were only a fraction as large.

10 Miles From Zuider Zee

The 1st Canadian army closed within 10 miles of the Zuider Zee and the hard pressed Germans blew dikes south of Meppel, virtually trapping army groups in Holland, once estimated at 90,000 men.

The British 2nd army last was reported the same distance from the great naval base and shipbuilding centre of Bremen (342,527) and sending shells whining into the city. British troops menaced Hamburg, Germany's second city, 54 miles from their vanguards.

The 9th army, fighting within 128 miles of Berlin, captured the Pied Piper city of Hamelin (26,000) and the old Roman Catholic centre of Hilfesheim (62,000), and threatened Brunswick, from positions less than 20 miles. away

Za lsoj rta

Lt.-Gen. Simpson's men fought into the streets of Essen, largest city in the Ruhr, home of the Krupp works and of Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering. They also were in the second largest Ruhr city of Dortmund (537,000) and Gelsenkirchen (313,000). A great proportion of Essen's 660,000 population were skilled steel workers.

Weser Line Shattered

Germany's Weser River line was shattered along a 100-mile stretch.

Behind the fluid front lines, the 1st Canadian and Allied 1st airborne armies just about completed the sealing of a death trap on the German army group H in Holland, originally estimated at 90,000 men.

At the southern end of the action front, the U. S. 7th and French 1st Armies were fashioning another trap in and near the Black Forest where the city of Pforzheim (79,000) fell and Crailsheim, 95 miles from Munich, was captured.

The destruction of the beaten German army continued. In the first week of April, the enemy lost 250,000 men alone, Allied Supreme Headquarters estimated. On Saturday and Friday, 82,550 surrendered.

But German resistance hardened in the defences of outflanked Bremen and every indication was that Lt.-Gen. Dempsey's forces were in for their hardest fight there since crossing the Rhine. The 6th Airborne Division captured another bridge over the Leine River, seven miles from the city, and the 11th Armored Division pushed 18 miles northeast of Rehburg and reached Niedernstoecken.

Bremen was in flames. So were the North German cities of Hannover, Brunswick, Hamburg and Luebeck and dozens of lesser towns—apparently put to the torch by the Germans themselves. All available bombing reports showed no attacks during the last 24 hours on either Brunswick or Luebeck.

The U.S. 9th. Army was within 63 or less miles of the Elbe River, which flows within 50 miles of Berlin and is that ravaged capital's last natural defence barrier. Near Schweinfurt.

On the southern front, the U.S. 7th. Army was a bare four miles at last reports—many hours behind developments—from Schweinfurt (40,500), ball-bearing capital of Germany. At Crailsheim, the troops were midway between Nuerenberg (431,000) and Stuttgart (460,000.)

The 1st. Canadian Army captured Meppen (9,000) and pushed north within 30 miles of the North Sea and 40 miles from the naval base of Emden. The Germans seemed to have abandoned the lower Ems River and probably were falling back on Emden. They are likely also to defend the port of Wilhelmshaven, 35 miles east of Emden.

Airborne troops in northeast Holland disrupted German communications south of Goreningen. The 4th. Canadian Armored Division set free numerous French and Russian prisoners in a captured camp.

Mobile Canadian and British forces were wheeling northward to link up with the parachute and glider forces. A guards armored division drove within five miles of Quackenbruck in a fan-out mopping up the northwest corner of Germany.

The racing 7th. Armored (Desert Rats) Division has covered 120 miles in 11 days to reach artillery range of Bremen, but its pace suddenly slowed to crawl today before a harder crust of enemy defence. The Germans laid down a terrific screen of artillery fire from the burning city. The Desert Rats fought in Little Riede, five miles southeast of Bremen, and captured Bassum, 10 miles south of the big port.

PILL-BOX BATTLE, BOMBARDMENTS RAGE IN OKINAWA

Japanese Desperately Resist on Land After Naval, Air Defeats

Guam, April 9. (AP)—Japanese charging with fixed bayonets in their first counter-attack of the Okinawa campaign yesterday drove American troops off a dominating hill as tank-supported American infantrymen hammered at strongly defended caves and pillboxes during a developing artillery battle.

Japanese poured out of caves and crags on southern Okinawa when Japanese tanks, artillery and mortars began blasting at five United States tanks lumbering through a field studded with 500-pound bombs which had been converted into land mines.

Three American tanks were lost. The Third Battalion of the 184th Regiment withdrew from the hill. Americans reformed last night, expecting strong opposition in their attempt to retake the hill.

The Japanese were strongly dug into crags, hills, ravines and caves on southern Okinawa, 325 miles from Japan. Behind them was the largest concentration of artillery encountered in the Pacific campaign.

Warnings Swarm In.

Lightly opposed Marines were swarming through northern Okinawa, cutting off Motobu peninsula with its former enemy submarine and torpedo base at Unten.

Ground resistance was about all Japan had to offer in the way of a defence. Its 45,000-ton battleship Yamato and five lesser warships were sunk Saturday in a suicidal attempt to come to the infantry's rescue. In all, 590 enemy planes were destroyed or damaged in thrusts at the United States Pacific fleet, at the Okinawa invasion force or at escorted B29's which raided Tokyo and Nagoya.

Immediately north of Okinawa's capital city of Naha, on a line stretching almost directly east across the island, the Japanese began their defence from well-prepared, heavily fortified positions.

U.S. 24th. Army Corps troops which had been expecting Japanese resistance to stiffen since the Easter Sunday invasion, were held to gains of only 200 to 400 yards as the enemy opened up Saturday with heavy artillery and continued firing day and night.

U.S. Infantry Gains 400 Yards.

In savage fighting the infantrymen gained 400 yards yesterday in their push toward the Yonabaru airfield, on the east coast in the centre of Nakagasuku Bay. They were within about a mile of Yonabaru.

With His Bare Hands Sergeant Tears Out Fuse Set on Bridge

By WES GALLAGHER

With the U.S. 9th Army in Germany, April 9. (AP)—Because an Atlanta sergeant thought more of his duty than he did of his life, the United States 9th Army drove unhampered across the Leine river toward Berlin.

The advance of the 2nd Armored division and the 30th Infantry division placed the 9th Army vanguard less than 130 miles from Berlin today, at Sarstedt and Hildesheim.

A sergeant from the 30th, riding a 2nd Armored tank, saw a wisp of smoke curl from a pier on the approach of one of the Leine bridges south of Sarstedt.

Realizing the smoke came from a German fuse and that the bridge was about to be blown up, the sergeant rushed forward and tore out the burning fuse with his bare hands.

It was attached to 1,200 pounds of explosive and the fuse had burned so near the charge that a detonating cap exploded in his hands.

The explosion blew off two of his fingers, and for this reason under censorship rules he must temporarily remain nameless.

The sergeant's act allowed the combat command to rush forward across the bridge unhampered.

SECRET DISCOVERED

New York, April 9 — (CP) — The secret of V-2, Germany's most closely-guarded weapon, "has come into Allied hands through capture of 8 1/2 V2s" by elements of the United States 1st Army, Tom Twitty, a New York Herald Tribune correspondent with the 1st Army, said in a dispatch to his newspaper yesterday.

ATTENDANCE DECLINES

Toronto, April 9 — (CP)—A poll of youth opinion made for the Canadian Youth Commission reveals that, apart from Quebec province, regular weekly attendance at church by young Canadians between 15-24 declines steadily from east to west —from 63 per cent in the Maritimes, 49 per cent in Ontario to 34 per cent in the prairie provinces and British Columbia.

U-Boat Yards, Oil Plant and Berlin Are Pounded by Allied Airmen

By HENRY B. JAMESON

London, April 9 — (AP) — A fleet of more than 900 RAF and RCAF heavy bombers blasted the Blohm-Voss submarine yards at Hamburg and the Lutzekendorff synthetic oil plant near Leipzig last night while fleet Mosquitos rocked Berlin with another dose of two-ton blockbusters.

The raids followed up assaults on Germany yesterday by more than 1,950 planes of the U. S. 8th Air Force, which bombed 11 targets between Berlin and Nuernberg without being challenged by the Luftwaffe.

The attack on the Blohm-Voss yard last night was the fifth heavy bomber raid on that objective within a week. The plant, which was described by the Air Ministry as probably the most important shipbuilding yard in Germany, still employs 17,000 workers and is one of the main assembly points for the new prefabricated submarines.

The German air force suffered its worst defeats of the year during the weekend as 192 of its carefully-rationed planes were destroyed within a space of 24 hours.

Jet Planes Destroyed

Many of the destroyed German planes were the fast jet-propelled craft but reports indicate they are being flown by inexperienced junior pilots.

RAF coastal command planes attacked a number of convoys in the Skagerrak and Kattegat during the weekend. Half a dozen merchant vessels were reported sunk or set afire.

The Air Ministry announced 13 aircraft were missing from all weekend operations, including two Canadian heavy bombers.

The U. S. 8th Air Force lost 32 bombers and four fighters in the last two days.

R.A.F. Liberators from Italy last night and yesterday bombed rail targets.

Ten enemy planes were destroyed in yesterday's operations from Italy, against a loss of 12 Allied aircraft.

5th Army Takes Monte Belvidere, Closes in on Massa

Rome, April 9 — (AP) — Allied 5th Army troops battling their way up the Italian west coast are closing in on Massa against scattered enemy resistance after capturing 3,000-foot Monte Belvedere, two miles south of the town, Allied headquarters announced today.

Crack Japanese-American infantry troops were leading the advance.

Elements of the 442nd Regiment, composed of American-born Japanese, beat off German counter-attacks northeast of Monte Belvedere and cleared out enemy pockets south of Monte Folgorito and east of the main highway leading to La Spezia.

Meanwhile tank-supported troops of the 92nd Negro Division reached the village of Porta and captured Montignoso, about two miles southeast of Massa as well as Strinato to the north of Strettoia.

For the third straight day the British destroyers Marne and Lookout gave the Americans on the west coast highly effective fire support.

At the eastern end of the front British 8th Army units were mopping up remaining enemy units around the southwestern fringes of the Comacchio Lagoon. Prisoners in that locality totalled 250.

The naval command announced that Allied warships carried out bombardments of enemy communications, dumps and gunposts along the Italian Riviera near the French frontier last week.

Entire German Gold Reserve Hoard Seized by American Army Engineers

By EDWARD D. BALL

Merkers, Germany, April 9. (AP) —Nobody could find the key so United States 3rd Army engineers blasted a hole through a brick wall today and exposed Hitler's fabulous hoard of gold and money cached in the 2,100-foot deep Merkers salt mine.

The cache, including a collection of art treasures, was captured by the 3rd Army Saturday.

More than 4,000 bags of gold bullion were counted, a total of 50 tons. Each bag weighed 26 pounds, and was worth $14,000.

It was impossible to determine definitely today whether there was more or less gold than the 100-plus tons that Dr. Werner Vieck of the Reichsbank said were in the cache —but there were some indications that it was more. Each ton is worth $1,000,000.

"This is it—Germany's entire gold reserve", said Dr. Vieck. "There isn't any more".

The sacks were stacked along the walls of a dimly lit chamber 65 by 85 feet along with thousands of sacks of coins too heavy to lift.

Each sack bore a lead seal, a red or yellow tag, and in black print "Reichsbank".

In addition to the sacks of gold bullion and coins there were hundreds of pasteboard cases of Reichsmarks.

Corridors leading to the "gold room" were lined with huge stacks of bags containing Reichsmarks and money of various other countries, including perhaps $2,000,000 in American currency.

Third Army officers began an inventory of the treasure trove, which will require days to complete.

Besides the vast monetary hoard the Germans had cached hundreds of priceless art works, including a Titian Venus.

I counted 4,050 bags of 25-pound gold bars, each bar about the size of an ordinary building brick. In the gold room piled in orderly rows were 2,180 bags of coins and five rows of Reichsmarks in 150 boxes, each containing 175,000 marks.

(Hitler and various other Nazi leaders, including Goering, Goebbels and Himmler, have been reported to have millions of dollars in currency and securities cached in foreign countries under false names.)

Dr. Werner Rave, curator of the German State Museum and an assistant director of Berlin's National Art Galleries, who was present with Vieck, said two-thirds of the Reich's national treasures were stored in the cave. The other third, he said, was in another salt mine which has been overrun by the Americans.

To get to the chamber it was necessary to descend in a 15-man double-decker elevator operated by German civilian mine employees. In the oppressive air of the shaft combat engineers under Lieut. Jack McFarlane of Hollywood, Calif., perspired as they planted the explosives.

The engineers had to blast the brick wall because nobody seemed to have the keys to the massive steel door to the chamber. The first charge tore a hole in the wall big enough for a man to crawl through.

Resting on the floor, glistening with white salt, stack after stack of gold could be counted.

As Vieck pointed out the bags of gold, one was split open and a couple of 3rd Army officers held up a 25-pound gold bar.

Rave said he came from Berlin to Merkers with the art treasures without army guards to avoid arousing curiosity. He said the paint-

Big Mop-up Begins in Europe, German Signs, Slogans Removed

By WADE WERNER

In Germany, April 9 (AP) — One of the biggest mopping-up jobs of this war scarcely has begun.

It's the job of removing outmoded German signs, slogans, warnings, directions and admonitions from the walls of buildings in Europe.

All through France, Belgium and Luxembourg deep into Germany one sees them, grotesquely out of tune with the times.

One public building still is richly adorned with inspirational excerpts from Hitler's speeches — this in the midst of liberated France. Scores of buildings once occupied by American soldiers retain signs directing where the Luftschutzkeller (air raid shelter) may be found in case of Fliegergefahr (air alarm.)

In the middle of France there's a hospital formerly used by the Wehrmacht still equipped with floor signs in German, German no-smoking signs, even elevator shaft markings in German. The payoff in this hospital, however, is a ticket which was issued to a patient, if able to walk, entitling him to a seat in the hospital movie. The ticket bears this notation: "Unbenuetste Karten Zurueckgeben" (return unused tickets.)

Inside Germany, of course, it seems natural to find signs in the German language. But many of them strike a fantastically discordant note. For example, the first thing a conquered German sees when he enters military government headquarters in a certain occupied town to submit an humble petition to American authority is a bold Nazi slogan: "better death than slavery!"

ACTINOLITE HOUSE DESTROYED BY FIRE

Tweed, April 9 (Special)—Believed to have originated from a grass fire which had been burning during the afternoon, the frame residence owned by Mr. H. R. Stewart, Actinolite storekeeper, was destroyed by fire last week.

Mr. Stewart, and his two sisters, Miss Jessie Stewart and Mrs. Ferguson, the latter a visitors for the Easter holiday, were at supper in the kitchen when the fire broke out in the front part of the house. There was little time to save other than a few household effects. The two women lost all their personal belongings.

A bucket brigade hastily formed attempted to quench the flames but with little success.

ORGAN RECITAL NETS $90 FOR SAVE THE CHILDREN FUND

Approximately $90 was realized for the "Save the Children Fund" as result of a silver collection taken at the organ recital given by Alec Gordon at Bridge Street United Church on Sunday evening. There was a splendid turnout and each of the organ console numbers rendered by Mr. Gordon was well received, while the solo efforts of Ronald Elmy, boy soprano, and Jack Fenn, cornetist, also delighted an appreciative audience.

Vocal numbers given by Ronald Elmy were "The Miracle" by A. Gordon and "How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings," by Liddle, while cornet numbers rendered by Jack Fenn were "Evening Thoughts" by O'Neill, and "The Lost Chord" by Sullivan.

CHILDREN DONATE NICKELS, DIMES TO RED CROSS

An outstanding feature of the recent collections taken up in theatres of the city for the benefit of the Canadian Red Cross, was the large number of children who voluntarily gave their nickels, dimes and coppers when the "hat" was passed.

According to Capitol Theatre Manager Tommy Mascaro, the children showed no hesitancy in contributing their coins and some of them called at the theatre office afterwards to make their donations.

This was noticed in the Belle and McCarthy theatres as well and bespeaks of the interest taken by children of the city in the splendid work being done at home and overseas by the Red Cross. An aggregate amount of $760 was taken at the three centres of entertainment over the allotted two-day period.

COACH RECOVERED IN OSHAWA

Frank Brough, Stirling, parked his 1940 model Dodge coach on Front Street here on Saturday afternoon, but neglected to remove the ignition keys. When he returned a short time later the vehicle was gone. Fortunately for Mr. Brough he reported the car theft to city police immediately and the vehicle was subsequently recovered by Oshawa police in that city with little damage having been reported. In the meantime Mr. Brough and his family had to accept the hospitality of local friends as he was unable to get home. Belleville police revealed today that a warrant for the arrest of Pte. M. W. Emmorey, Toronto, had been issued and sent to Oshawa charging him with the theft of Mr. Brough's car. Oshawa police stated they found Emmorey in the vehicle when it was recovered.

FUMES CAUSE APPEAL TO POLICE

Objection of neighbors to fumigation being carried out in an adjoining apartment on Front Street resulted in a call for members of the local fire department on Sunday. With fumes seeping through partitions to permeate the adjoining apartment objecting neighbors sent in a call to the police department with the desk sergeant relaying the call to the firemen.

The only other call for firemen over the weekend was Sunday evening when an electric transformer at the Belleville Sargent was reported burning. Firemen answering the alarm, seeing the trouble was with Hydro equipment, advised the local Hydro department.

EARLIEST MOWING

The current Spring is proving to be more or less a "wacky" one insofar as weather and new green things are concerned. However, some records have been broken and one of them is claimed by the sexton of St. Thomas Church.

The spacious lawns of the edifice were mowed for the first time this year on April 2nd and this date is the earliest in the history of the church for the first shearing of the annual grass crop.

The earliest date previous to that of April 2nd, is April 23, according to Mr. Ernest Martin, former sexton of St. Thomas.

POLICE AID HUNT FOR MISSING CARS

Belleville city police were asked to assist in the possible recovery of two motor cars reported stolen in other centres in Eastern Ontario over the weekend. Napanee police reported the theft of a 1928 model Pontiac coach bearing last year's licence plate number 16 L 32, while Oshawa reported the theft of a 1932 model Chevrolet roadster with current licence number 2 K 502.

POLICE REMOVE ARTILLERY SHELL FROM RESIDENCE

Reports of a large army shell exploding in Toronto recently have caused some considerable concern even in Belleville. The shell that exploded in Toronto was a souvenir from the last war and discharged when it fell from a window. Following this authorities advised persons keeping artillery shells as souvenirs to turn them over to police officials for destruction to avoid any possibility of explosion. Today residents at No. 8 Queen St., in the city requested police here to remove a heavy artillery shell from that premises. The shell has been in the above home for upwards of 25 years as a souvenir from the last war. Police will dispose of the missile.

O.P.P. INSPECTOR HARRY THOMPSON GIVEN POST HERE

It was officially announced from Hamilton today that Harry Thompson, who was recently promoted to the rank of inspector in the Ontario Provincial Police to take effect next weekend, had been assigned to take charge of District No. 8, O.P.P., with headquarters at Belleville. Inspector Harry Thompson is well known in Belleville, having been posted as sergeant of the O.P.P. here for many years before being transferred to Hamilton. He assumes the post previously held by Inspector Harry Storey, who was transferred to Kenora recently.

ARMY & NAVY VETERANS ATTEND DIVINE SERVICE

Rev. J. Hornsby Challenges War Veterans to Assist Present Warriors at Vimy Memorial Service

Charging veterans of previous wars with the responsibility of assisting returned men from the present conflict in the matter of rehabilitation, the Rev. J. G. Hornsby spoke to the members of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Unit 201, and the Ladies' Auxiliary Unit 48, on the occasion of the veterans' annual Vimy Day divine service held at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Sunday morning.

Taking the parable of the "Good Samaritan" as his text, Rev. Hornsby made it quite clear the duty of all as their brother's keeper. "It is lamentable the lack of human kindness, in the world," he said. "We must learn to help many, even those we do not know or even like. The world must cease being narrow-minded and keep in mind others' needs. If not we're not doing as we would be done by. The only reason we are not debtors on this earth is through the goodness of God, which is the basis of the Christian spirit," stated Mr. Hornsby, as he added the world was in dire need of the teachings of Christ today.

Kindness Our Creed.

"When we make kindness our creed then, and then only, will the general happiness of the world receive the boost it so much needs. Young warriors, like you men of a quarter of a century ago, will soon be coming back. They will be confused and need the compassion of present-day good Samaritans and it is up to you who have the experience of the past to help them on the road back," Mr. Hornsby suggested, as he related portions of his text as an example. "We must put in our minds the needs of other men and act accordingly if the future is to be secure and Christianity is to prevail," concluded the speaker.

Following the sermon Jack Green, Belleville's well-known and talented cornetist, sounded Last Post and Reveille, as gray-haired veterans and the congregation stood in a moment of reverent silence in memory of comrades who had made the supreme sacrifice.

Under a bright warm April sun the members of the Army and Navy Veterans paraded from the Armouries to St. Andrew's Church headed by the Belleville Municipal Band, under Lieut. Fred Jobson, Piper Jamie Clarke also providing marching tunes on the bagpipes as the veterans swung down Front St. on the return parade, marching with erectness and precision that are their military heritage. The parade was marshalled by Comrade Wm. Lindsay, veterans' club sergeant-major. Two members of the C.W.A.C. paraded and acted as honorary standard-bearers to add to the occasion.

The annual Vimy Day memorial service is held to commemorate the memory of the many brave Canadian men who gave their lives in the Battle of Vimy Ridge on April 9th, 1917, when Canada's fighting men made history as one of the bravest fighting units on earth.

On behalf of his staff Mr. Lavergne expressed appreciation for the award, while congratulations were received from P. J. F.A. Collier is Chief Engineer On Grain Carrier Which Sets Lakehead Navigation History

Chief Engineer Frank A. Collier, 318 Bleecker Ave., Belleville, supplied the steam for the engines of the grain carrier Sir Thomas Shaughnessy of Montreal as shbe plowed her way through the ice into Port Arthur harbor on March 27th for the earliest opening of navigation in lakehead history.

Chief engineer on lake boats for the past 30 years, Chief Engineer Collier has spent his entire life sailing the Great Lakes. He came originally from Picton and when 16 started on the lake boats. During the winter months he stays at Belleville with his daughter, Mrs. George Robson, Bleecker Avenue.

Although having spent by far the greater part of his life on the Great Lakes, Chief Engineer has also had his turn of salt water sailing. During the last Great War when an employee of the George Hall Coal Company of Montreal he took a coaler across the Atlantic for delivery to the British government, and at the outset of the present war took a tug from Montreal by way of the Panama Canal to Seattle. The tug which he delivered was one of several which had been sold to Russia.

Travelling by tug is rather slow journeying, however, and the trip to Seattle took the better part of three months.

CANADIAN ARMOR

Enemy fighting troops of the practically-isolated western Holland forces are manning the Ijssel River running from Swolle south to Deventer and Arnhem.

The 3rd. Canadian Division continued today to fight along the approaches to Deventer, eight miles north of captured Zutphen, and are southeast, east and northeast of the town. The 2nd. Canadian Division advanced north of the Schipbeek Canal to occupy Holten on the Deventer-Almelo road, 10 miles east of Deventer.

The 2nd. Division units encountered only light opposition. Some tanks of the 2nd. Canadian Armored Brigade are supporting both the 2nd. and 3rd. Divisions.

Zutphen Falls Sunday.

Zutphen, 20 miles southeast of the Zuider Zee, fell Sunday after two days of bloody street fighting against teen-aged German paratroopers.

Armored cars and tanks raced northward to join the airborne troops, dropped Saturday night south of Groningen, on the last rail escape route for the Germans. Following the armor, infantry rode in Bren gun carriers, half-trucks and trucks. A flying squad of jeeps also was used to speed the link-up.

The Dortmund-Ems bridgehead was forced at Meppen in an operation which won vital ground and may prove the most important of all weekend achievements of the Canadians. Roads from the bridgehead fan out to Emden, Wilhelmshaven, Bremen and Hamburg.

Towards Bremen.

However, the British 2nd. Army is making such gains in the direction of Bremen and Hamburg that the Canadians may be "shouldered out" of the advance along the coast to those vital ports.

Another weekend achievement was a dash by armored cars to Meppel, near the Zuider Zee, thru' which runs the last road from areas between the Rhine and the Zuider Zee.

In Zutphen, which fell to French-speaking and Central Ontario and Maritime troops, the citizens sang their national anthem for the first time in nearly five years.

Joining in the anthem was Prince Bernhard, husband of Princess Juliana and commander-in-chief of The Netherlands forces. His arrival, soon after the fighting ended, was unexpected. The prince said he came to see members of the interior military forces of The Netherlands who helped the Canadians in the last phases of the fighting.

LIBERATED LABORERS SEIZE LAND

Fuerstenberg, Germany, April 9—(AP) — Triumphant foreign laborers liberated from the Nazi yoke by the eastward sweep of the U. S. 1st Army have seized the broad, fertile acres of Count Metternich, Hitler's curator of arts, and set up the first little Communist community in Western Germany.

Dr. Archer Wallace Officiates at Baptism Of His Granddaughter

It was a proud moment for the Rev. Archer Wallace, Toronto, well-known United Church author, lecturer and journalist at Bridge Street Church on Sunday morning when he baptized his granddaughter, little Miss Kathleen Anne Heard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil G. Heard, 157 Charles Street, in a simple yet impressive ceremony.

Dr. Wallace who has been in the city for the past two or three days made a special journey in order to participate in the baptismal ceremony, and during his stay here, spoke to the annual Open Forum banquet of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce. He was the guest preacher at Bridge Street on Sunday night.

Another impressive feature of the Sunday morning service was the admission into membership of the church of 14 young people and 13 adults. The young people dressed in symbolic white gowns, with the adults, were addressed by Dr. E. W. Stapleford, interim minister of the church, who conducted the ceremony of admission. For the past two weeks, Dr. Stapleford had carefully schooled the candidates for this important function of their lives.

Special music which included a solo by James Bankier was provided by the choir under Miss Leona Riggs.

Argyll L.I. Enjoy Sunday Training

Thick juicy steaks, and golden brown potatoes cooked over fenceside fires on a county road, and topped off with luscious apple pie, coffee and fruit, provided one of the highlights of the Sunday manoeuvres of the mechanical transport section of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) yesterday.

The convoy, made up of the combined motorized vehicles of the regiment and the 34th Field Battery, RCA, left the Armouries under the command of Captain Cliff Riley shortly after 9.30 and travelled the sideroads and by-ways of the northern part of Prince Edward County, arriving home at 5.40 p.m.

During the manoeuvres, convoy signals, formations and other phases of movement training were given under the instruction of CSM. Chas. Tice, and S. Sergt. D. Brown.

Obituary

LATE CHARLES T. DOLAN

The funeral of Charles T. Dolan took place Sunday afternoon from the Pinkston Funeral Home, Church Street, at Victoria Avenue, to the Church of St. Michael the Archangel where the Libera was said by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson, V.G.

Correspondent Rescued After 3½ Years in POW Camp

(Two days ago Godfrey H. P. Anderson, London-born Associated Press war correspondent, was captured in Libya. In November, 1941, was freed by the United States 1st Army. Here is Anderson's story of his years in captivity—a period in which he watched the disintegration of the German military machine.)

By GODFREY H. P. ANDERSON
London, England.

The first time in 3½ years I am a free man.

Within a half-hour of my reseizure I was in a jeep rolling back to regimental headquarters and civilization—as American tanks trundled forward in staggering numbers, following up the great American drive.

Even now 48 hours' after I first heard an American voice hailing me across the Lahn River I can hardly believe I am really free. The bewildering sight of thousands of vehicles pouring toward the front is a profusion I never knew when last I was an active war correspondent in North Africa in 1941 gives me a kind of Rip Van Winkle feeling.

I discover new wonders every minute — every man now seems to carry a Tommy-gun where formerly there was not more than a couple to a unit. New and improved methods of radio communications, supply and tation improvements — all these things beyond the wildest dreams of the soldier of 1940.

Unlucky Spells.

Not until I was many miles from the front area did I really feel secure from possible recapture. So many spells of bad luck have dogged me since the day Rommel's Afrika Corps roped me in during a lightning panzer counter attack near Tobruk that I almost ceased to believe that my luck would turn.

At first I was held at Bengasi in Libya, and hoped the British might reach me in time to effect a rescue. But the Germans soon handed me over to the Italians who put me aboard a cruiser and took me to Taranto.

There followed two years in an Italian prison camp. When Mussolini fell I was at Bologna, and hopes of release were at hand. But a German S.S. force arrived on the heels of the armistice and after a freedom lasting but a few hours I found myself with fifty others half-suffocated in a cattle car travelling north through the Brenner Pass.

Another 18 months as a prisoner was spent in Germany, mostly at a camp in Hadamar village near Limburg. This later was transformed into a senior British officers' camp and had nearly 300 officers, including Maj. Gen. Victor Fortune (commander of the 51st, Highland Division), 11 brigadiers, one naval ensign and many others, including Australians, New Zealanders and South Africans.

All of us followed the daily progress of the war as only prisoners can, carefully sticking fresh pins in homemade maps each time a new city fell.

Day of Excitement.

D-Day was the most exciting day we had—except when finally liberated. Feverish excitement swept the whole camp at realization that the much-vaunted German coastal defences had failed to keep the invasion away out. Up to that time we had been entirely dependent on the German radio for news and the vast press for our information on the progress of the war although friendly guards—any of whom risked the death penalty to listen to the B.B.C.—helped occasionally to keep us in the picture of what really was happening.

Then a Scottish major made a secret radio receiving set out of odds and ends.

It was a great night when we first picked up British news on the day Brussels was liberated. From that time on we regularly had British news and though the Germans repeatedly marched us outside the echoes while they raked the camp from top to bottom they never found the carefully concealed set although they knew we had it.

News of the capture of the Remagen bridge set us wild with joy. The bridgehead was established within about 25 miles of our camp and we listened day and night to the thunder of the guns. The sky was filled with the roar of aircraft passing over to bomb Hitler's panzers now in Germany. Each time the big formations were sighted we formed into squads and cheered and sang and gazed aloft. We often wondered what those fighting men thought when they looked down and saw hundreds of British and Canadian faces in a countryside where every German had dived to cover.

Close Target.

As the bridgehead was extended the air activity increased and the target often became unpleasantly close, but we, each reassured in several times by low-flying planes dipping their wings in salute.

The last week at Hadamar continued to see the railroad yards within 100 yards of which we were repeatedly bombed and strafed, but bad visibility and the lack of all heating and often the lack of light could not dampen our spirits.

All traffic on the single track branch railroad from Limburg to Elgen now was stopped and the people of Hadamar took to spending the day in the woods nearby, only returning to their homes at nightfall.

Every mile of the eastward advance now brought promise of rescue. The German commandant showed increasing anxiety to get us moved away. Orders finally came for us to proceed to a camp near Brunswick, but the constant bombing made it impossible for the Germans to rustle up any form of transport.

For three successive nights we stood ready with our kits packed to leave by truck convoy. But the convoy, when it did come, was so late getting under way that it was daylight before we reached Limburg on the journey east.

A road journey behind the German lines is a hair-raising experience these days because of Allied air superiority.

Wreckage, burned out and overturned cars were all along the route—a constant reminder of the peril we ran. Wellburg was still ablaze from a previous night's bombing by Mosquitos as we passed through.

Lucky Break.

At Lollar, a small village on the River Lahn, we detrucked to get on a train of cattle cars for Brunswick. Mercifully the train was not there and we were moved into empty buildings forming part of a big foreign workers' camp on the outskirts of the village. There we lay in heaps of straw and awaited the train that never came.

For a whole week we stayed there, watching with joy the daily visits of Thunderbolt and Mustangs which strafed railroads all around us so we could not move.

Sometimes their attacks on the railway a few hundred yards from the camp gave us anxious moments but we formed big P.W. signs with white towels and scraps of clothing and later made a sign on the ground with lime. This seemed to have the desired effect and the planes became more careful in their attacks.

Meanwhile the whole camp was being organized by the brigadiers for the liberation we now felt was sure at hand.

The Union Jack was painted on a bed sheet ready for hoisting at the appropriate moment and plans were made for taking over control of both our guards and the foreign workers when the Americans came.

The guards suddenly became friendly as never before, bringing us eggs secured on the black market in exchange for cigarettes and my first leg in more than three years—told us how they were fed up with the war which they knew they had now lost, and only wanted to effect their transfer to the inside of the barbed wire without having to fight first.

Red Cross Parcels.

Discipline broke down first among the men. The non-commissioned officers soon followed and the officers found themselves faced with a hopeless situation since they were unable to secure sufficient rations for the disaffected troops. That last week the Germans were living on black bread and a scrap of canned meat, and a second brewing of prisoners' tea leaves, while we feasted off Red Cross food parcels which stocked us shortly before the move from Hadamar.

The last few days we were virtually unguarded as the Germans stood around smoking on duty and chatting freely with everyone. You could have walked out of the camp as easily as falling off a log and brought a guard with you if you were so minded, but with the end nearly in sight it didn't seem worth the risk.

There was no chance of us being moved deeper into Germany. Nazi transport was completely broken down and chaotic.

On Wednesday we heard the battle approaching from the east. The German army began pouring past in full retreat. Everything looked in the most sharp. Much of the transport was horsedrawn and every vehicle was crammed to capacity and pushed at the utmost possible speed. Many trucks were out of gasoline and were being towed. We saw no panzers and only a few guns.

Early in the afternoon we distinctly heard American guns. Soon the German infantry emerged from the woods and the first shell screamed over the camp.

With Edward Ward of the BBC I ran down the river bank and got a leaky boat and rowed across to pick up two American soldiers. On my return we found more than a dozen officers and 100 German guards lined up, waiting to be marched off as prisoners.

Foxboro

Foxboro — The W.M.S. held their regular Thank Offering service in the S.S. rooms on Thursday evening with a fine number attending.

Mrs. Walter Wickett had charge of the first part of the meeting and a quartette sang "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross." A prettily decorated table and Easter cut flowers adorned the platform. The story was given by Mrs. George Priest. Rev. R. M. Cook led in prayer and Mrs. F. Tummon sang a solo. The Thank Offering was collected and dedicated by Mrs. M. C. Reynolds.

Mrs. G. Tyler, this year's president, then took charge and Mrs. J. M. Wood of Belleville, was introduced as the guest speaker, who used as her subject "Inner Resources." In which she said "we must have a vision of the kind of world we want to live in and be willing to work for it if we hope our vision will come true. The life that wins is the life with Christ as the core."

As this was the Thank Offering meeting after 'cold of' work things one should be thankful for—things of nature, especially at this season.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Wood, who was decided that each one attending the Presbytrial to bring some thankoffering as a response for the 'Roll Call in May. Refreshments were served. The offering amounted to $27.

Liners

By the end of the year British shipyards are likely to be starting work on more than twenty "super" passenger liners, some of them of the Mauretania class. The London Daily Mail reports. British shipping companies, whose fleets have been gravely depleted by war service, are already examining tenders submitted by shipyard firms for the building of liners from 13,000 to 36,000 tons. Later one or two vessels similar to the giant Queen Mary may be built but in the early years after the war concentration will be on fast vessels of a maximum of 40,000 tons. Sir Robert Johnson, chief of Cammell Laird, one of the most famous of British shipyards, has announced that every building company is receiving orders or inquiries for new passenger liners.

HE'S GETTING TIRED TOO!

YOU aren't the only one who's tired of war—of the hardships and deprivations—of the continual "one drive after another".

Many Canadian boys on the battlefronts feel the same way about it. Except that to them "tired" means mental and physical exhaustion—

Hardships are measured in terms of night-long vigils waistdeep in mud—

"One drive after another" to them means slugging back a desperate foe, often at the bayonet point.

And they won't quit either, until the enemy does. They'll fire the last shot, they'll win the last battle.

And so long as they're needed over there, they'll need the support of those over here. Their lives, even victory itself, depend on a constant abundant flow of the stuff that victories are made of—guns, munitions, planes, ships and supplies.

The last mile on the road to victory will be the costliest in blood, sweat, tears and money.

The need for praying, fighting, working, lending, becomes greater instead of less.

Rededicate yourself to winning the war —the need grows as victory nears.

Proof of Allied Power

General Eisenhower is able to show that he has an Allied power that Hitler and his associates could never have dreamed would be developed. Hitler's blitz warfare was used against nations unprepared for war. The Allies have used their power against the greatest danger that has ever faced the freedom-loving nations of the world. Hitler's forces with which he planned, from shortly after the close of the First Great War up to the time of the opening of the present struggle to conquer mankind and make the nations slaves to Germany are being crushed. Allied power is mightier than the Hun power could ever be.

The majestic use which General Eisenhower is making of the co-ordinated strength of the Allies has been seen in Western Europe which has been cleared since last June, just ten months ago, from the Atlantic right across to within a not great distance of Berlin. Over the week-end, the world heard of the sending of Allied paratroop forces into The Netherlands where the Germans have been trapped. This superior power that the Allies possess can be used with effectiveness in every blow and the Allies are delivering these blows at the Nazi armies with telling effect in a war in which German military traditions have been smashed as well as their armies. Now the Germans are getting what they escaped in the last war. Never again can they claim that they were not defeated whatever Hitler may try to stage with respect to a guerilla war by defeated Nazi armies retreating to the Alpine mountains. The enemy asked for the mauling and defeat he is getting and it is more than the Hun and Jap can take.

At Zutphen

A name known for hundreds of years to every schoolboy and schoolgirl of the English-speaking race is again in the news. It is Zutphen in The Netherlands, where Canadians and British troops are fighting for the liberation of the Dutch people.

A great Englishman gave Zutphen its reputation for there in the sixteenth century he died a heroic death. That Englishman was Sir Philip Sidney, a soldier and poet, a diplomat and a much travelled man. He served Queen Elizabeth on diplomatic missions and tried to join Sir Francis Drake's expedition in 1585 but was appointed instead Governor of Flushing.

The story that recalls Zutphen and Sidney's death is that the Englishman was lying wounded unto death on this battlefield in the Lowlands. A soldier offered him a drink of water which he waved aside telling his benefactor to give it to a soldier who needed it more than he.

In those days there were no sulfa drugs, no penicillin, no medical service of the modern kind, no nursing service, no Red Cross. Had there been such Sidney, one of the great men of his age, might have survived his wound. He died at the early age of 32.

Sidney's golden deed at Zutphen has lived for three and a half centuries and will live on. A recent story in the news told of the service held by the Dutch for two Canadians who had fallen in the capture of one of the towns from the Huns. These Canadians in the eyes of the Dutch people had performed their golden deed, the giving of their lives that freedom might come back to Holland and that the Dutch people might live out their noble course as a free nation in a free world.

Japanese Face Crisis

Japan's new premier has entered into office inauspiciously on the collapse of the regime of Premier Koiso whose cabinet fell as a result of the recent victories of the Allies nearer and nearer to the homeland and of the bombing of targets in the homeland.

The new premier admits the gravity of the situation and well he might as another serious disister has fallen upon the Japanese navy and the air force of Nippon.

These events are taking place at the same time as Germany is being driven back steadily by Allied command of the field and the air as well as of the sea lanes. The power which has struck Germany is knocking out the supreme enemy of freedom and at the same time the same power is driving Japan nearer and nearer to the brink of the defeat. With the United Nations handling two great struggles at the same time, and finishing the western enemy which was the first to enter the war and the chief cause of the war, Japan's premier faces an even worse situation than faced Koiso for Japan's end is nearer.

Now the United Nations have already made announcement concerning the command of the U. S. Army and Navy forces in the Pacific theatre of war in the final scenes in which Japan is to be knocked out and staggered into a defeat which will forever put a stop to aggression by the land of the Japanese. This is further proof that the time is near when Japan has to face these final blows. The man Japan has most to fear is going to command the American armies and is no other than General Douglas MacArthur. Japan has seen the stuff of which MacArthur and his armies are made. His career has been an emblem of victory, for he has proven the words he uttered when he left Bataan and when the Japanese felt confident that they were assured of victory and that nothing could take the Philippines away from them. MacArthur has shown them how it has been done. And the great figure of Admiral Chester Nimitz whose work on the sea and among the islands of the Pacific has been one of the great achievements of the war in the East will command the American forces.

This is part of the power that the Allies are to throw at the enemy. And then there are the British and Empire forces too that Japan will have to face.

Japan is being pushed back to her jumping off place when the United Nations are dealing the final blows with the once most powerful enemy, Germany. Japan has to think of what is coming when Allied power turns to settle her and to make her pay the price of banditry, savagery, treachery and untold cruelties in her war of conquest.

Axis Highway Builders

Mussolini built a motor highway across the sands of Italian North Africa in those days before the war when Mussolini was hatching a plot in his mind and was seeing things through rosy glasses. That highway served the British and Allies to roll along to victory and roll Il Duce out of Africa. Hitler built super-highways for war and in his building dream overlooked the railways and many a time since he did so he must have thought what his folly had been for railways that could handle the flow of commerce were important in the plans of a conqueror as well as highways.

Today the Allies are using Hitler's highways. As far as the Allies have gone the highways are in Allied hands and their use is for Allied movement against Berlin.

These criminal builders of highways are justly served. Gangsters, like this pair, shut their eyes to everything but fantastic ideas of power at the expense of the free nations. They were going to rob the world and on their highways they spent vast sums and today these highways are helping to doom the Huns as they helped to doom Mussolini and his wretched Fascist gang.

A thinking man is the worst enemy the Prince of Darkness can have; every time such a one announces himself, I doubt not there runs a shudder through the nether empire; and new emissaries are trained with new tactics, to, if possible, entrap, hoodwink and handcuff him.

NAVY CUSTOM

They's a custom in the Navy which I think is rather nice.
There's no ice cream on destroyers, for those ships are short of ice,
So, from every carrier task force, when a rescue has been made—
Though destroyer crews for service such as that would not be paid—
In the breeches buoy, which carried to his ship the lad again,
They put ice cream in containers for the ratings and the men.

There's no plan upon destroyers to provide this Yankee dish,
Though ice cream's a tasty product for which sailors often wish.
So, the men upon a carrier, when a plane's been downed at sea
And the pilot and his comrades are reported safe to be.
In the breeches buoy, which brings them
(What a gracious thing to do!)
They put ice cream in containers for the skipper and his crew.

The destroyer boys don't ask it. With the rescue they're content;
But the lads upon the carriers have a touch of sentiment.
And although for days or longer they,
themselves must do without,
They've a stock of sweet refreshment and they gladly dish it out!
In the breeches buoy returning—hence
this bit of verse I pen—
They send "chocolate" and "vanilla" for the skipper and his men.

Pyle Outlines Routine of Invasion

By ERNIE PYLE

Okinawa (by Navy radio) — Now that we are ashore in full force upon the Japanese island of Okinawa I would like to go back and tell you in detail how the invasion went off.

As our regimental commander said the night before the landing: "All I'm worried about is getting past the first two days when we are on our own and will have to improvise every situation. But after that we will be established and from then on we can just go by the book."

The first two days are over—accomplished with an ease that had everybody flabbergasted. By evening of the first day we had done much more than the most optimistic planner figured we could in the first three days. So from now on it's "by the book."

• •

For some reason which I haven't fathomed yet the conventional name of D-Day was changed for this invasion to "Love Day." Possibly it was because we were landing on Easter Sunday and somebody felt the spirit of brotherly love.

At any rate when dawn came on Love Day and the pink, rising sun lifted the shroud of Oriental darkness around us, we were absolutely appalled.

For all our main convoys had converged and there they lay around us in one gigantic fleet, stretching for miles. There were around 1500 ships and thousands of small landing craft which the ships had carried with them.

There weren't as many small ships as at Normandy, but in naval power and actual force of men and fighting strength it was equally as big as the invasion of Europe. We certainly didn't go at Okinawa in any half-hearted manner.

We had ham and eggs for breakfast at 4.30. We strapped our unwieldy packs on our backs. Our heavier gear was left aboard to be taken ashore several days later.

It was only half light when we went on deck. You could see flame flashes on the horizon toward shore. The men on the deck were dark and indistinguishable forms.

Our assault transport carried many landing craft (LCVP's) on deck. They were lifted by a derrick and swung over the side. We piled into them as they hung even with the rail. Then the winch lowered them into the water.

I went on the first boat to leave our ship. It was just breaking dawn when we left. It was still more than two hours before H-Hour. Our long ocean trip was over. The days we had reluctantly counted off were all gone. Our time had run out. This was it.

All around us hundreds of other boats were putting off and churning the water, but there was no organization to it. They weren't yet forming into waves. These early boats carried mainly the control crews who would manage the colossal traffic of shore-bound invasionists in the next few hours.

Scores of these little control craft were forming a line the entire length of our long beachhead, about a quarter of a mile apart. They were the traffic policemen of our invasion.

They all looked alike, and we had to find ours by number. In all the welter of miles of ocean traffic, it was easy to get lost and we did. We were half an hour finding our control boat after getting there.

An assault on an enemy shore is a highly organized thing. It is so intricately-organized, so abundant in fine detail that it would be impossible to clarify it all in your mind. No single man in our armed forces knows everything about an invasion.

But just to simplify one point: Suppose we were invading an enemy beach on a four-mile front. It is not as you would think, one over-all invasion. Instead it is a dozen or more little invasions, simultaneously and side by side. Each team runs its own invasion. A combat team is a regiment. Our regimental commander and his staff were on the little control ship. Thus our control ship directed only the troops of our regiment.

We had beaches "Yellow One" and "Yellow Two." Troops of our regiment formed waves directly off those beaches, miles at sea, and we went straight in.

Other control ships on either side, having nothing to do with us, directed other waves having nothing to do with us. Each was its own private little show.

As I've written before, war to an individual is hardly ever bigger than a hundred yards on each side of him. And that's the way it was with us at Okinawa.

Physical Handicap No Deterrent To District Musician

Tweed, April 9 (Special)—Afflicted with infantile paralysis since he was 18 months old and since then getting about only with the assistance of a wheel chair, Elwin MacMunn, 30, of Mountain Grove has risen above his handicap to play at district dances. He is quite the versatile musician and plays various musical instruments from his wheel chair.

But he does not stop at merely playing musical instruments and over a period of years has manufactured numerous instruments. Recently he completed a five-foot bass viol which was made from plywood boxes.

He received his public school education through a younger brother, Alvin, who carried him back and forth to school each day.

Finnish Cabinet Resigns Office

New York, April 9 (AP)—Premier Juho K. Paasikivi of Finland has handed the resignation of his government to President Marshal Baron Carl Gustav Von Mannerheim, the Finnish radio reported today.

The broadcast said Mannerheim had asked the cabinet members to "carry on" until a new government has been formed.

The broadcast was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

Nansen

A Nazi mob dragging a tall, upright figure through the streets of Oslo, a man with a placard round his neck bearing the words: "I am a lackey of the Jews" (Ich bin ein Judenknecht.)

Passers-by stop and stare. Then a name spreads like wildfire among the crowd: "Nansen!" More than a name, the personification of Norway, her history and tradition, says The Central European Observer.

Everybody realized what was going on. Odd Nansen, the architect, who had never for a moment stopped fighting in defence of his persecuted countrymen, and who had publicly denounced the expulsion of the Norwegian Jews as an outrage on civilization, was being dragged off to a Jewish labor camp. Fridtjof Nansen's son and spiritual heir was being branded as a "white Jew," made into a laughing stock for Nazis to jeer at.

Did the people of Oslo turn away frightened, intimidated? For a second nobody moved, then one man took off his hat, others followed suit. Bareheaded, Oslo saluted her finest son.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

THE BARBITURATE EVIL

In the past twenty years numerous variations or "improvements" upon the drug barbital (di-ethyl-barbituric acid) have been introduced, drugs having hypnotic, narcotic or sedative effects and because they are chemically related to urea or uric acid, they are called barbiturates. Barbital, incidentally, was known as "veronal" formerly. More or less familiar, at least to victims of addiction, are amytal, nembutal, phenobarital, luminal, neonal, ipral, alurate, dial, evipal—trying to remember all the parlor car names of them makes you almost as dizzy as a shot of one of the drugs.

It is characteristic of the low level of honesty in the United States that these drugs are so readily available nearly everywhere without much formality. Some municipalities make a pretense of prohibiting the indiscriminate sale of some of the barbiturates but they do so inly for the sake of appearance—in reality the addict can obtain his favorite dope one way or another, if necessary by means of a phony prescription.

The men in the business, manufacture, distribution, retail, appreciate, in the customary way of Yankee business, what the federal, state and even municipal "authorities" do for them in the way of preventing the enactment and enforcement of any laws, ordinances or regulations with teeth in them.

Physicians are primary agents, sample distributors and detail men for the barbiturate people. Some physicians accept the new dope and begin prescribing it when the promoters tell 'em how wonderful the stuff is, in the minor medical journals which are available at a few dollars a page. Others, more snooty accept the new dope only when they are assured of its acceptability by the great humorous medical weekly—the one that prints every few weeks the same colored reproduction of an old masterpiece at the expense of the big sugar daddy who thus appreciates all the dimwit medical profession of the country does for his business. The dimwits actually believe the fancy, expensive sugar is somehow better for babies than ordinary sugar — they believe it because the humorous medical weekly contrives to make them think so.

Acute poisoning from overdose of any of the barbiturates may be accidental or suicidal. Probably in some instances the addict, under the influence of a dose, becomes stuporous and confused and, having the drug at hand, takes an overdose without really knowing what he or she is doing, with fatal results.

Chronic barbiturate poisoning or habituation produces loss of judgment, impaired memory, ideas of persecution or neglect, lethargy, mental depression, anxiety, neuroses, physical weakness, disturbances of speech, vertigo, bradycardia (slow heart beat), loss of appetite, nausea, lowered morale.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Old Clothes

What risk is involved in wearing clothes that have been kept in a trunk for ten years, the former owner of the clothes having had tuberculosis. (Mrs. W. J. D.)

Answer—If they can be washed or laundered, no risk. If they can be dry cleaned, no risk. If they can't be washed or dry cleaned, hang the clothes in the air and sun for a day and they will be perfectly safe for any one to wear.

Training for Diabetes

I am 17 years old, the youngest of ten persons in a class attending lectures on diabetes by our physician. We are all overweight. (The "Sweet" Girl.)

Answer—Well, young lady, you are old enough to realize I can't use this entire column to answer your specific questions. Most of them are answered in the booklet "Training for Diabetes," only the trouble is you can't obtain a copy without revealing your identity—asking for it, and enclosing ten cents and a stamped envelope bearing your address. It is the familiar history of diabetes — the individual training for it is overweight for ten years or so before the diabetes becomes manifest.

HE KEPT US OUT OF WAR

The authorship of the slogan, "He kept us out of war," has never been definitely determined.

It was the chief Democratic slogan in the political campaign of 1916 and undoubtedly was a decisive factor in the reelection of Woodrow Wilson.

The slogan may have been suggested by something said by President Wilson himself. In a speech at Cleveland, Jan. 29, 1916, he said: "You have laid upon me this double obligation: 'we are relying upon you, Mr. President, to keep us out of war, but we are relying upon you, Mr. President, to keep the honor of the nation unstained.'"

The exact phraseology of the slogan apparently evolved during the Democratic National Convention at St. Louis in the following June. It appears to have been a crystalization of the convention sentiment on neutrality and the preservation of peace.

It is variously attributed to William Jennings Bryan, Governor Martin H. Glynn, of New York, and Senator Ollie M. James, of Kentucky, in their speeches before the convention. Gov. Glynn was temporary chairman and keynoter; Senator James was permanent chairman, and Bryan was a principal speaker. Although the thought was often expressed during the convention, the expression, "He kept us out of war," does not occur in the transcripts of the speeches of any of these men on that occasion.

But the platform adopted by that convention contained the following sentence: "In particular, we commend to the American people the splendid diplomatic victories of our great President who has preserved the vital interests of our government and its citizens and kept us out of war."

Robert W. Wooley, public director and member of the Democratic National Campaign Committee, suggested as a party slogan, "With honor he kept us out of war." Simplified to, "He kept us out of war," it became the chief slogan of the campaign.

TRENTON

Trenton, April 9 (Special)—Carol Ann Gauthier, six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Gauthier, 33 Front Street, received a serious cut below the right knee which required six stitches to close, while her companion, six-year-old Donna Towns, of 34 Front Street, escaped with only slight scratches when they were allegedly struck on Saturday afternoon about four o'clock by a car said to be owned and driven by Charles A. L. Carter of Belleville.

The girls, playing on a little wagon, were just coasting off the town bridge on the west side as Mr. Carter, who had been parked on the south side of Dundas Street west approached the sidewalk coming to turn onto the government dock property. The girls reached the crossing just as the car turned in and they were allegedly struck and knocked to the side of the street.

Both girls were taken to the office of Dr. J. F. Farley and later to their respective homes.

The new traffic signal light at the corner of Front and Dundas Streets was the scene of two accidents of a similar nature just a few minutes apart on Saturday morning. As a car owned and driven by Floyd Fretwell of Prescott proceeding west stopped at the light it was struck from the rear by another car said to be owned and driven by E. A. Wannamaker of Trenton. Considerable damage was done the Wannamaker car's bumper and front end.

A few minutes later a 1937 Packard coupe owned and driven by Harold Long, R. R. No. 4 Trenton, had stopped at the west end of the bridge for the traffic signal when a 1939 Ford driven by John Taylor of Brighton allegedly struck the Packard from the rear. Extensive damage was done to the trunk of the Packard.

'Hitler Youth Absolutely Mad' And Fanatical' Says Canadian

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in Zuidhem, April 9 — (CP Cable) — Canadian soldiers rank the Nazis' German defenders of Zuidhem among the most fanatical troops they have ever encountered.

"They are even worse than S. S. troops," said the commander of a French-speaking battalion which shared with a Maritimes formation in the capture of the town 20 miles southeast of the Zuider Zee. "The S. S. had some sense but these Hitler youth are absolutely mad."

Zuidhem was defended by 14-year-old boys from a nearby training school for paratroops. Nazis to the core, they were well-trained and excellent shots with machine-guns and rifles.

Fighting began before dawn on Friday with French-speaking soldiers of La Regiment De La Chaudiere on the left flank and the North Shore (New Brunswick) Regiment on the right. The first day was the toughest, for the Canadians had to break through the heavily defended outskirts.

Progress was made on Saturday against still stiff resistance and the Germans apparently decided Saturday night that they had enough. Only a handful of snipers was encountered Sunday morning when the town was cleared right through to the IJssel River.

The Maritimers attacked along railway tracks skirting the northern edge of the town, with a Peterboro, Ont., man in the lead. A blown bridge halted progress and the major went forward by way of a detour with an advance platoon.

The troops by-passed two houses, then found themselves cut off by about 40 Germans who emerged from cellars.

"There was a wild and wooly time then," the battalion commander said later. Messages came back to the battalion over the wireless asking for help. When the colonel tried to make contact with the company commander (the major) he found that he was too busy firing a Bren gun to come to the set." It was a hot spot for the platoon that by fierce, heart fighting the Canadians cleared up the Germans without quarter.

The major accounted for eight paratroopers with the Bren, then reorganized the platoon and got it back to the main company position.

Three Germans were taken prisoner and it is likely the remaining 27 were killed or wounded.

Capt. C. A. Rumble of Toronto, an artillery forward observation officer, sent a man forward to see what this fighting to see what was happening. He heard a shout, which he interpreted as meaning that it was all right for him to move up, but when he arrived he found the Canadian wrestling with a German in a slit trench.

"I dealt with the German, then we all got into the trench," Rumble told the colonel later.

"Did you kill him?" the colonel asked.

"I don't know," Rumble replied. "He was underneath."

That was the type of resistance the Canadians encountered.

The Maritimers could make no progress along the tracks, so moved through the Chaudieres Saturday morning, by-passing part of the railway line and clearing a section of the town without much opposition. Snipers became troublesome in the afternoon and flame-throwers were used to burn them out.

By Saturday night the battalion was in the factory area where snipers again blocked the advance but Sunday morning tanks and flame-throwing crocodiles came up in support, and the remaining northern half of the town was cleared.

314,854 Japs Dead or Prisoners In Philippines

Manila, April 9 (AP) — The count of Japanese killed and captured in the Philippines reached 314,854 today as an Allied communique added 6,466 dead and 178 prisoners to the official total of a week ago.

There was no new announcement of American casualties — by latest previous count around 30,000 killed, missing and wounded.

The communique also disclosed an impressive toll of Japanese shipping—nearly 750,000 tons sunk, damaged—in the air blockade of the South China Sea during the first three months of 1945.

Ground fighting in the Philippines, which yesterday had virtually completed liberation of southern Mindanao, continued particularly bitter in the Balete Pass sector of northern Luzon.

In southern Luzon, 14th Corps troops cut the last land escape route for Japanese in the Bicol Peninsula as they captured the towns of Tayabas and Lucban to gain control of the main road network.

China Sea blockade patrol planes wrecked three Japanese escort vessels, seven freighters and six barges and raided the docks of Yulin Bay on the south coast of Hainan Island. Two bombers were lost.

NOW AN OIL THAT'S 'ALLOYED'...KEEPS ENGINES CLEAN!

HIGH VACUUM Distillation :: Furfural Process :: M.E.K. Solvent :: Catalytic Clay (part of this plant is shown above) these are each important steps in the famous Clarkson 5-point-process which makes the purest, most efficient lubricating oil. Then comes the 5th step—the 5th step the "alloys" the oil against oxidization; just as Iron is alloyed against rust to make stainless steel. This step means that Peerless Motor Oil will stay on the job longer, keep engines cleaner, cut the repair costs.

This Spring switch to B-A's sensational new 5-point-process PEERLESS MOTOR OIL

This year don't delay! Get your spring change-over early, before that dirty worn-out oil in your car causes serious damage! And when you change, switch to Peerless, B-A's new, Canadian-made, 5-point-process oil that's "alloyed" to prevent its fouling your car's engine . . . to help keep your repair costs down!

THIS YEAR IS CRUCIAL

It is particularly important, when most of us are driving cars which have already given abnormal service, that we give the engine every possible chance. Only by so doing can we hope to get through the driving season without trouble. That's why it's so important to know how Peerless Motor Oil does a better job.

Here in a nutshell is the reason: From selected lubricating crude oils, B-A eliminates everything except the purest, "oiliest" lubricating fractions. Then, by a special process, Peerless Motor Oil is "alloyed" against decomposition under the heat and pressure it meets in the engine of your car! For longer, safer car life switch now to B-A Peerless Motor Oil!

YOU'LL DRIVE with an easier mind if you change now to Peerless Motor Oil. The oil that's "alloyed"! to keep motors cleaner and running longer, at less cost!

FOR BETTER SERVICE and better products —products like Peerless—change now to your British American Oil Dealer.

TIME NOW TO replace old, worn-out winter grade oil with B-A Peerless Motor Oil. Delay may be disastrous! Drive in tomorrow to the sign of the big B-A!

Interesting Files Enjoyed by A.Y.P.A.

The Anglican Young People's Association of Christ Church met on Tuesday evening with "Truth in Color" which dealt with the problem of racial prejudice.

The meeting opened with Vice-President Mrs. Ralph Thompson in the chair. Mrs. Thompson read the devotional service from the Book of Worship. Despite the inclement weather and the dangers of the season, there was a good turn out for the meeting with 32 young people attending. Miss Findlay, all the way from Toronto, was the speaker who was responsible for the interesting files.

The first film shown dealt with Father Divine's Heaven. This was very interesting, providing much information about the life and work of Father Divine's "spiritual wife," Mrs. Edna Rose Ritchings, Daytona Beach.

After the second movie, Doug McIlmoyle, Jr., played a piano selection, and Mr. Spalding was called upon to speak. Mr. Spalding spoke about the social-service aspect of the problem of racial prejudice, dealing with an antemortem case, in which various members had to pass picture were shown by the National Film Board, and Don Peterson, of Oakville, assisted the showing.

The third movie, "Youth Is Ours" was then shown, preceded by a few remarks by Rev. Mr. Spalding. The film (progress as a "Canada of Tomorrow") showed the reasons for the rise in juvenile delinquency, and the methods by which various communities had met the problem. The last picture were loaned by the National Film Board, and Don Peterson, of Oakville, assisted.

After the second movie, Doug McIlmoyle, Jr., played a piano selection, and Mr. Spalding was called upon to speak. Mr. Spalding spoke about the social-service aspect of the problem of racial prejudice, dealing with an antemortem case, in which various members had to pass a certain standard before they could join the group. Fashion Flashes

DAISIES DO TELL a pretty millinery story this Spring, for they bloom atop some of the most delightful hats. A pouffion of white Swiss braid is banded with rows of narrow black velvet ribbon with a daisy cluster in front.

HAVE IT ON DECK for everything this Spring. Navy Boyce makes a handsome suit with brilliant-red pink composition buttons and pink point d'esprit ruffles rolling in the deep necklines and the cuffs.

THREE'S COMPETITION for suits in the guise of wonderful coats. Something different in a coat with high closed top and sleeves of deep black wool knit of black, red and white checked woolen jutoned by a red linked belt. A fringed scarf of the identical material completes the design.

VERY DIFFERENT from anything previously seen are the new fabric prints. A white crepe ground serves as a backdrop for a black line print of leaping and recumbent tigers and cages. We saw the prints made up into a handsome linic dress.

BACK AGAIN comes the after-noon-into-evening dress as the current few limits evening activities. Black crepe is used for a distinguished dress of this genre, made with beautifully draped skirt and snug bodice, with an embroidered bolero coat of white beaded tulips at the waist.

THE SIMPLE SUIT is likely to be crowned with a brightly hued flower-trimmed hat this Spring. The beautiful design is a sailor of white satin trimmed with chalk-white pink buttons and tiny pink roses.

Announcing a Series Engagement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am a Senior in High School, several years younger than most of my friends. My fiance is eighteen and has left for overseas. Since he left he asked me to choose a ring for our engagement. However, I am not sure whether I should wear it or keep it hidden in my purse. Should I announce the engagement? I am not allowed to have a party of any kind, since he left for overseas, and at the dinner engagement announcement should I have just my parents and his parents present, or should my school friends? And at the dinner should I ask him to give his mother's father to present me with the ring?

B. T.

It would be proper, and I think considerate, to have your engagement announced at a dinner given on your birthday. JUST this dinner should be given by your parents, and to it should be invited only the members of your family and your future's brothers, sisters, and perhaps some favorite aunts and uncles. In order to avoid embarrassment for such an important family occasion, have priority over friends.

Sports clothes are the best thing that ever happened; to free women from the shackles of the clothes problem. More power to Belle Brummell; who has helped to cast off the fetters!

MYRIADS OF ANTS

There are more ants in the world than any other single creature.

The Marry Go Round

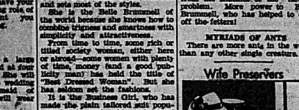
Belle Brummell—The Business Girl.

"The Business Girl, declares an authority on the psychology of clothes, "is the first step for writer or the satorial championship." So she is the leader of the smart and neat most of the styles.

She is the Belle Brummell of the world because she knows how to combine chic and smartness with simplicity and attractiveness.

From 9 to 5 time, some rich or third society woman either here or abroad—some women with plenty of time, invented a good (or terribly mean!) has held the title of "Best Dressed Woman". But she has seldom set the fashions.

It is the business girl, who has made the plain tailored suit popular, she the neat belt or belted coat the beret and the tailored hat. It is she who has done away with lots of the fussiness in women's clothes, without detracting from their charm.



That is why I call her "Belle Brummell", she has done for women what Beau Brummell did for men. "In an age, when circumstances effectively married the fashions of men" wrote Havelock Ellis, "the costume of women, in spite of unobtrusive simplicity, exercises a fascination and exquisite good taste". Schofenfield quotes Ellis in his latest book, "Women and Men".

The well-dressed Business Girl's clothes are of the good quality fabrics that will buy, are well-cut to enhance the lines of neryfigure and have just enough fashionable touches in the way of jabots and accessories, to make her interesting. There is a far cry from the day when business girls were the only office dressed like debutantes going to tea.

Not all business girls, of course, have evolved from the fluffy stage into impeccable Belle Brummells. Professional women are said to spend more money on their clothes, but to give them less time, attention and interest. Women doctors, lawyers, teachers and particularly writers are inclined to care less about their appearance than all the other group of women. And while they are more extravagant, they are less effective than the business woman.

Oh well, I happen to know several women in the writing business by my own profession, who are "the class of fashion and the mold of form". But I must admit they are the exception and not the rule. As for actresses when they are off the stage or screen, some of the most famous have cared nothing about their clothes—notably Eleonora Duse, Ada Rehan and Geraldine Farrar.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

When Blondie Starts Bleaching

Some babies are born with a golden halo that is mama's pride. Let mama take good care of it, though, even in childhood, blonde hair loses its honey shade if strong soaps are used for the shampoo. It must be washed every week, and every particle of soap must be removed.

During the teen-age the golden may remain as bright and beautiful as in earlier years, but, after the age of twenty, there's no telling what those golden locks will do. They may deepen to dark brown. Mousy, or even darker, the shade may be drab, or light brown as the roots. Sometimes hair has acquired by the pigment cells that supply color—by what cause physicians do not know, but so nobody knows, but so nobody knows why blonde hair turns dark.

With the hair dark at the roots and light at the ends there is no uniformity of color, and the hair what breaks Goldie Locks' heart. Then, and then only, does the good-looks bargain. She isn't blonde any more, but somewhere between, sometimes she gets pretty mad about it and entertains the notion that a bottle of fun will do the parcelde bottle.

Successful bleaching is as much a matter of skill as is hair dyeing.

Britain Shapes Progressive World Role Housing Important Part of Home Scheme

Vastly improved housing conditions figure largely in England's post-war plans, such as this model of a housing scheme to replace an East End slum area in London's Tower and dock district. The scene is from the National Film Board's new World in Action release, "John Bull's Own Island," a screen editorial on the war's effect on Britain's post-war existence. The film shows residents of this slum area examining the housing model, presenting opinions that will be seriously considered in the final designing.

For more than 1,100 years the world has taken a keen and personal interest in the varying fortunes and affairs of the spot of land off Europe's west coast known today as the United Kingdom. That is why international industry, commerce and finance are vitally concerned when word comes that England has "spent everything" in war. They harken as British statesmen express the belief that government may have to take a greater interest in industry and commerce than ever before, and that labor says it wants a share in framing national plans for post-war. They listen as the man in the pub expects victory to bring him a more plentiful share of the nation's goods.

The people of Canada are concerned with this news from the U.K. To put the matter before Canadians concisely and intelligently, the National Film Board has produced "John Bull's Own Islands" in the World in Action series. "John Bull's Own Island" is a film that reviews editorially the situation in, first of all, pre-war Britain, then as war changes people, places, and the national life there, on into the post-war through the plans and expectations of the British people themselves.

To make "John Bull's Own Island" a true, factual and representative screen presentation of the subject, the National Film Board sent its producer-in-charge, Stuart Legg, across the Atlantic to delve into the problems confronting the British people, and to seek their opinions and plans for the future. Mr. Legg spent hours in lush, dignified offices talking to statesmen and business men. He went into the pubs and spoke with the men while they enjoyed their "arf-n-arf." He talked to merchants, lorrymen, bobbies, cabbies, show people. From them he learned what had happened to their land and their lives in the war years, what they expected to happen after the war and what was planned for peace. He talked about mines, factories, shipping, finances, investments abroad, and even the crafts that have brought world recognition of quality to the phrase, "British made." He found wartime organization had given Britain a highly-flexible industrial machine with comparatively small plants presenting no great reconversion problem, and revolutionary discoveries from wartime research, particularly in electronics.

The determination and hopes of men like Lord Keynes, Beaverbrook, and the growing influences abroad of such men as J. Arthur Rank, are linked with the present in a clear, designed picture of the British situation now and to come in "John Bull's Own Island."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop came home for lunch on account of being Saturday, me and him eating it alone together on account of ma being downtown shopping, and after lunch pop said, I hope your feet aren't bothering you or anything Benny.

No sir, why? I said, and pop said, Because it seems like an ideal afternoon for a little walk.

Sure, pop, G, I said, Maybe it's even an ideal afternoon for a movie, I said, and pop said, One thing at a time, let's start with the walk and see what happens.

Which we did, and we started to go passed the Little Grand, and I said, Look what's there today, pop, Riding the Range. It sounds as if it ought to be full of horses and cowboys and shooting and everything, I said.

By gollies I believe you've got something there, pop said.

And we went in and the picture was just starting, only the range was suppose to be a kitchin range to cook on, and the picture was a fierce love story with hardly anything in it but kissing, and after a while I said, G, pop, I've got a stummick ake.

I prescribe fresh air, pop said.

And he took me out and we kept on walking, pop saying, A fine time to spring a stummick ake on me, but maybe you did me a favor at that. All that love intrist was getting pretty thick, he said, and I said Sure, pop, that's what gave me the stummick ake.

Now that's impossible, pop said, and I said, Well anyways, pop, it gave me a sensation almost exactly the same as a stummick ake. Can I get an ice cream cone to make up for not having any dessert for lunch, pop? I said.

Well, all right, pop said. It probably wont do you any more harm than I'm doing to myself by filling my lungs with cigar smoke out in all this beautiful fresh air, he said.

Which it probably didn't.

Women Workers in United States Start War on Cancer Menace

By ADELAIDE KERR
(Associate Press Writer.)

New York, April 9 (AP)—Lucy Milligan will tackle this spring a job no other woman ever has undertaken. She will head an army of 400,000 women field workers in the first major national campaign against cancer, which the American Cancer Society calls the "No. 1 killer of women between 35 and 55."

Mrs. Milligan is National Commander of the Women's Field Army of The American Cancer Society, founded and run by outstanding doctors in cancer practice and research. Her field army operates all year round in every state except two—Wyoming and Massachusetts. They call on their neighbors with informative literature, make speeches and do anything else they can to wage war on the disease. But throughout the month of April, they will go into high gear in a five-million-dollar drive for funds for an even more intensive battle. (Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, heads the men's army of the society.)

"Cancer has become a terrible menace," said Mrs. Milligan earnestly in her Empire State Building office in midtown Manhattan. "American Cancer Society figures show that while 121,363 died on the fighting fronts from Dec. 7, 1941 to December 7, 1944, cancer killed 495,000 here at home.

"The disease is increasing alarmingly. According to the United States Bureau of Census figures the deaths from cancer were 64.0 per 100,000 in 1900, 83.4 in 1920, 120.3 in 1940 and 122.1 in 1942 (the last year for which we have overall figures.)

Kills 18 An Hour.

"Cancer kills 60 per cent more people than die from all infectious and contagious diseases combined—in fact it kills on an average of 18 people every hour."

Mrs. Milligan paused to okay one of the Field Army's new battle pamphlets and then went on:

"We had no intention of going into this drive this year, but circumstances forced us into it. The public is becoming aware of the facts. People are pouring into clinics in such numbers that something had to be done. We have only four prevention clinics in the country—one each in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Los Angeles—all run by women. We need many more. And there is great need of research. So we have gone into action.

"I fully expect my woman's army to raise three of that five million. They have done the most wonderful work all over the country, in all kinds of weather under all kinds of conditions and I know that they will keep it up."

Mrs. Milligan, who has two sons in service, is a friendly gray-eyed woman with a warm smile. She is also president of the National Council of Women, a clearing house of information and contact for 18 women's organizations, with a combined membership of 5,000,000.

She began her work with women's organizations years ago when she joined the Queens, L.I., Parent-Teachers Association. She went on to more extensive work with the New York City Federation of Women's Club and eventually became Radio Chairman of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. She began her work for the American Cancer Society about two years ago.

He found the Key TO THE CLOCKWORK OF THE SKY

Copernicus, brilliant Polish scientist, was appointed Professor of Astronomy at the University of Rome in 1499. He became convinced that the sun and not the earth was the centre of the universe. Giving up his professorship, he spent thirty years in research work in astronomy, and so gave to the world the Copernican Theory of the movement of the earth and the planets around the sun.

JUST as Copernicus solved a vast problem through painstaking research, so Nickel scientists use research to solve many modern problems. When industry requires a special material to meet special conditions, Nickel scientists try to discover a new combination of metals that will meet those conditions. Thus are new alloys and new uses for Nickel added to today's long list.

Today Nickel is required in nearly every industry in making top quality products or for keeping production costs down. The research that has helped to bring this about will be expanded in the years after the war.

The information collected by Nickel scientists is available to Canadian engineers, designers and metallurgists seeking better materials for any product or process.

Research reveals new uses for Nickel. Increased use of Nickel from Canadian mines and plants means employment for Canadians and brings many benefits to Canada.

Leafs Take Commanding Lead In Stanley Cup Finals by Defeating Detroit Wings 2-0

Goals Scored by Pratt and Norris and Both of Them on Breakaways

Detroit, April 9 — (CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs headed for hops today two games up in their eight-point Stanley Cup final series with Detroit Red Wings. Third encounter in the series will be staged in Maple Leaf Gardens Thursday night.

Toronto's air-tight defence and opportunism beat Wings last night 2-0, marking up the second consecutive shut-out and third post-season whitewashing administered by goalie Frank (Mocker) Brimsek, Leafs' rookie-of-the-year award winner who said before the play-offs he was afraid he might get nervous and "blow up" under Stanley Cup pressure.

Detroit, in order to get back into the running, now must repeat the feat of taking two games in a row on Maple Leaf Jack Adams' ice, as accomplished in their semi-finals with Boston Bruins after dropping the first two games here.

By winning both games at Toronto, Leafs could end the series then and with the 51-year-old cup for the second time in four years.

Shows Complete Mastery

In blacking out two encounters Mr. Cook, with a mask of bite-like defenders in front of him whenever the Red Wings threatened, has shown a complete mastery over the Detroit line. For the most part the Wings have been forced into long shots, and when some Detroit forward had broken close to take a pass, he found himself tied up com-

Maple Leafs added a 3-0 triumph before 11,898 spectators here last night to the 1-0 victory of the first game of the series by erecting their effective defence and playing for the break.

Score In Second

The first one came in the second period when big Walter (Babe) Pratt snaked the length of ice and, apparently blocked against the boards, got a pass at the stick of centre Ted Kennedy who drove the puck past Detroit goalie Harry Lumley from eight feet away.

The visitors' second goal started almost the same way, with defenceman Elwyn Morris on a solo breakaway dashing down left wing with Carl Liscombe riding him into the boards behind the Detroit goal.

The stocky Leaf broke away with the puck, skated around the net corner and after Lumley dropped to stop his first shot, poked home the rebound to end Detroit's hopes of overtaking the Leafs.

TO HOLD TOURNAMENT

Toronto, April 9. (CP) — C. E. Holt of the Toronto and District Basketball Association is making tentative plans for an Ontario Senior Men's Basketball tournament in Toronto starting April 30. Mr. Holt said the tournament would be divided into A and B series and that 10 or 11 teams already had shown interest in the proposal.

WON ALTHOUGH LOST

Hershey, Pa., April 9. (AP)—Although Hershey Bears lost 2-1 to Cleveland Barons in the fourth game of the American Hockey League play-offs Saturday night, they won: Thirty-one packages of cigarets, 19 cigars and a box of matches.

Hillies Hall fans treated the rookies to the Bears at the start of the second period when Hershey was leading 1-0.

CLEVELAND GRABS ONE-GAME LEAD OVER THE BEARS

Barons Down Hershey 5-3 Before Largest Crowd of Season in Cleveland

(By The Canadian Press)

Cleveland Barons, who finished on top of the Western section of the American Hockey League during the regular season, grabbed a one-game lead in the final play-offs by downing Hershey Bears 5-3 before 11,806 fans at Cleveland last night. The Barons won 3-1 Saturday.

The teams move to Hershey for the sixth game tomorrow night and the seventh, if necessary, will be played in Cleveland Monday. The Barons lead in points, 6-4, in an eight-point series.

George Agar opened the scoring for Cleveland in last night's game, in a first period effort with Earl Bartholomew, but Hershey forged ahead early in the second with goals by Alex Ritzon and Hynie Fuller. Fraser Davis 16, 2-3 a few seconds later and Forgie added another for the Bears at 17.06.

Two unassisted Cleveland goals, by Lou Cunningham and Tommy Burlington, clinched the game in the third period, despite Art Strobel's try for Hershey at 18.08.

In Saturday's game, it was Bartholome's third period goal which gave Barons their narrow victory.

A crowd of 8,366, one of the largest recorded at the Hershey Arena in its nine years operation, saw the Barons take an early lead when George Agar caught Nick Damore off balance and flipped in an easy one Bartholomew as pay-off counter-game as 4.28 in the final canto in a combining play with Rusty Waldrift and Leo Gaesparini.

WILL NOT PLAY FOR TITLE.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., April 9.—(CP)—The Sault Ste. Marie hockey team which captured the Northern Ontario intermediate championship will not participate in the All-Ontario finals against the Owen Sound Orphans, winners of the O.H.A. intermediate title, it was announced last night.

Unusually mild weather made it impossible to operate the natural ice stadium here and the players have remained idle for several weeks, team officials said, adding that most of the players are employed in vital war industries, and would find it difficult to leave their jobs.

They'll Do It Every Time — By Jimmy Hatlo

Babe Shows 'Em.

Much to the disgust of New York City baseball writers, George "Babe" Ruth made good in his initial two starts as a wrestling referee first at Portland and then at Spokane the other week. Interviewed by Joe Williams, of the New York World-Telegram, last week the Bambino surprised the Gotham scribe with his histories of wrestling, the muscle-bending business. "I should like to remind you that wrestling has a noble history," quoted Babe, his home rip, long. "When the Greeks dominated the sporting world they featured the discus throw. They were the world's top athletes and next to the discus came wrestling and the Greeks of that period were considered very classy people," reminded Ruth. The "Babe" may know his wrestling history, but unfortunately he won't be in Belleville for the match. Promoter Frank Tunney's grapplers at the Hume Arena Wednesday night. Maybe it's unfortunate the spindly-legged Ruth won't be present to take matters in hand when Nanjo Singh meets Red Vagnone, for after all the fans do know, but don't appreciate, Singh.

Cards, Yanks Favored.

The Cardinals and Yankees will revive their World's Series rivalry this fall, if a sporty pot of Esquire Magazine for April stands up. The writing gang there teams on top in the National and American League, with Detroit and Cincinnati as runner-ups. The pennant-winning Browns are placed third in the American, followed by Cleveland, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia and Washington. The Pirates are rated next to the Reds, followed by the Cubs, Giants, Dodgers, Braves and Phillies in the National.

In other polls announced in the same issue of the magazine, the 36-inning 1 to 1 game between the Braves and Dodgers, May 1, 1920, is called the greatest game ever played, with the World's Series contest of October 12, 1909, between the Athletics and Cubs, next. Ty Cobb is selected the greatest all-round player, followed by Babe Ruth and Hans Wagner.

Wagner is considered the greatest fielding infielder, followed by Marvin Marion and Charley Gehringer, and Tris Speaker is rated as the greatest fielding outfielder. Rogers Hornsby gets a big edge over Babe Ruth and Joe Jackson as the greatest straight-away hitter.

BOOKS COME HOME

Sheffield, England (CP) — Librarians here have just had a big moving day. Thousands of books were taken out of safe storage depots in the suburbs and returned to the library shelves because the danger of bombing had disappeared.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

Safe.

A bright little girl, aged 4, and her brother, aged 6, were spending the night with her aunt. When bedtime came, the aunt asked how they said their prayers. The little girl answered:

"Sometimes I say them on mummy's knees and sometimes to the side of the bed."

"And how about you, little boy? Oh, I don't need to pray. I sleep with daddy."

The and That.

Here's a St. Louis writer's reaction to the play of one-armed Pete Gray.... What he does can't be done. Still, I've seen him do it... Incidentally, it is a cinch that Gray will attract as many fans around the American League circuit as will see the Browns at home in a full season.... Denny Vance is said to have received $35,000 from the Dodgers when he was in his pitching prime.... That was an all-time record for the club.... One Masha Sbenanova is the Babe Didrikson of Russian sport.... Masha competes, on an even basis, with men in track meets.... A rumor is making the rounds that Jimmy Dykes of the White Sox will forsake the pilot of the dugout this season to escort in the third base coaching box.... Joe Louis was asked what the thoughts ran through his mind after Buddy Baer had knocked him out of the ring that time in Washington, he replied, "All I could think of as I lay there on the ring canvas was 'what am I doin' out here when he's in there?'" The Lincoln Bomber came back through the ropes and polished him off.

Remember When.

The Montreal Maroons concluded their non-stop Stanley Cup title flight with a 4-1 decision over the Toronto Maple Leafs at the Forum ten years ago tonight. The Maroons, who held the trophy in 1926, previously had scored 3-2 and 3-1 victories over the Leafs. Incidentally, when the Maroons won the Stanley Cup back in 1926 A. R. "Toots" Holway, now coach of the Belleville Juniors, was one of the Maroons' stalwart defencemen.

Getting Old.

According to Ab Demarco, New York Ranger forward, Bucko McDonald, burly N.H.L. defenceman, will seek a refereeing berth in the N.H.L. next season. McDonald is slated for a major operation at Toronto soon and then will retire as an active player in the N.H.L. If Bucko is as tough an arbiter as he was to pass on the defence the boys are in for a rough ride.

Horse Sense Bridge

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE .. ..
LESSON NO. 651
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Among my souvenirs are many soap premium hands. A soap premium hand is a deal with problem plays. In auction bridge days, prizes were paid for solving them. Hence the name.

Diving blindly into my grab-bag, I come up with this deal:

NORTH
♠ Q J 10 9 8
♥ 5 4 3 2
♦ A K Q J
♣ None

WEST
♠ A 7 6 5 4
♣ A 7 6 5 4

EAST
♠ K 3 2
♥ 10 9 8 7
♣ Q J 10 9 8

SOUTH
♠ None
♥ A K Q J
♦ 10 9 8 4 3 2
♣ K 3 2

South becomes the declarer at a contract of seven hearts. How and why is not the point here. I'm just reporting, not recommending that contract.

It is written that west starts out with an opening lead of the club ace. With that lead, the problem is for declarer to take all 13 tricks. So, consider the plan to follow.

By trumping two clubs, the rest of the tricks look good. But the trumps must be pulled from opponents. And when they are, dummy top diamonds are in the way. So, unblocking plays must be figured out.

Trump the opening lead in dummy. Lead a dummy trump and win it in south. Lead a small south club and trump it in dummy. Now take a round of diamonds and lead the last dummy trump.

South wins that and two more heart leads and picks off the opponent trumps. Sluff two top diamonds from dummy on these last two leads. What you are trying to do is get those dummy diamonds out of your road.

Now lead the good club king and sluff the remaining top dummy diamond. That clears the decks for the south diamonds. Help yourself to what is left.

It is interesting to note that a spade lead would have killed the grand slam in hearts. But a grand slam in diamonds could not have been defeated with any lead.

Which reminds me. In most of those premium hands, the final bid was often in the wrong contract. Another indication of how much bidding has improved since then. And how.

CANUCKS ON WAY TO TORONTO AFTER TAKING MONARCHS

Moose Jaw Holds Off Winnipeg's Late Rally to Win 7-6 in Overtime

Winnipeg, April 9 — (CP)—Coach Roy Bentley, of the famed Bentleys from Dealisle, Sask., and 13 tricky Moose Jaw Canuck junior hockey players will arrive in Toronto tomorrow for the 27th Dominion championship series against either Toronto St. Michael's or Montreal Royals. Western teams have won the Memorial Cup 14 times.

Canucks, a better balanced squad than Bentley's Trail Smoke Eaters, who fell before Oshawa Generals a year ago, held off the charging Winnipeg Monarchs here Saturday night before 5,500 fans for a 7-6 overtime victory that won them the best-of-seven western finals four games to one.

The Monarchs, with the greatest turn of speed seen on Winnipeg ice in years, wiped out Canucks' 4-1 lead in the final 14 minutes.

Gerry Couture, a Saskatoon play-off recruit for Canucks, set up the pay-off goal at 5:46 in overtime. The husky defenceman passed to left winger Doug Toole who scored.

Earlier, the Canuck ace trio of Frank Ashworth, centre, flanked by Clarence Marquess and Bert Olmstead, figured in five picture goals. Marquess added the final drive to three and Olmstead the other two. Ashworth collected four assists. Centreman Metro Prystal got the other counter in a scramble at the Monarch goal crease while Clint Albright of the Manitoba team was serving an interference penalty.

Defenceman Dunc Daniels, with three, Harry Taylor, Don McCrae and Albright scored for Winnipeg.

NELSON TURNS IN GREATEST GOLF BEAT OF ALL TIME

Score is 263 for 72 Holes in Winning $10,000 Golf Tourney

By CHICK HOSCH

Atlanta, April 9 — (AP)—Byron Nelson's record of 263 for 72 holes was cited today as the greatest golf performance of all time but it won't go in the books that way.

The mark, made by the Toledo, O., precisionist in winning the $10,000 Iron Lung invitation meet here, will be listed only as a record for a 72-hole P.G.A. tournament, says tournament manager Fred Corcoran.

Corcoran recalled the 264 Craig Wood, duration open titlist, shot in the 72-hole Metropolitan Open at Bloomfield, N.J., in 1940 and termed it "a sort of dual record."

He explained:

"Wood's score was the lowest for 72 holes, until yesterday, and also the lowest for an officially-registered championship. The 263 of Nelson will be entered as the lowest for a 72-hole tournament played as part of a tour, while Wood's will remain as the best for a definite medal championship — a fixed event.

"While the other players and I agree that the play of Nelson in this tournament was the greatest performance of all time, it must be remembered that Wood's score was made over a longer course of a higher par."

The Bloomfield course (Forest Hills) is 6,410 yards. Par, normally 71, was lowered to 70 for the 1940 tourney. The capital city club here is 6,155 yards. Par, normally 71, was lowered to 69 for the Iron Lung tournament.

Nelson was 13 strokes under par after yesterday's fourth round, nine strokes ahead of his nearest rival, Sammy Byrd.

In winning Nelson ran his winter four triumphs to eight, bettering the record of six set by Jimmy Demaret in 1940. The $2,000 first prize sent his winnings to $21,050. The $47,000 he pulled down in 1944 was an all-time high.

His four-day score was 64-69-65-65, and included 22 birdies and nine bogies.

Byrd's 67 gave him 272, six ahead of Jimmie Hines of Amsterdam, NY.

Training Camp Notes

New York, April 9. (AP) — Most major league baseball teams break Spring training camps today and head for their home parks for final exhibition games before the opening of the season next week.

Bobo Newsom, who is expected to better his 13-won record of last year for Philadelphia Athletics, reported at the A's Frederick, MD., camp and disclosed he had sustained another of his numerous bone fractures during the winter. He said he suffered a broken collarbone in an automobile mishap.

Bobo appeared all right against Baltimore Orioles in his first start, however, working the opening three innings in satisfactory style. Other remaining camp items:

Boston Red Sox—Manager Joe Cronin will uncover new Rookie pitcher, Jim Wilson, during five-game series with Braves that opens in Boston Wednesday.

Cleveland Indians — Outfielder Jeff Heath has decided not to play with Indians and asked to be traded.

St. Louis Cardinals—Augie Bergamo hit two doubles and two singles to lead attack against Browns in city series game. Johnny Hopp batted in five runs with triple and homer.

New York Giants —Mel Ott, Phil Weintraub and Danny Gardella hit homers as Giants swamped Newark, 20-1.

Brooklyn Dodgers — Club scored two runs against Montreal players in third to break shutout streak of 25 innings.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press.)

The O.H.A. Intermediate A championship race reached a conclusion Saturday night at Owen Sound when the local Orphans trimmed the sails of Port Colborne Tars 4-2 in the fifth and deciding set-to of the titular series. With three goals to his credit, Shears played an important role for the victors.

For the second year in succession, St. Jerome's College, Kitchener, won the Ontario Junior basketball title Saturday night at Kitchener when the collegians turned back Windsor-All-Stars 34-33 in a spirited game. In the semi-final, the highly-favored London Central Collegiate five were eliminated by Windsor 35-30 while St. Jeromes were defeating Toronto Y.M.H.A. and Hamilton in succession.

The second game of the Western Canadian Women's Basketball Series at Vancouver Saturday night, in which Edmonton defeated Vancouver Hedlunds 45-41, was a rugged contest in which a total of 57 personal fouls were called. The series stands tied at one game apiece.

After defeating Toronto Carltons 22-12 for the Ontario Ladies' Intermediate Basketball Championship Saturday night at Hamilton, Brantford Watrous issued a challenge to Verdun United, Quebec Provincial title-winners, for a playoff series for the Eastern Canadian honors.

Sports Roundup

New York, April 9 (AP)—It would be Brooklyn that's giving the National Football League its biggest headache in years—there's something about that city that does it.... That problem of what to do with Dan Topping's Tigers in sending what was supposed to be a three-day meeting into extra innings and still nobody knows what will be the outcome of all the argument.... Still it seems funny that nothing could be done about it yesterday because Tim Mara, who has no official position since he gave the Giants to his sons, Jack and Wellington, couldn't attend the meeting.

Some of the scribes and football coaches, who weren't allowed to participate in the more serious league deliberations, were whiling away the time with a pair of dice the other night....Don Hutson, the retiring Green Bay Packers' star, was doing all right when a jokester glanced over and remarked: "That's Hutson for you, still setting records for passes."

Hollywood and HERE

By HYE BOSSIN

The British Film Producers Association has asked the government to bar further foreign investment in British theatres and to establish certain controls over existing foreign holdings. The USA film and theatre industry has been angered by this move, since J. Arthur Rank is president of the association.

Mr. Rank is investing British money in theatre building and film distribution in different parts of the world, including the USA, and the Americans point out that it ill behooves any country to preach commercial "nationalism" and practice internationalism.

The situation is some indication of what the world will have to iron out in the future. Perhaps proportional investment or equivalent tariff is the answer.

For two years unmarried couples have been forced to sit on different sides of the aisle in the movie house in Clones, Eire. The local council ruled that married folks only could sit together. Then the ban was revoked—but two weeks later it was back in full force. . . Which brings to mind the comment of Alderman McComber of Port Arthur, Ontario, when a bill to ban midnight shows was about to be introduced by a colleague: "If Alderman Brown is going to legislate people into Heaven he's got some job on his hands" . . . Esther Williams will play a bull-fighter in "Fiesta Brava."

A whistling-in-the-dark note was struck by the announcement over the German radio that Emil Jannings will star in "Where Is Herr Billing?"

This is another example of that German characteristic which brought tragedy to that nation and the world—an overwhelming capacity for lying to itself.

With the military situation what it is, such an almost-normal announcement as the production of a feature film is ridiculously funny. It brings to mind the scene in the stage play, "Jumbo," in which Jimmy Durante has been caught leading a stolen elephant.

"Where did you get that elephant?" the intercepter asked.

"What elephant?" answers Durante.

In "Roughly Speaking" there are a number of meat-eating scenes, which drew a protest from the president of the United Brotherhood of Vegetarians. His name, incidentally, is Chops . . . Something For The Boys

Carmen Miranda, Michael O'Shea and Vivian Blaine ("The Cherry Blonde") are starred in the 20th Century Fox filmization of the Cole Porter song-studded Broadway hit, "Something For The Boys," now on the Belle Theatre Screen.

The Master Race

Hailed as one of the most striking films in recent years, "The Master Race" coming next to the Belle Theatre, presents the thesis that the greatest obstacle to the world peace is not the Nazis themselves, but the little-known men behind them — the real leaders of Germany whose "master race" theories brought about the last World War as well as this one, and who are now laying plans for a third global conflict.

Woven into the fabric of a stirring drama of Allied reconstruction in Belgium, the gripping story reveals how these fanatics, undeterred by the collapse of Hitler's armies, plan to cultivate dissension and hatred in the conquered areas and thus sow the seed for another war in the future.

As a part of this plan, a German colonel, Von Beck, pretends to be a Belgian patriot anxious to help in rebuilding the little town of Kolar. Actually, Von Beck searches out local enmities and capitalizes on them and evolves various schemes to set the villagers against one another and against the Allied forces.

The results of his sinister campaign lead to the exciting highlights of the drama, which culminates in an effort to kill the Nazi prisoners in the town jail and blame this on the United Nations troops.

An Edward A. Golden production for RKO Radio, "The Master Race" was produced by Robert S. Golden and directed by Herbert J. Biberman. George Coulouris has the leading role of the malevolent Von Beck and the cast includes Osa Massen, Stanley Ridges, Carl Esmond and Nancy Gates.

DANCE OF DEATH

CHAPTER 14

"It's all right, Mr. Sobel." Danine spoke with gentle resignation. "I cannot answer your question positively, Inspector Coyle, but I believe Miss Jocelyn was not wholly indifferent to me. Of course I am not a young man, but—well, I was offering her the utmost devotion and a position in life—er—shall we say commensurate with her own? Few young men can give either of these things. Youth is selfish, Inspector. It is only in middle age that a man learns love should mean—pure unselfishness."

He rose with an indolent suppleness that was almost feline.

But Foyle detained him. "One more thing, Mr. Danine. Can you think of any one who might have wanted Kitty Jocelyn out of the way?"

Danine shook his head. "It's incredible! A lovely girl of eighteen—on the threshold of life! How could she have an enemy?" He sighed. "If that's all, I'll ask you to excuse me now."

"I'll take you out my private door," said Sobel. "That way you'll escape the reporters."

"Oh, yes, the reporters! Of course! But I have no wish to escape them. I thought if I told them about the reward I am offering it might help things along."

Sobel had been planning to announce Danine's reward in an interview of his own. With ill grace, he told his secretary to bring in the newspaper men.

But if Nicholas Danine felt tension in the atmosphere he didn't show it as he greeted the reporters.

"I guess he's as much of a limelight hound as the D. A.," thought Foyle. "And that's saying something!"

"Look this way, Mr. Danine!" cried the photographers. "Chin up, please. And a little more to the right."

With amazing docility, the great man allowed the photographers to have their way with him.

"I was very fond of Miss Jocelyn," he repeated. "And I am offering a reward of ten thousand dollars for any information leading to the capture of her murderer."

Basil realized that now there was no longer any question of Ann Claude's sanity he had no official standing in the case.

"But that won't prevent my calling on Lambert in my private capacity," he told himself. "And if "Piggy" should happen to mention the Jocelyn case I certainly won't change the subject!"

After Luncheon, he found Lambert in his laboratory. The city toxicologist was solemnly shaking a stoppered flask to and fro under the weary gaze of Inspector Foyle.

"He's been doing that for the last half hour," explained Foyle.

On the table stood two black and crystal X-Why bottles with long yellow silk tassels.

"Find any fingerprints on the bottle?" asked Basil.

"A few of Kitty Jocelyn's and a few of Minna Hagen's. I had her down at my office for further questioning this morning. She wept and said she'd only touched the bottle when she was dusting the bathroom cupboard. She didn't recall when she first saw it there or how long it had been half empty. Mebbe that's true—and mebbe it isn't. We'll give her a day or so to think it over, and then we'll grill her again."

"She hasn't the brains to commit a murder like this."

"No, doc, but she's the very stuff accomplices are made of. Weak as water—easily scared—and dumb."

"Have you any report on the food and liquor from the Jocelyn house?"

"Bill—my assistant — analyzed it this morning," put in Lambert. "There was no trace of poison."

He paused in shaking his flask and held it up to the anemic light of the winter day. The upper layer of the contents was turning a ripe, reddish purple.

"So that's that." He set down the flask.

"So that's what?" demanded Foyle.

"A positive Derrien reaction. This flask contains twenty X-Why tablets and that purple color shows that X-Why contains di-nitro-phenol."

"What about the body?" asked Basil.

Lambert was washing his hands at the sink. "This morning I tested a steam distilled extract of kidney tissue concentrated by evaporation," he said over his shoulder. "And I found ample evidence of 2, 4 di-nitro-phenol, or, to use the more explicit term, hydroxy dinitro-benzene 1, 2, 4."

"Hy-di-what?" cried Foyle.

"And to think we have compulsory education in this country!" said Lambert, sweetly. "I'll call the drug by its French name thermol—even you should be able to remember that. I made a quantitative analysis of the kidney tissue this morning, and there's no doubt Kitty Jocelyn had an unusually large dose. It's difficult to estimate the exact amount because some of the poison is usually eliminated by vomiting and urination before death. But I would put it as high as 6 grams—that is, about 90 grains troy, or a thousand milligrams per kilo body weight. She weighed 108 pounds—roughly 52 kilos. Ten milligrams per kilo is the recognized fatal dose, though the drug is so capricious lesser doses have proved fatal. As one doctor puts it: 'The so-called "medicinal" dose and the fatal dose are sometimes the same.'"

"But the ads say the blasted stuff is harmless!"

Lambert smiled. "They also say it's based on an old Persian beauty secret."

"And it isn't?"

"Well, it's the first I've ever heard that the ancient Persians knew anything about nitro derivatives of the benzene ring."

"Could Kitty Jocelyn have taken this poison in an unpitted olive?" asked Basil.

"Not unless she ate a great many. Each X-Why tablet contains 300 milligrams of thermol. She must have had 20 tablets."

"Was it thermol that caused that queer heat of the body after death?" queried Foyle.

"That's characteristic of thermol poisoning," answered Lambert. "In one case, where the dose was 9 grams, the post-mortem temperature was 115 degrees Fahrenheit. As a dead body loses heat at the average rate of 2 degrees an hour, you can see for yourself how long it might remain warm if it were protected from wind by snow."

"And the yellow stain on her face?"

"Sometimes it's on the face. Sometimes it's on the hands, or neck or abdomen. The internal organs and secretions are usually yellow as well."

"If all the symptons are so well known, why didn't that mutt Dalton put me wise when he first did the autopsy?"

"But they're not well known. I've just been making a special study of them—that's why I have them so pat. It was Basil who tipped me off that the poison might be thermol."

"And I only thought of thermol when I found Kitty's name connected with reducing medicine in advertisements," added Basil. "I didn't know enough about the drug to recognize Kitty's symptoms when I read the autopsy report."

"Oh, yeah? Well, all I got to say is—you're a fine bunch of experts!"

"Thermol is a comparatively recent discovery," returned Lambert with dignity. "Dalton isn't the first medical examiner to be stumped by it. In one of the cases I found in the "Journal of the American Medical Association," the doctors who conducted the autopsy wrote quite frankly: 'We are unable to propose an intelligent guess regarding the cause of death.' It was only after they found thermol tablets among the dead person's belongings that they got at the truth."

"If Kitty Jocelyn had been fat we might have got onto thermol sooner," suggested Basil. "Her body was naturally thin with long, narrow bones, and I think that inhibited any thought of reducing medicine at first."

But when Inspector Foyle got hold of an idea he held it in such a firm grip that Basil could almost hear him telling it to "come quietly."

"I still don't see why Dalton thought it was heat stroke."

Lambert smiled again. "Because it was a heat stroke."

"Huh?"

"Internal heat stroke. Life is a form of conbustion or fire which we call metabolism. If the metabocess,' as van Uytvanck says. It is generated inside the body, and it affects bodily organs the same way the external heat of a tropic sun affects them. Thermol is a bellows that blows upon the fire of life—a 'catalyst of the vital process,' as van Uytvanck says. It is used as reducing medicine because it burns up body tissue, including fat. Small doses cause high color and a glow of warmth and well being—that's why the advertisements claim that X-Why is a 'tonic and beautifier' as well as a reducing medicine. But they do not mention the fact that even small doses may cause blindness, skin rash or impaired sense of taste, while the victim of a large dose is 'literally cooked to death' by a fire inside the cells of his own body."

Foyle could not repress a shiver.

"Do you realize this is the first thermol murder in the history of crime?" Lambert spoke with a bright and birdlike interest. It occurred to Foyle that chemists were really more hard-boiled than policemen.

"There've been a number of accidental deaths from thermol reducing medicines, and one suicide. But the Jocelyn case is the first murder. Standard textbooks on medical jurisprudence have very little about the stuff. They do not describe the startling symptons that come from taking a large dose of thermol internally. The cases they mention are mostly those of munition workers who were poisoned externally."

"Munition workers!" Foyle bounded from his chair.

"Why not? Is there any one in this case connected with munitions?

"Is there!" It was Foyle's turn to laugh at Lambert. "Just wait until you see the evening papers! Nicholas Danine—that's all."

"That's interesting," admitted Lambert. "For no one ever thought of using thermol as reducing medicine until the war came and people noticed that the workers who handled shellite, containing thermol, were losing weight. And most poisons have more than one commercial use. Thermol has been tried in England as a vulcanizer for crepe rubber. In this country, it's used as a fabric dye, and an insecticide for plant lice."

"Isn't there some way of proving that the thermol you found in Kitty Jocelyn's body was given her in the form of X-Why?"

The inspector's voice was plaintive, but Lambert's reply was an unqualified negative.

"There's no distinction between the chemically pure thermol, used in reducing medicine, and the commercial thermol, used in explosives and dyes, that can be determined after they have passed through a living body. Outside the body, commercial thermol is a dingier yellow than pure thermol, and it has a faint bitter almond odor, while pure thermol is odorless. There's the usual variation in melting point. But once in the body both stain tissue the same canary yellow, both speed up metabolism, and both are transformed by the body itself into other compounds."

"Could the bouquet of gin and vermouth disguise the bitter almond odor of commercial thermol?" inquired Basil, abruptly.

"But it couldn't have been in the cocktail, doc!" insisted Inspector Foyle. "Pasquale is still alive and kicking."

Basil turned to Lambert again. to have 6 grams of thermol each "Would it be possible ," he asked the city toxicologist "for two people and one die and the other not?"

"Say, that's real dough, Mr. Danine!"

"Were you engaged to her?"

"That's enough, boys," cut in Sobel, irritably.

"It's rather futile to speak of men?" answered Danine, with a these things now, isn't it gentlehint of tremor in his voice.

Even the reporters were abashed.

"Gee, I'm sorry, Mr. Danine."

"I hate to ask you these things, but you know—my city editor."

"Oh, I quite understand." A smile that was a charming blend of irony and melancholy touched his expressive lips. "I was a young man once and I know what it is to lose a job. Well, you may tell your city editor that I had hoped to marry Miss Jocelyn, and that I followed her to this country with that intention. And now—really I am tired. I have suffered a great shock. You have your story. Please let me go."

"Sure! And thanks a lot!"

Danine made his way to the door.

"If you wish to see me again, Inspector Boyle, you'll find me at the. . ." He named a famous hotel.

"Well, what do you make of that, Duff?" demanded Foyle in the privacy of his own offfice.

Before Detective Duff could comment, the telephone rang. He answered it and then looked over at Foyle.

"Edgar Jocelyn. The commissioner is passing the buck to you."

Slab of Stone In Library Facade Cracks off, Falls

Action of the elements on a stone facade in the upper walls of the public library, Bridge street, resulted in a potential danger to persons passing beneath, as it was revealed following the regular meeting of the library board last evening when a large slab of stone, part of the facade on the west part of the building, cracked off and fell to the stone wall and crashed to the lawn below.

A local stone mason ascertained the reason for the falling slab, first dictated it was the result of weather action in gradually weakening the rock grain with each passing year, it cracked off even with the wall. Reference to the architect's plan showed the grain running at right angles to the wall the trouble would not have developed.

Chairman of the library board was authorized to have inspection made of the building with view of ascertaining what, if any, was the remedy the situation.

In the librarian's report it was drawn the consideration for March had been 2,500 with 74 members being added during the month. Total new members since the beginning of the year in the Belleville Coal Company was given coal contract for the year 1946.

Increased interest is being shown in the library service through contact with persons seeking information of various subjects such as post war employment and reconstruction. In anticipation of the forthcoming gardening season, a display and distribution on home gardening have been set out for reference by local citizens.

Where Irish Moss Blooms

By C. C. Robinson in Christian Science Monitor

The Irish moss industry, hunky war baby which Nova Scotia fishermen kidnapped from New England six years ago last year, topped the 1,000,000-pound figure and officials of Nova Scotia's Department of Industry believe this production will be exceeded in 1946.

It was as the result of a visit which industry-seeking Nova Scotians dispatched by the provincial government, paid to Scituate, Massachusetts and other Irish-moss-producing centres in the eastern United States in 1939, that the industry really got its start in this province. Each year since then production has been increasing.

Few of the 35,000 fishermen in the Maritime Provinces knew prior to that visit that the species of marine seaweed resembling parsley which they could see in abundant quantities close to shore was commercially valuable. They did not know that it had a 90 per cent content of gelose, a substance which was extremely scarce in the United States and Canada.

To make up the deficiency of Irish moss on this continent, large quantities were imported from Ireland and Wales in peacetime, but war cut short this traffic. When this happened, interests on this continent began to look around for new sources of supply. Some Irish moss was being produced in New England, but more was needed. So attention turned to Canada—not to the fresh-water provinces, because fresh water is lethal to gelose, but to the Maritimes, where the moss has been found to exist in abundant quantities.

Over 100 years ago the great-grandmothers of the Nova Scotia fishermen found a unique use for Irish moss. They put it in a bowl of milk and placed this in the oven and later when the moss had removed the extracted gelose itself and the contents into a delicious dessert—pudding.

Perhaps it was mere chance or maybe it was native ingenuity which taught Grandma this trick. No one seems to know. The important thing is that her discovery, developed to a fine degree in New England, laid the foundation for the present industry.

Today Irish moss is still used as a means of thickening puddings, but a wide variety of other uses have also been found for the product. The gelose extracted from the moss goes into ladies' cosmetics, shoe polish, shaving creams, hair tonics, and custards. It is used as a stabilizer for canned cheese. It is used to make inks, paints, dyes and leather dressing. One of its biggest uses at the present time is in chocolate milk drinks, the action of the gelose preventing the chocolate from settling to the bottom of the bottle.

When the Irish moss industry was getting started in Nova Scotia, a sample of a special rake, such as has been developed in Maine and used along the New England moss beds, was procured, and much work resulted in designing a modified form more suited to the characteristics of the Nova Scotia shore. In New England gathering is usually done in water as deep as 10 feet, and the rakes are fitted with hardwood handles up to 18 feet in length. In Nova Scotia it is seldom necessary to work in depths over six, the handles may be from six to eight feet long and are fitted instead at a sharper angle to the handle.

With this rake, fishermen of Chebogue, Wedgeport, Malagash, and dozens of other fishing centres in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island are discovering that "fishing for gelose" is profitable.

"It's a poor fisherman who can't make $10 a day for himself collecting Irish moss," declares R. B. Montgomery, Director of Industrial Production for Nova Scotia, who with Industry Minister Harold Connolly, has done much to promote the industry in this province. They put it in the "big business" class.

Hundreds of fishermen are today engaged in this new industry, and their number is being added to each year. The main collection points at the moment are at Central Chebogue, Yarmouth County, where Kraysley Company, subsidiary of the Kraft Cheese Company of Chicago, has opened a plant with eventual plans to process the product in Nova Scotia, and at Wedgeport, where Walter Murphy has organized over 100 fishermen in the task of gathering the precious moss.

Kraysley plans to establish centrally located plant in this province soon, where the moss will be shipped and processed. For the present, bleaching is done in Nova Scotia, after which the moss is shipped to the United States for processing. In the meantime, plans are under way by which the moss into a concentrated form to facilitate shipment to the Chicago refining plant.

Considerable exploratory work is now being carried on with a view to finding new beds of high-quality moss.

Latest advice from Ottawa is to the effect that the Federal Fisheries Research Board will spend more money for research in this industry.

THIS STORY IS BASED ON AN ACTUAL CASE . . .

..AND A $50,000.00 BUSINESS WAS BORN..

IT WAS during the depression of the early '30's that Edward Ferguson lost his job.

He was a good workman. He had ideas. And he had a passion for fishing.

But he had no job.

Try as he did, he could find nothing. Unemployment was increasing on every hand.

• • •

For ardent fishermen, casting for trout can do amazing things. For one thing, it can bring peace.

If Edward Ferguson had worries, they soon dissolved in fishing . . . As he had no work, he went after trout pretty often.

On one of his expeditions, he got an idea—an idea for a better fly-rod lure—a better lure than he had ever used . . . and he had used almost every kind that existed.

Edward Ferguson came home in a hurry—got busy working out his new lure. He began operations in his father-in-law's garage.

He soon decided he needed some money to carry his idea into production.

That was when he came to see us. Enthusiastically he told us of his plans. His proposition appealed to us and we lent him the money he wanted — $150, on a note endorsed by his father.

That was 14 years ago. Today, Edward Ferguson has a business worth more than $50,000. He makes all sorts of artificial bait, fishing rods and other items of fishing tackle, and during the war he has, besides, been making equipment for the R.C.A.F.

Edward Ferguson is still a customer of ours . . . and we are proud of the share we have had in his success.

THIS true experience is typical of thousands of customers' dealings with the Bank of Montreal. The Edward Fergusons get on in life because of their determination, enterprise and self-reliance. It is they who have made Canada what she is today . . . the third greatest trading nation of the world.

If you need a loan for the better operation of your business, or for assistance in your personal affairs, we will be glad of the opportunity to discuss, in confidence, your plans and problems with you.

ALLIES WHEEL ALONG NORTH GERMAN PLAIN

British 8th Army Crosses Senio River

Artillery, Bombers Saturate Defences In Great Attack

Smash Brings to End Long Lull on Italian Front

By NOLAND NORGAARD

Rome, April, 10. (AP)—The British 8th Army, supported by a bombardment from hundreds of guns and the heaviest Allied air assault ever carried out in Italy, has crossed the Senio River in a campaign to destroy as much as possible of the opposing German army before it can withdraw into Germany's southern mountain redoubt.

The eastern end of the Italian front burst into flame at 7.30 p.m., Monday when hundreds of heavy guns opened up. Bridgeheads were established on a broad front on the north side of the Senio in the vicinity of Lugo. More than 1,000 heavy bombers, plus hundreds of lighter planes which flew thousands of sorties, had thoroughly saturated German defences with bombs and fire, and the crossings were accomplished quickly against relatively light opposition.

The smash across the Senio brought to an end the prolonged winter lull on this front.

Advance May Be Fast.

A strike west of Lugo would endanger German strongholds upstream along the Senio into the Northern Apennines, and the comparatively easy manner in which bridgehead were established, together with the display of an Allied material superiority, suggested that the 25 German divisions, plus six Italian Fascist divisions estimated to be in Italy would not be able to withstand the pounding for long.

The attack came after Field Marshal Albert Kesselring, expert in delaying tactics, had been called away to take charge of the Germans' western front. His place is reported to have been taken by Col.-Gen. Freidrich von Veitinghoff, credited with a leading role in constructing the defences of Cassino.

Ahead, however, lay tough going for the British tackling what apparently is meant to be the last battle for Northern Italy.

Much of the Terrain is swampy and interlaced with canals and ditches.

The combined might of the R. A. F. and U. S. 15th and 12th air forces was thrown into an aerial onslaught yesterday intended to obliterate elaborate German defences thrown up on the west bank of the river for a considerable depth.

5th Army on Offensive.

Americans on the Allied 5th Army sector were also on the offensive, with the U. S. 473rd Infantry Regiment, operating with the 92nd division, fighting its way into the southern outskirts of Massa against growing enemy resistance.

The British troops had slightly less than a mile to go beyond the Senio to reach Lugo, 13½ miles west of Ravenna.

While the British destroyer Marne continued to pump shells into German positions the 92nd division's 307th Infantry Regiment surged forward along the Ligurian coastal plain to within a few hundred yards of the Frigido River west of Massa. The Japanese-American 442nd regiment, meanwhile, captured the village of Atangnan, 2½ miles northwest of Massa, in heavy fighting.

Other units of the 42nd were locked in brisk battle south of Pariana, roughly midway between Massa and Altagnana.

Sid Feder, Associated Press War Correspondent who saw the bombing from a plane, reported that in addition to the concentration of air might he was able to see flashes from "scores upon scores" of Allied field guns in "what happened to be a general softening up of enemy defences which have stood up throughout the winter."

Transport Plane Crash Kills Four, Injures Fifteen

St. Hyacinthe, Que., April 10 — (CP) — Officials of the R.A.F. Transport Command today were investigating the crash of a Liberator with the loss of three lives in a field at nearby St. Simon late yesterday.

Two of those killed were among the 18 persons aboard the four-engine aircraft. The third was R. Plouffe, 35, of St. Barnabe, Que., who was killed trying to get to the crashed plane. He was electrocuted when he fell against power lines brought down by the plane.

Two other persons were in critical condition in hospital, while the remaining 14 injured were expected to recover. Next of kin have been informed and names of those killed will be announced later.

It was understood all those aboard the plane were employed by the R.A.F.T.C. Officials did not give the destination of the plane, which had taken off from Dorval airport a short time before, but said she was on a "routine transportation flight."

The plane reported herself in difficulty some minutes before the crash, and eye-witnesses said that one engine was afire for several miles before the plane came down.

The plane carried 11 passengers and a crew of seven. Whether the two killed and the two critically injured were passengers or crew members was not announced.

CANADIAN ARMOR 25 MILES FROM NORTH SEA COAST

10-Mile Advance Over-Night Scored—80,000 Germans Are Pinned In Western Pocket

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the 1st Canadian Army, April 10 —(CP Cable)— A battle group of the 4th Canadian armored division has reached a point 25 miles south of Emden and the North Sea coast after a 10-mile overnight advance against light opposition.

On the Meppen-Emden highway east of Dorpen—22 miles north of Meppen—these Canadians bumped into a group of 70 Germans and took 12 prisoners in a skirmish which scattered the enemy.

Pushing out from Sogel—14 miles northeast of Meppen — toward Oldenburg, another battle group of the 4th advanced six miles northeast to Borgen but met strong resistance from Bazookas and small arms and pulled back awaiting arrival of reinforcements.

Still another battle group advanced a mile southeast of Sogel where it was held up by a blown bridge.

Most German forces in northeast Holland now seem to have been withdrawn to the German North Sea coast in the Emden and Wilhelmshaven region and a defence line may be formed between the Ems and Weser rivers south of these two naval ports.

80,000 Nazis Pinned Back In Pocket.

The Canadian drive towards the Zuider Zee and the German North Sea coast split in the centre the 180-mile front from the Arnhem area in Holland to the Ems river and two pockets were formed at each end. An estimated 80,000 Germans are pinned back in Holland in the Western pocket.

Indications were that the enemy intends to fight bitterly in the Holland pocket, west of the Ijssel River, forged yesterday by Canadian armored car patrols which reached the outskirts of Meppel, 10 miles east of the Zuider Zee.

The other pocket was forming in Northwest Germany, screening the ports of Emden and Wilhelmshaven.

These ports have been bases for German submarines and coastal naval forces but they are not believed to be used for this purpose now. However, the enemy probably intends to defend them as he has practically every port along the Channel and North Sea coast.

V-2 CAPTURED REVEALING SECRETS

This V-2, cut in half by the Germans, was captured with eight of the 46-foot projectiles, complete except for their war-heads, at Bromskirchen, Germany. Total weight with fuel of each bomb is about 12 tons. A book of instructions was carefully packed with each bomb. No rocket bombs have fallen in Britain since March 29, and it is believed the Canadian drive into Holland has freed Britain of rocket bombs.

FEDERAL ELECTION DATE INDICATED LIKELY IN JUNE

Mr. King to Announce Time Within 48 Hours of Session's End

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 10 (CP) — Prospects of a Canadian delegation to the San Francisco conference, on an international organization moving off next week without Prime Minister Mackenzie King, loomed today on the basis of a statement from Mr. King in the House of Commons yesterday.

After announcing the personnel of the delegation Mr. King said he would not be able to leave with it on April 19 unless the Commons completed its business this week.

He suggested the House proceed rapidly, but members took the whole afternoon and evening session in further discussion of the army section of the War Appropriation bill while Munitions Minister Howe was ready to proceed with a statement on his department had to put off his speech until today.

Out of Mr. King's statement also came a strong indication the general election will be fixed for June, possibly June 18 or June 25. Mr. King said he would announce the date within 48 hours of the end of the session and explained that two months had to elapse between issuance of the writs and polling day.

"I am prepared to announce the date of the election before the expiration of this parliament if honorable gentlemen opposite give me the opportunity," said Mr. King.

(Parliament expires at midnight, April 16).

Hopes to End Business This Week.

Mr. King expressed the hope parliament would finish its business this week and not delay until the last minute. If it did, he said, he could not leave for San Francisco on Thursday, April 19, as he had too many matters to attend to in such a short interval.

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, said his party would consider Mr. King's suggestion that business be wound up speedily and make known its decision later.

"Any kind of threats or any attempt to throw around the big stick is not going to interfere with our attending to the national business, something which the people have sent us here to do," he said.

Mr. King said he was not asking for favors from anyone, in urging that business be dealt with speedily.

DANISH TUGS REACH SWEDEN

Stockholm, April 10 — (AP) — The last units of a fleet of 19 Danish tugboats and two freighters, manned by 200 Danes, sailed into southern Swedish ports today.

The Danes said the flight was made at the direction of the Allies in order to deprive the Germans of the use of the vessels as the advancing Allied armies threatened to cut Denmark off from the Reich.

AMERICANS GAIN SLOWLY AGAINST OKINAWA JAPS

Enemy Attacks at Bayonet-Point Amid Heavy Artillery Duel

Guam, April 10 — (AP)—Japanese defenders of southern Okinawa, counter-attacking at bayonet-point amidst the heaviest artillery battle of the war in the Pacific, gave ground slowly today to United States invaders.

The U. S. 24th Army Corps was limited to small local gains against savage resistance along a battle line within four miles of the capital city of Naha, but to the north the 3rd Marine Amphibious Corps swept ahead virtually unchecked.

The Marines, scoring gains up to 4,000 yards, cut off the big Motobu Peninsula and, fanning westward, occupied about half of it yesterday. They overran the western shore of Katena Ko, former site of Japanese submarine pens.

It was a different story on southern Okinawa, where the enemy has concentrated the bulk of a defence garrison estimated at more than 60,000 troops.

The Japanese artillery, however, still was no match for the American batteries massing their fire in a furious all-out slugging match.

Battleships and cruisers also turned their heavy guns on the Japanese artillery, destroying a number of gun emplacements in the rugged terrain well suited to defensive tactics.

Two counter-attacks were thrown back yesterday and a third still was being fought off last night in a fierce engagement.

Robbin Coons, Associated Press war correspondent with the 24th Corps on Okinawa, predicted it may take two to three months to capture the island. Iwo Jima, the toughest single conquest of the Pacific war, took 26 days.

Jap Destroyer, Freighter Sunk

Manila, April 10 —(AP)— Four United States Navy heavy bombers attacked a 15-ship Japanese convoy Saturday, sinking a destroyer and a large freighter and seriously damaging another destroyer before the rest of the convoy could flee toward Swatow on the China coast, an Allied Communique announced today.

Philippines-based bombers raised the day's bag to 10 ships sunk as they ranged enemy shipping lanes at will from the Netherlands East Indies to Formosa.

In Southern Luzon, U. S. troops crossed the Onipa River near Malepuya, driving south and further compressing the enemy force already encircled southeast of Laguna de Bay.

On the Bicol peninsula, the other units drove westward against moderate resistance west of Daraga.

Bitter fighting marked the struggle around Balete Pass and Baguio on northern Luzon.

SEND BACK GERMAN CIVILIANS

Stockholm, April 10 —(AP)— All German civilians who have fled to Sweden in recent days will be sent back to their own country immediately, the Swedish Minister of Justice announced yesterday.

FALL OF VIENNA IMMINENT SAYS MOSCOW RADIO

Red Forces North of City Headed For Munich and Prague; Koenigsberg Taken

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

London, April 10. (AP)—Russian forces beyond Vienna headed today for Munich and Prague and a link-up with the Allies in the west as Soviet storm units within the Austrian capital battled the Germans for the last few blocks of the city.

Moscow radio said "the fall of Vienna is imminent".

Far to the north other Russian troops along the Baltic coast had captured the East Prussian capital of Koenigsberg after a massive 33-hour barrage had softened three lines of fortifications surrounding that cradle of Prussian militarism. Seizure of Koenigsberg was hailed in the Russian press as one of the greatest victories of the war, comparable to the breaching of the Siegfried line in the west.

"making Startling Progress"

A Moscow dispatch said Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's 3rd Ukrainian army "was making startling progress" in its drive west of Vienna toward Linz and Munich. The army's exact position was not given, however since the Germans in many sectors were unaware of the scope of the Russian advance.

South of Vienna another wing of Tolbukhins' army had thrust within 133 miles east of Adolf Hitler's mountain retreat at Berchtesgaden.

Moscow dispatches reported that Tolbukhin's forces had crossed the Danube immediately northwest of Vienna near Nuzsdorf and were believed to have crossed some 12 miles farther up stream in the vicinity of Tulln. Neither crossing has been confirmed by the Soviet High Command.

To Close Escape Route.

The one at Nuzsdorf constitutes part of the operation by the 2nd and 3rd Ukrainian armies to close the 17-mile escape avenue out of the Austrian capital. The crossing at Tulin apparently was aimed at Prague, 139 miles away.

While the Berlin radio claimed the Germans still were opposing the Russians "with wild stubbornness" in Vienna, Moscow dispatches pictured the carved up garrison as a "disorganized mob fighting to escape from the city."

Moscow announced that the inner heart of the Austrian capital had been overrun. Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian army swarmed across the much-battered Aspern airport, on the north side of the Danube, thus denying the Germans any hope of escape by air.

The German communique asserted that Marshal Ivan S. Konev's 1st Ukrainian army had launched an assault against besieged Breslau in Silesia.

Hannover Now Outflanked While Bremen Under Siege

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 10 —(AP)— Allied armies were encircling burning Hannover today, besieging Bremen and wheeling along the north German plain within 127 miles of Berlin.

Canadians fought along the Ems river to within 15 miles south of the North Sea and 25 south of the Dollart, Bay port of Emden. Field Marshal Montgomery's northern armies were within 50 miles of sealing off the entire northwest German port belt.

The nearest approach to Berlin was a U. S. 9th Army advance to an unspecified point east of Hildesheim but less than 20 miles from the aircraft centre of Brunswick. Gen. Bradley has three American armies lined up on a central German stretch within 127 to 140 miles of Berlin.

Hannover was deeply outflanked from the north and south by divisions of the British 2nd and United States 9th armies.

Advance on Celle.

The Germans said American tanks immediately north of Hannover were pushing east from Steinhauder Meer and had advanced to a point "midway between Hannover and Celle." 22 miles northeast of the Prussian traffic centre.

The Germans said yesterday the Americans had pushed north around Lehrte, 10 miles east of Hannover. By enemy account, they were less than eight miles from completely encircling the city of 472,527.

"It becomes increasingly clear that the enemy intends to encircle Hannover completely," the Germans said this afternoon.

The British 2nd Army's famed "Desert Rats" — the 7th Armored Division — had brought up another tank column to the outskirts of Bremen in preparation for the final assault on that great river port, and had by-passed Hannover, on the north.

150 Miles from Russ Lines

The U. S. 1st and 3rd Armies were within 150 miles of Russian lines and in ideal tank country, where Germany may be cut in two.

Bradley's other army — the 9th— captured the Ruhr industrial centre of Gelsenkirchen (313,000), seized the ruined Krupp works in Essen and virtually surrounded that city of 660,000 while fighting in its streets.

Hannover and Bremen were besieged and afire while the British 2nd and U. S. 9th Armies beat at their outskirts. Both are great prizes. Bremen is Germany's second port, a Focke-Wulf plane producer and a submarine base. Hannover is a meeting place of five railroads and seven main highways and a producer of aircraft, guns, tanks, trucks and four-fifths of Germany's airplane tires.

"The whole Allied front was aimed at the Elbe River, 50 miles away at Hamburg and less than 70 at Magdeburg. The river is the last before Berlin.

Close to Brunswick

The 9th Army on the high road to Berlin was less than 20 miles from Brunswick; the 3rd Army was five from Erfurt; the U. S. 7th was four miles from Schweinfurt, and the French 1st was nine from Stuttgart.

The Ruhr pocket was squeezed down to less than 2,500 square miles, a death trap 50 miles long and 50 wide holding tens of thousands of Germans. Fighting raged in the streets of Dortmund (537,000) for the third day.

The total bag of prisoners from the Ruhr pocket rose to more than 25,000 as the U. S. 8th Division captured Olpe, 18 miles north of Siegen, where the Germans had been reported concentrating tanks and troops for a counter-attack. Resistance, however, was light and there was no sign of massed strength.

More than 25,000 square miles has been hacked from western Germany and Allied armored spearheads are jabbing deeper. General Eisenhower's tanks were clanking through the enemy's country virtually at will; the shattered Wehrmacht — drained by 500,000 casualties in 10 days and by the entrapment of 180,000 more in the Ruhr and Holland — was fighting by day and running by night.

Canada Preparing For V-E Day

The Young Canadian nation will greet V-E — Victory in Europe—Day with trumpet and thanksgiving, with fanfare and fuss but most of all with all the unpredictable emotions unloosed in nearly 12,000,000 souls by the termination of her second major war against Germany in 30 years.

It seemed certain that the mood of any celebration touched off by a German defeat proclaimed by the Allies—as predicted by Gen. Eisenhower — would be underlined with the knowledge that not only does Japan remain unconquered but Germans remain to kill and maim Allied soldiers.

But, regardless of the tasks it would leave unfinished, the declared defeat of Germany was the target this week of thousands of committees in thousands of Canadian cities, towns and villages, planning the events to commemorate it.

Their plans called for bands to play, for churches to open to those who wish to express thanksgiving, for immediate holidays, for fireworks, for air raid sirens to sound the warning notes of triumph. With individuality and dispatch, the arrangements went forward, with churches of all denominations as a solemn and fitting centre of the occasion.

Murder Factory Where 20,000 Persons Were Slain Discovered Near Limburg

By HAL BOYLE

Limburg, Germany, April 10 — (AP) — American troops have discovered a German 'murder factory,' rivalling any house of horror created by fiction writers, where it is estimated 20,000 persons viewed by the Germans as "undesirable," were systematically slain.

Located in an insane asylum near Limburg, the terror-filled establishment was in charge of a tall, scarfaced 70-year-old surgeon, assisted by a husky, 45-year-old chief woman's nurse and a middle-aged chief warden, Allied officers said. On the staff were Elite Guard officers from Berlin.

Tales told by German residents of the village of Hadamar, four miles north of Limburg, led U. S. 1st Army officers Lieut. George Walker of Deshler, Ohio, and Capt. Alton H. Jung of San Antonio, Tex., to question officials in the village, and resulted in locating the asylum.

Maj. Harvey M. Coverly, Sausalito, Calif., ordered the arrest of the three in charge of the "factory," said by the officers to be one of six set up inside Germany to dispose scientifically of unruly slave laborers or those who had outlived their usefulness.

German civil authorities estimated 15,000 victims were gassed and cremated and another 5,000 killed by drugs or poison and buried in communal graves.

The stench of burning bodies caused Hadamar residents to complain, and the Bishop of Muenster lodged protests with the asylum officials. That brought about a switch from gas to hypodermic injections and from cremation to mass burial.

The slayings were described as "mercy killings" authorized by a 1939 German statute.

Two investigators, Capt. Brinkley Hamilton, a British officer attached to an American infantry division, and Lieut. W. R. Johnson, Loveland, Colo., told a macabre story of death and torture and ghoulish feasts by drunken executioners in the asylum, where 300 crazed inmates were permitted to run free in underground dungeons.

"Nobody would believe it," said Johnson. "It had underground chambers with dripping water, bats flying around and little crazy men who jumped out at you at every step."

The job of the chief nurse, he added, "was to put the death needle into women patients. She was about six feet tall, built like a football player and as ugly as a witch."

Capt. Hamilton, a veteran of 20 years at Bow Street police station in London, said that on one day 500 Russians were taken into the asylum and not one came out alive.

"When we first walked through the asylum the insane inmates, laughing and screaming, followed us around in packs," Hamilton added. "There were dwarfs and stupid giants, but all seemed harmless. Only the sane people there were killed."

Juncture of Allied, Russian Forces May Signalize End of Warfare

By WES GALLAGHER

Hamelin, April 10 —(AP)— A juncture between British-American and Russian forces may well be the time chosen by the three powers to declare all organized warfare with Germany at an end.

Such a declaration would give German soldiers one of two choices —they could either surrender and be treated as prisoners of war or continue fighting and be hunted down as franctireurs or guerillas, having no legal military status.

Judging by the morale of German troops captured in the past two weeks there is little doubt what the German soldier's choice would be. Those still willing to die for the Fuehrer are few and far between.

The Western Front is that in name only. There is no real German front left. The resistance now being encountered by American forces, except in the Ruhr pocket, is unorganized and little more than strong guerilla opposition.

Military men feel the Germans are incapable of erecting any battle front in the west, except perhaps for a short stand along the Elbe and immediately before Berlin itself.

In the words of one operations officer, the situation in the west is now "more of a political than a strategic problem."

Front-line fighting men feel that one or two armored divisions or infantry combined can set out for any place in Germany now and reach it within a reasonable time.

Most military men believe the joint chiefs of staff in Washington will fix some indefinite line in Germany to which either the Russians or the Western Front Allies will advance and then halt, waiting for the forces opposite to move up and join them.

This meeting, no matter where, probably will end what might be called organized resistance in Germany, military authorities believe. A meeting by the U. S. 3rd Army and the Russians would cut Germany into two isolated sections, While a meeting between the 9th Army and the Russians near Berlin would accomplish a similar feat, making it impossible for the German High Command to conduct any sort of organized war.

This is particularly true in view of the fact that nine-tenths of Germany's heavy industry is in Allied hands.

Such a cutting up of the German army would allow German soldiers to surrender "with honor," because their military situation would be impossible.

Implies No Sanctuary To Be Found in Eire By War Criminals

London, April 10 — (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill implied today that he would see to it that no war criminals found sanctuary in neutral Eire.

The question arose in the House of Commons when Dr. James Little, a Presbyterian minister from Belfast, asked the Prime Minister whether he would "take steps to make sure that no war criminals find sanctuary in any country embraced within the British Commonwealth of Nations."

The written reply from Mr. Churchill was: "Yes Sir."

Final Meeting To Approve Plans On Riverside Drive

A final meeting of Front Street merchants and city ratepayers for the approval of revised plans of the proposed Riverside Drive will be held in the city hall next Tuesday evening, it was announced by city members Monday evening.

Mayor Ellis, the Industrial and Publ War Planning committee, Alderman Clarence Clapp, informed council members that plans of the proposed driveway had been brought up to date to accordance with suggestions forwarded at the last public meeting to consider the project and that another meeting should be called for their approval. One of the highlights in this change in plans is the proposal to continue the drive northward along the river bank to emerge onto Front Street at the site of the present fire hall.

City Clerk Wilfred Holmes was instructed to make arrangements for sending out notices to merchants of the date of the meeting and to prepare newspaper advertising.

Police Hope to Have Boy Reinstated

City police today were holding a lad from the Bowmanville Boys' Training School who is reported to have left in order to re-establish him on a farm in the district whence he came, away and broke parole over the weekend. The lad, was apprehended in Belleville on the Canadian National Railways yards here with two men late Monday night. The youngster was held all night and today police liberated them with instructions to leave town.

First indications that the boy through Provincial Police reported as having broken parole from the farm was that he had been absent from residents at 87 Chatham St. reported on Monday that a parcel from a milk bottle left for the milkman at that address. The person responsible was described as wearing a khaki shirt. When the boy was apprehended in the city he admitted at the station he was wearing khaki shirt and was questioned regarding by Sgt. Ellis, he admitted taking the milk money, police said. Today they are endeavoring to have the youth returned to the farm he left over the weekend.

Responsibility of Canada's Future Rests Upon Efforts of the Individual

Col. H.R. Alley, O.B.E., Tells Legion

"The responsibility of the future of Canada and her people, regardless of what the politicians may say that or her fighting some and others who are coming back from the battle front, is the individual," said Col. H. R. Alley, O.B.E. former commanding officer of the Veterans Guard of Canada and now 130 young and old veterans at the Belleville Branch, Canadian Legion, Vimy dinner on Monday night.

There is a great tendency in Canada today to pass the buck, the distinguished soldier said. "We, the people are in command. We can elect leaders of Parliament and we can make the choice. But do we make the choice? Responsibility rests on the individual! We can't get away from that. It is for that reason, I do, Canada will come to be a true country."

He expressed the wish that Belleville was not like a great many other cities in Canada, so far as organization is concerned. "In these centres," he said, "especially formed committees think about post-war plans, but there is no evidence of individuals getting together and saying 'I will employ four or five'. Responsibility must be assisted by individual effort with every man and woman saying 'I'll do my share.' That is the only way."

Col. Alley was introduced by Lt. Col. Alley was introduced by Lt. Col. Alley was introduced by Lt. who was in the chair while Frank Wannamaker was the accompanist of the gathered veterans.

An excellent supper dinner was provided by Wallace Lefebvre's committee. Tables were decorated by Sinny and Mrs. Bradley with Bill Mavin and Jimmy Cornish as the waiters. While the dinner was being served a splendid ovation for the fine repast provided.

The Toasts

The toast to "Fallen Comrades" was given by Major the Rev. A. Lawrence Vining, M.C., who, in a most gentlemen of all services, who went bravely out to make their own destinies. While the dead will has ceased in the world, their lives in a great measure live on and they carry on. We know of their sacrifices and we owe it to our to greater attainment." Major Payne read the fine words of the late Rudyard Kipling, author of the epitaph, famous paths of the First Great War in the "Recessional" tribute to the glorious dead.

Bugler Bill Legion gave the dartboard banquet hall, lighted by the soft glow of two candles, veterans of the two wars, in memory of their fallen comrades. In the distance the haunting strains of "Last Post" sounded from the trumpet of Bugler Bill Legion gave the low haunting melody of a well-known hymn sounded softly in the shrine. Then the bugler sang the clear vibrant army "reveille" rang out as veterans stood at attention.

In his toast to the City of Belleville Chamber of Commerce manager J. O. Herity said that 36 years ago Belleville sent its quota of the "retired farmer" city. "We set out to make it an industrial centre and we have succeeded to a great extent. We have succeeded in the fact that the industrial output of the city's factories is now exceeded in value with the annual crop of farm products," he said.

Responding to the toast, Mayor Ellis Fulford said that the city was better or greater than its people. He paid tribute to the Legion for its excellent work in their efforts welcoming home coming war veterans and their families.

"I appreciate the appurtenance of the Legion Branch here," he said, "and I hope the plans for their new building will soon materialize. I am promising the support of the City Council in every way possible.

On the Legion, Mayor Ellis rests the responsibility of re-establishment of returned veterans. "I know you will fulfil your obligations along these lines."

He visualized Belleville as a great industrial centre 20 years from now, with its Riverside Drive, and Quickie's Island Park. A great building program had been undertaken by selling city property as building lots. The result, more homes, more industries, more payrolls.

Former Squadron Leader, the Rev. Grant Spalding was a guest at the head table.

The War Today—

Say Hitler Hopes for Immunity By Threatening Lives of Hostages

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(AP War Analyst)

Hitler's axe-in-the-hole to prevent the Allies from punishing him and his captains for war-guilt is reported to be the lives of high personages whom he is holding as hostages.

The dictator's prisoners include King Leopold of the Belgians, aged Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, Vichy dum who headed the Vichy government of France until the Allied invasion, and Eduard Daladier, former premier of France. It's said the head Nazi regards as a last resort to threaten to kill these men — and likely others — unless he and his aides are granted immunity. There is no reason to doubt that he's capable of carrying out such a scheme.

This poses the question of whether the United Nations would let a threat like that stand between them and one of the prime objectives of the war — punishment of those who started the conflict and committed some of the most horrible atrocities known to history. Failure to avenge war-guilt in the First Great War certainly affected encouragement to fresh aggression.

The Allies haven't passed any pronouncement regarding such a contingency, but I think we must assume that they won't bargain on any basis of that sort. They aren't likely to sacrifice the lives of a host of their finest manhood to win this war, and then permit Hitler an easy escape in which a few lives are threatened.

When you get that idea down in black and white it is seen cold-blooded — certainly it would create a short-lying problem. But there are two angles which may help to alleviate the situation. Failure to meet this difficulty squarely might of course solve other Hun in days to come to start another war which would take the lives of more and grandsons a few years hence.

We mustn't forget that Mussolini got his encouragement to invade Ethiopia in 1936 from Hitler's dream of Mandchuria. The League of Nations fumed and sputtered over the day Mussolini got away with it, anything. The success of Japan and Italy in successfully punishing condoned Hitler who proceeded to tear up the Treaty of Versailles, grab Austria and bullied Europe into other concessions. Then having got clean away with all this, he perpetrated the most ghastly war of all time.

Punishment of war-guilt is essential for the security of the world and if the carrying out of retribution presents unusual problems, we can't run away from them.

Normal Diplomatic Relations Resumed With Argentina

Washington, April 10 — (AP) — Normal diplomatic relations will be resumed between the United States and Argentina at noon today.

The decision was announced by Great Britain, France, Canada, The Netherlands, and Latin American countries including Uruguay, Brazil, Colombia, Peru and Venezuela.

The action was announced by State Secretary Stettinius who said it was taken in consultation with the 19 other American republics represented at the recent Inter-American conference at Mexico City.

It follows a declaration of war by Argentina against Axis countries and her adherence to the resolutions adopted by the chief of conference March 27 and other decisions reached by the conference.

Mr. Stettinius declined to discuss whether Argentina would be invited or would ask for United Nations membership, whether that subject had been discussed with Soviet Russia which has been highly critical of this Argentine government or whether Argentina's neutrality would participate in the San Francisco conference on an international organization.

BIG ALASKAN INDUSTRY

Before the war, the seal fur industry of the Pribilof Islands of Alaska maintained an annual production worth two to three million dollars.

REGAIN ART WORKS

Dr. William R. Valentiner, above, new director of the Detroit Institute of Museum, who declared that one painting worth a million dollars and at least three worth half a million each were probably among the art treasures capturing by the Allies in Germany. Cited as a possible American choice for appraising of the fabulous art collection found in a cave, Dr. Valentiner said he had never left the country but the government but "would be happy to be sent on such a mission."

Efficiency and Devotion to Duty Example Set by Veterans Guard

"The Guard has done a magnificent job. Over all terrains of the Atlantic coast as far south as British Guiana and on the Pacific coast, they have been on duty. They have been the only infantry available for the defence of Canada for five years, they held the middle line of country with a complement of 30,000 men, and they have done it well."

Beyond all praise."

This was a distinct gleam of pride in the eye of Colonel H. R. Alley, O.B.E., Commanding Officer of the Veterans Guard of Canada, when he addressed a meeting of the majority in detail of the 1st Group by the elderly gentleman, who has guard who disbanded in many quarters to the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Legion at the Vimy memorial dinner. Mr. Alley, who is now in command of the Veterans Guard, was his first group of veterans to be addressed since he left Montreal to assume his new duties. Lieut. Col. Alley stated that Lieut. Col. Jack Robertson, M.C., Montreal, Regimental Sergeant Major of the Royal Canadian Regiment, had been awarded the Military Medal for his gallantry in action at the battle of the Hitler Line. Mr. Alley said that Col. Robertson's wife and wives and families to look after. However, the wives carried on, ran the farms, shops, or businesses, looked after the children and did a splendid job.

"And there has been no Veterans Guard, I do not know what the Canadian Army would have done," Col. Alley stated.

Twenty years ago when we were under canvas in Alberta we had many members of Canadian regiments of war sent us. There was little or no accommodation. We were in tents in 30 below zero weather with no stoves except what we made ourselves. We were glad to do what we got from the scrub. Water was brought from the river and the young troops who quit cold, but not one veteran of the Great War went without leave. They wouldn't quit.

"They were called 'elderly gentlemen' in some quarters. My idea of a service gentleman is one who has served for what he gives and not for what he can get. The Guard gave from its heart and if ever there was an example of devotion to duty that is it. I'm frightfully proud of them."

District Income Tax Collections Almost 11 Millions in 1944

Collections from the four districts of Hastings, Prince Edward, Northumberland and Peterborough counties administered by the Belleville District Income Tax Office of the Department of National Revenue, Income Tax, increased from $8,600,000 in 1939 to $10,976,000 in 1944, Inspector Reid of Belleville told the Rotary Club here on Monday.

In 1886, he added, there were 1,000 taxpayers in the district, and in 1942 this number had increased to 36,000.

Collections in 1940 were $878,000 over $680,000 of the year previous. In 1941 they were $1,000,000 and $1,270,000; and in 1943 the total collected was $10,976,000.

In fact, Inspector Reid stated, the office here has gone from one of the smallest in 1940 when that was paid in in collections between 1935 and 1940.

A few more concessions to the taxpayer are being made in this year's taxation, Inspector Reid urged the co-operation of all. He stated that standard deductions of $1,000 were granted he knew nothing from an income tax point of view.

The speaker was introduced by Notarian John Deacon with club president Lorne Dowdall, Secretary Art Francis. President Pinkston presided.

City Council to Decide Later On Installation of Meters To Ease Traffic, Parking Jams

Council members will decide at their next committee meeting - a week from tonight - whether parking meters will be installed in this city as a measure to ease traffic and parking conditions on Belleville's main streets.

This was the decision met with Monday evening during the regular council meeting after operation of the meters had been explained by two representatives of the - Mi-Co Meter Company - and following a two-hour verbal discussion into which council members and the few Front Street merchants present took part.

Invited to the city by council to explain the operation of parking meters, Mr. Alfred Miller, general manager for the above company indicated they are being successfully used in 500 American cities of varied sizes. Only one city in Canada, Sudbury, is at present using parking meters, although it was indicated several are now seeking installation.

Tells of Benefits of Meters.

Indicating that he would rather answer questions than speak, generally, Mr. Miller told council members and merchants that parking meters had proven a benefit to merchants in cities where they had been installed. He said they encourage a much greater turnover of customers, double parking had all but been eliminated owing to more vacant parking spaces being available.

According to recommended installation the meters are placed eighteen inches from the curb to prevent damage by parking vehicles and are operated by the usual standards for easing reading by police officers. Operation is by simply depositing a cent coin gives parking privilege for 12 minutes with additional coins for increases of time up to 60 minutes. When time elapses for which coins have been deposited a red violation signal shows and checking officers are notified by readily see what motorists have overstayed their time.

Profit Motive Not Favored.

Although parking meters in Watertown, N. Y., last year returned that city $30,000, it was not recommended by company officials that they be installed for profit. Rather, it was stated, they should be regarded as a regulatory measure assisting the police to enforce city parking by-laws. Moreover they were not being taxed, but rather were paying for a service.

Merchants present at the meeting were a bit skeptical of the value of the meters as they feared customers may become insulted by having to pay for parking privileges while doing their shopping. Also it was pointed out that rural residents coming to the city intent on staying the day and free parking facilities provid have to be provided for these people.

Police Chief Walter Probert was interested in how the meters would eliminate double parking as was stated by the company representative. He doubted if Belleville merchants would be agreeable to parking zoning for delivery of goods but promised if the meters were installed the city would receive the full co-operation of the police department. He also wanted to know if the meters were being considered as a measure to improve traffic conditions or if they were being considered as a revenue producer.

On Trial Bases.

According to the customary schedule of installation the meters are installed on a trial basis for one year with 75 percent of the revenue handed over to the company. At the end of the year the meters could be either taken out at no cost to the city, or if it was decided to purchase, the company was ready collected by the company would go on the purchase price, in the seven years meters paid for themselves in about 14 months. Cost price is $40 each with parts provided for servicing three meters in every 100 purchased.

Mayor Pulswell regretted the lack of interest in the meeting on the part of merchants and the chamber of Commerce members who had been invited. It was his personal opinion that the meters would expedite traffic and he thought their installation would indicate Belleville's progressiveness.

Chairman of the Industrial Commission, Ex - Alderman Robert Pringle thought the meter company was being very fair in permitting installation as an experiment and he said he would like to see them installed in this city.

Several aldermen, including Lorne McDougall, Ted Pollwell and Chas. Hyde, spoke in favor of the plan with Alderman Clapp assuring the meters would be an asset to the merchants. If successful they could be left installed with the revenue collected earmarked to assist in construction of the Riverside Drive. Ex-Mayor Ponton stated the council was heading for trouble: that if was time the council started giving something to the citizens rather than taking away. He would rather see the Riverside Drive started, he said.

After expressing appreciation to the meter company officials for coming to the city to explain the operation of their product, council decided the matter of installing the meters would be decided at the next committee meeting.

Urges Higher Penalty for Dogs at Large

City Poundkeeper Thomas Thorne appeared before council asking that his remuneration for services rendered the city be increased. He was still receiving $480 yearly, the original salary when there were only 300 dogs in the city. Now there are over 800 he said.

In reference to the current dog nuisance, Mr. Thorne stated that in his opinion the time for dogs running at large should be increased. If dogs (especially welsh) better look after their dogs. He was asked to advise the council in writing what is needed to help remedy the situation.

Chairman of Market and City Property, Alderman Chas. Hyde was advised to have tenders asking prices on the painting of the council chamber and other rooms in the city hall, as well as to ascertain prices for installation of fluorescent lighting in the council committee rooms, and also the council chamber.

The city market will also be painted with the committee's chairman asked to get prices for the work. Decision to clean up the farmers' market room came as a result of a recommendation from Dr. Chas. Hanley, chairman of the Board of Health, who was present at the meeting.

Victory Bond Purchase By City Employees.

The city will finance Victory Bonds purchased by city employees in the 5th Victory Loan, it was decided, when the offer of Mr. Ed. Carthy for a new garage in the west end on Walbridge Road was accepted. Four months to pay with cash. Clapp, with Dr. J. Marshall, the city engineer and chairman of public works, dissenting. Ald. Clapp, Mr. Scott added will deal with the matter of a sewer connection on North Front Street hill, the estimated cost of which is $4,000.

New C.N.R. Appointment

H. A. DIXON

H. WHEELWRIGHT

Shirly Temple And Sgt. J.G. Agar Are Engaged

Hollywood, April 10 — (AP) — Shirley Temple Shabel a diamond ring with a stone as large as a mothers almond at her third fiance, Sgt. hand, yesterday and Sgt. John George Agar of the United States Army Air Forces knew what it was like to be engaged to a grown-up millionaire's baby.

The 34-year-old sergeant, handsome, blond son of a wealthy Beverly Hills widow, found out about fame when the engagement became public property last night when a conference in the Temple mansion in west los Angeles.

Agar, six-foot-two-inch physical instructor at March Field, Calif., posed under Shirley's guidance in his first, front-line appearance and his repeated comment was:

"I'll be dogoned."

Between poses Jack confided that he had never been particularly interested in Shirley as a screen personality. "I guess," he said, "I just liked her from the first." "The first" was a party at Zsau Zsau Gabor's house next door to Shirley about two years ago.

What attracted Shirley to Jack out of her thousands of would-be swains? Shirley supplied the answer: "His sincerity."

Marriage? "Not for two years, maybe three," said Shirley. Mrs. Temple nodded agreement. Attaches from Shirley's studio, anxious about her box office attraction, sighed with relief.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, April 10 — (CP) — Blinded by smoke and choked by acrid fumes when his Lancaster caught fire over enemy territory, P/O. W. Dalyluk of Melville, Man., clung grimly to the control and kept the aircraft level while other members of the crew took the plunge. For 20 minutes.

P/L Sgt. C. G. Robinson, wireless operator from Toronto, and Sgt. J. E. Bridger, English mid-upper gunner who was awarded the D.F.M. as the D.F.M., seized the fire extinguisher and finally got the blaze under control though the fuselage still was smoking when it landed in southern England.

Hardly able to read his instruments for smoke and sparks, the navigator from Hamilton, Ont., carried on throughout the dangerous incident.

There's a blue booter in the right breast pocket of F/L Sgt. W. J. Tinney (3510 Fourth Ave.-W.) Vancouver, these days. He's flying over Germany.

You couldn't convince Tinney that the booties of his six-month-old son Billy brought him luck. After all he's made more than 30 trips over fiercely-defended enemy territory without a night-fighter attack or serious flak damage.

Tinney's pilot is F/L Lt. A. E. Jung, Dahlden-born Chinese of Vancouver and Victoria (72a Cranmore St.).

The generosity of members of an R.C.A.F. transport squadron in Burma has brought recognition from fighting troops and army authorities on the Mandalay Front.

It started when aircrew returning from supply trips to frontline areas reported that many of the troops they encountered hadn't seen a cigarette for months. Squadron members took up a collection and a drive was organized by F/L. L. R. E. McCartney, adjutant from (3726 Rockbay Ave.) Victoria, and W.O. Jim Cooper, M.B.E. of (486 Lewis St.), Ottawa.

In the first two days the Canadians dropped more than 30,000 cigarets into the collection boxes. Supplies go to the front regularly.

Recently a high army officer wrote the squadron C. O., Wing Comdr. Ralph Gordon of Robsart, Sask., and in files over 4,000 paragraphs have contributed a combined total of 400 years. Officers now are flying forward for specific army units. I think this generous action has a lot to do with it," he wrote.

"It is typical of this squadron and its keen, happy spirit and of the best record for freight lifted."

With Canada's Naturalists

Toronto, April 10 (CP)—An albino robin, albino in the sense it's always news, but only partly so in color or metabolism, the opposite of albinism, reported.

Melanism is an abnormal development of black or dark pigments in the skin, hair and eyes of humans, or in the skin, hair or plumage of a bird or animal.

Dr. A. E. Allin of Port William, Ont., who recently reported an albino hare trout seen in Lake Superior, now reports three cases of black groundhogs seen in the Thunder Bay district. Naturalists consider a brunette groundhog as startling as a blond crow.

Although most animal life is said to be color-blind, there are exceptions. American scientists recently conducting recent experiments found that the English sparrow and some varieties of finch are highly suspicious of brightly colored seeds. Agricultural authorities are hopeful that this information may eventually prove of use to farmers who are suffering from feathered marauders during planting seasons. Seeds dyed in colors offensive to birds would protect the young crop.

Farm losses caused by insects in North America have been estimated to total $1,500,000,000 annually and that is only part of the bill run up by these pests. Flies compet us to spend $30,000,000 a year on screens. Termites weaken our homes. Mosquitoes torment us and carry malaria. Beetles and aphids strip the foliage off our trees. Moths destroy our clothing. Bird lovers point to these statistics as justification for their efforts.

But there is yet another side to the story. Of the 800,000 insect species known to man, only a few hundreds are his enemies. Honey-bees, ants and ladybirds help insects, but their most important service is probably that bearing of pollen from bloom to bloom with the consequent fertilization of plant life. And insects even provide food directly to humanitize in some parts of the world. White ants, properly cooked and sprinkled form a delicacy. Australian natives as "shrimps of the earth" and grasshoppers are a favorite dish in some parts of China.

When an exploring bee discovers a nectar-rich bouquet, he takes all the facts bold and makes for the hive, shortly myriads of bees arrive on the scene. Sir Arthur Thomson, University of Aberdeen, explains this phenomenon. When a bee arrives at the hive with nectar, he executes a "round dance" in the midst of many workers in the hive so that they fresh out to find nectar for themselves. Before long even the hive they sniff aswend the dance. Then they start out satisfactory clue to lead them to the source of supply.

The honey-comb is not the only product of insects serving man. The insect and animal world. Some ants and birds catch aphids. Pelican, sewer and wasps feast in hords and pests are famous for their by-forms thing. The beaker goes, very with hunting signals, is relieved from time to time by an assistant among ants capture and train aphids. Hawaii's Big Island beekeeper makes in turn attack in force against the ants. The leaf-cutter is a regular farmer, carefully cultivating a fungus to feed his family. Chinese, Japanese and other species of mammoney live in colonies and rear and Chin when in plentiful supply.

Target Priority

American troops entering Krefeld-Uerdingen are reported to have been surprised and chagrined to find some German factories in the area practically untouched by Allied air bombing.

It is a misconception that, vast as the Allied air-blits has been, it has been complete. If it had been the war would probably have been over. The fact is that at no time have the R.A.F., the R.C.A.F. or the U.S.A.A.F. had enough planes to make their destruction of Germany total.

They have had to select the most vital targets and give them priority, leaving the less vital ones for future raids. The priorities are agreed upon jointly by British and American experts. And even those that have been smashed have, in many cases, been repairable long before the ingenuity by the Germans. A good deal of the work of the Allied airmen has been rather like mowing the lawn.

The factories mentioned in the particular case reported from Uerdingen happened to be low priority targets. It is less profitable to bomb factories producing railroad steels and uninished articles, and much more profitable to bomb the finished steel plants or plants producing finished articles. The chemical plants referred to were producing only the less vital chemicals, and there are better chemical targets in other places.

It is important to note that neither the R.A.F., R.C.A.F. nor the U.S.A.A.F. has made many claims to destruction in the area in question.

What is of chief interest about this report is that it shows that the Germans, as was expected, are being clever and have wasted no time in using the undamaged state of some factories as a means of sowing discord between Britain and America. Already the explanation has been spread about the company owning one of the plants has six English directors on the Board. It is probable that when British troops came across similar conditions they will learn that American directors are on the Board. The planting of rumors of this kind has been anticipated, and this is the first actual published example.

The experts who decide the priorities and the British and American Air Commanders-in-Chief have unquestionably ignored the factor of ownership. Many factories in Europe with British and American capital have been high on the priority list and have been duly destroyed by British and American bombers.

In Vienna

In Vienna, the Russian soldiers are fighting the Nazis and are wresting it from the Germans.

It was in Austria that Hitler started his confiscation of the territory of his neighbors. There he formed what he called an Anchluss with Austria but to those outside the Nazi ring it meant he just bludgeoned Austria to make it a part of Germany.

Time has brought its changes with tragic import for the treacherous Fuehrer and his hold over Germany and the overrun lands of Europe has gone. Nevertheless he can enforce his will in Germany today is doubtful but there are reports that there is practically no central authority, so badly is Nazism facing in the final round of the Second Great War. Allied bombers are marvellously effective and is chewing up the strength of the Third Reich in its broad sweeps, slicing and carving up the German forces. West Gallagher, correspondent, gives a hint of the way in which the Allies are overcoming the Hun. He says the command of Major-General Isaac D. White Allied Air Forces "overran 130 German hospitals filled with Germans wounded in the fruit of six years of war" in Europe. This loss of manpower is one of the reasons for the weakness of German opposition to the armies of the United Nations which are dashing through Germany east and west.

What Hitler did with Austria is a symbol of what he has been to the world, an arch criminal, a selfish tyrant, seeking for opportunity for power and for use of his bitter hatred of everything that is not vandal in its nature.

Hitler was born in Austria. He turned German as he saw a way to power. His "Anschluss" with Austria was the typical act of a bully and traitor for he seized Austria for the first of his conquests.

Now after seven years he has lost his grip all over, even in Austria, where the Russians, whom he has made the Germans fear most, are fighting in Vienna streets against his Nazi soldiery.

German Youth Gone Mad

One of the most striking proofs of the manner in which false education and false morality can deal with the young is seen in the news story which appeared in Monday's editions telling how youthful Germans, product of Hitlerism and Nazism, with its infidelity and its callous hatred of what is decent, "are more vicious and worse than even the S.S. troops. "The S. S. has some sense but these Hitler youth are absolutely mad." Those are the words of a commander of a French-speaking battalion which fought at Zutphen in Holland.

These young Germans are those that Hitler trained in lack of morality, and in all the criminality in which the mind of Hitler revels.

Like criminals and madmen these Hitler youths and boys are destroying themselves. They have the fanaticism of evil for life holds no charm and promise for such semi-demons as these de-moralised young Germans have turned out to be.

It is this generation of Nazi youth and boyhood which will have to be reckoned with in the post-war era—how to bring them to a sense of the moral order of the world. Something major in its operation will have to be achieved to handle these young gangsters effectively in post-war Germany.

Ludendorff and Hitler

(New York Times)

When General Ludendorff realized after Aug. 8, 1918, that Germany had lost the last war he took the position that the war must be ended because further resistance would be an irresponsible gamble for which the fate of the German people was too high a stake. Hitler, on the other hand, is continuing the war far beyond the points at which Ludendorff gave up, in the hope, as he said in his last speech, that the Allies will in the end "grow tired and break up."

What most Germans must know, as even Goebbels indicates in his speech, is that there is not even a gambler's chance of that, wherefore Goebbels admits that the war is past its climax, and merely threatens a new furious before a sudden end.

More and more Germans must also know from experience now what any delay of that end means to them and to the nation. They must know that every day that the war continues means only more death, more destruction, more hunger, more disease and epidemics for them. And not merely from Allied war actions alone, but from Hitler's "Nero" decree of March 19 and the Nazis' scorched-earth policy, which abandons populations in the ruined cities and robs them of their last belongings. True, the prolongation of the war entails sacrifices for the Allies, but while it increases the cost of their victory, it also increases far more heavily the cost of German defeat. In that light, large groups of Germans, including elements of the army, may come to regard the prolongation of the war as a crime, and those responsible for it as criminals. Hitler is at last revealing himself even to some German people as Germany's worst enemy. If that realization becomes general the end should be at hand in a different kind of furioso than Goebbels ever dreamed of in his propaganda.

The happiness of your life depends upon the quality of your thoughts, therefore guard accordingly; and take care that you entertain no notions unsuitable to virtue and reasonable nature.—Emperor Marcus Antoninus.

FREEDOM'S COUNTRY

They know who walk the streets after—
Those boys of ours, who've fought for the—
How good the joys of freedom are.

How very precious—liberty!
They know—for on the streets they tread
They've looked on children begging bread.

They've looked on mothers pale and thin
And hungry, desperate and cold,
Hands out, some trifling aid to win.
They've looked on starving people, old,
And houses into rubble blown.
And sights our land has never known.

They've heard uncounted tales of woe—
Far worse than those by writers penned.
Oh, all too well they've come to know
How deep in vileness tyrants end;
How pitiful and mean the state
Of people ruled by fear and hate.

God's country ours! Where children play
And laugh and learn to dance and sing;
Where fear and want don't spoil a day;
Where Hunger's not a common thing;
Good land of church and school and cars,
Where all the joys of freedom are!

Rugged Political Debate Develops In British House

By James F. King

London, April 10 —(AP)— A rugged political debate developed on Monday in the House of Commons as the cabinet, at odds over the state of Britain's preparedness, took up and the treatment of post-war issues.

Brendan Bracken, Minister of Information and a Conservative, replied "Marxism" to Labor Minister Shinwell's speech in which he said he would mean a "sort of totalitarian state."

Mr. Bracken also assailed attempts to blame the Conservative party for pre-war unpreparedness.

"Mr. Bevin denounced the Conservatives for not preparing the country that it was heading for war," Mr. Bracken told a luncheon of the Bow Group, Conservative study group. "They served in good company. In March, 1937, Mr. Bevin wrote: 'Our nation is organizing for a war that may be forced upon it.' That was not the monopoly of Conservatives.

"If Mr. Churchill had been listened to, this country might have been saved from much misery and destruction."

Attacks Labor Program

Mr. Bracken attacked the Labor program calling for sweeping nationalization of some industries, and declared:

"When the Socialists suggest Britain should be run by the state all monopolies, government directors, of industrial boards, all banks, fuel and power, neither Conservatives nor Liberals can agree with them on party affiliations will follow them.

"Surely the government has enough to do without meddling directly in the management of the trades and industries.

"The Conservatives accept the sort of totalitarian state desired by the Socialists.

"Instead of messing about with nationalization schemes which must inevitably produce confusion, not to say chaos, the whole production drive of this country should be geared to provide our people with the homes, the furniture and all the goods they so greatly desire."

Mighty Bombardment by Fleet Opens Invasion of Okinawa Is..

By ERNIE PYLE

Okinawa —(by Navy radio)— An hour and a half before H-Hour at Okinawa, our vast navy fleet began its first crushing bombardment of the day with its big guns. They had been at it for a week, but this was a deliberate, all-out effort that hadn't been approached before.

The first thing we knew, things were ghastly. Great sheets of flame would shoot out from the battleships' gray brownish smoke would pent up in a huge cloud, then the sound of sound and concussion would carry across the water and hit you with a thump. Hundreds and hundreds of guns were blasting.

Next came the smoke from a battleship—we would come out in a smoke ring, an enormous ring, 2 or 3 feet across, and float upward with perfect symmetry.

Then came our carrier planes, diving on the beaches. And torpedo planes carrying bombs and necessities that spread deep destruction.

Smoke and dust rose up from the shore, thousands of feet high, until finally the whole island was completely veiled.

Bombs and strafing machine guns and roaring engines mingled into the fantastic sound of the bombardment and seemed to drown out all existence.

The shelling concussion set up vibrations in the air — a sort of shake — which pained your ears and pounded upon you as though some Almighty were beating you with invisible drumsticks.

During all this time the waves were flattened and were forming up behind us.

The whole vast armada of movement, Dispatch and control boats and small craft were darting to and fro, giving quick forward to their unloading areas.

Motor torpedo boats dashed around as guides. Even the destroyers moved majestically with the fleet as they closed up for the final assault on the beaches.

From our little control ship and the scores like it, were sent a constant flow of orders, advised, hurried up, or slowed down.

We were up at 4 for 3:30. By 5 a.m. directions were being radioed to the various ships to see to it to form up waves 7 and 2, to hurry up, to get things moving.

Our first wave consisted solely of heavy guns on amphibious tanks which were to be the ones to blast out the pillboxes on the beach. Our own ship behind came in the second wave — the first wave of our foot troops.

After that, waves came at about 10-minute intervals. Wave 6 was on its way. Wave 7 was 1 over the beach. Wave 2 was moving up from the rear to get to the beach. That's the way it went.

We were on the control boat about an hour. I felt miserable and sick. Any sea weight was still on my heart. There's nothing romantic about a bombardment. It's just one horror from now you may be dead. And the fury of our bombardment was in itself horrifying.

Some officers now came aboard. They weren't going ashore until afternoon. They wanted to talk. I simply couldn't carry on a conversation. I just couldn't talk.

I went below to use an civilized toilet for the last time in many days. I got a drink of water, though I wasn't thirsty. Then one sailor came up and introduced himself and said he was from Indiana. Then a knot of sailors gathered around and talked.

One sailor with black, close-cropped hair and glasses offered me his candy bar. I didn't have the wit to put down his name.

I told him I didn't smoke cigars, but I would take one to my dad. The mental colonel who practically lives on cigars, he said, would love one of them.

Forty minutes later the sailor came up with five more cigars to give to the colonel. They started to melt in my hands, cigarettes and cookies, but I told them I already had plenty.

Word came by radio that waves 1 and 2 were meeting with much opposition and there were no mines on the beaches. So far so good.

We looked at the shore through binoculars. We saw our own tanks moving across the fields, and the infantry in columns of twos, single island, standing upright. There were a few tanks moving in the water at the beach, but we couldn't make out any real fire coming from the island.

It was all very indefinite and yet very exciting. Then the colonel began to lift. I wasn't really conscious of it, but I suddenly began talking more easily with the sailors, and somehow the feeling gradually took hold of me that we were going to be spared. The 7th wave was to pick up me as it came by. I didn't even see it approaching.

Suddenly they called by name and said the boats were alongside.

I grabbed my pack and ran to the side. I'm glad they came suddenly like that. The sailors should not have to stop to say goodbye to us off. We were on our way.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

WHAT NOT TO DO FOR RHEUMATS

One day I said no one knows what "chronic rheumatism" means, that is the term is applied to all kinds of pains, aches or injury that causes soreness, pain or impaired movement. I told you I was sure that any one who pretends to know of such a thing as "rheumatism" is the end of a remedy or cure for it deserves himself or more likely his murderer.

Having thus stipulated that there is no such ailment as "chronic rheumatism," I turn right around, as you might say, to tell you more about it, and invite everybody who suffers to send a stamped self-addressed envelope and ask for the pamphlet Calcium and Rheumatism.

But that is not all inconsistent as it may appear at first glance. You will find that the pamphlet begins with this avowal: "Certainly I do not believe, or imply that calcium will cure any ill called rheumatism." But in the pamphlet I tell just what amount of calcium, phosphorus and vitamin D I would take daily to supplement my diet and I had any such trouble as you call rheumatism, and I am not inconsistent. It may do no good but I believe it can do no harm, that's all.

From past experience in trying to educate multitudeheads who in their own way know their ailments to genuine rheumatism in spite of anything I have ever said to them, all, how could I understand about it? If I had never had rheumatism myself? I had inclined to think so when I bring up the relation of calcium, so many of my multitudeheads ascribe their conditions to the cold, damp, changeable weather, and maybe a quotation from Dr. Bernard S. Oscarsy will serve the purpose and leave me in unexpected safety here on the home front. Discussing the dangers in the treatment of arthritis and allied conditions (J. A. M. A. Feb. 17, '45) Dr. Comroe said:

"Another common mistake is the haphazard application of rheumatoid arthritis is to advise the patient to give up his job, sell his belongings and move to the southwestern part of the United States in the hope that he may be miraculously and suddenly cured of this ailment. Unfortunately such does not occur. In most cases change in climate alone will usually not be of permanent benefit. Holbrook has found that chronic arthritis may continue as a sad and crippling disease even in the Arizona desert. Hench has advised that most patients with rheumatoid arthritis should build their arthritis at home and should not be encouraged to endanger their economic status or disrupt their social ties in a vain attempt to find a climate that cures.

I hope readers will not be, more concerned by the word "rheumatoid arthritis" than I am. As nearly as I can learn "rheumatoid" means resembling rheumatism. But whether how neatly we substitute the term for plain rheumatism it is still phony — I mean, euphony.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Gray Hair

Have you a pamphlet on gray hair?

(Mrs. W. B).

Answer — Premature graying of the hair is caused by the body. In booklet "The Hair and Scalp," mailed on request if you inclose ten cents and a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Oil for the Hands

I have just made some hands made of lanoline and castor oil, hair and hands. They smell horrible. Are they dreadfully chapped and sore, from my work which requires handling raw potatoes. It has brought wonderful relief.

(Mrs. K. M. C.)

Answer — Thank you, Ma'am. Men or women whose work is hard on the hands, should keep on hand a supply of the mixture — some lanoline, castor oil (the best, raw pancid) castor oil worked into a smooth cream. Before beginning work rub the hands thoroughly. Afterthoughly, and apply just enough of the cream to work the hands freely without making them too greasy. Repeat this after the work is done.

Urine Stops Flowing

Ever since I was twelve years old I have suffered the embarrassment of perspiring hands.

(H. B.)

Answer — Try the recipe given in pamphlet on "Excessive Sweating" — the type of sweating. Send stamped self addressed envelope — but you must ask for it — a clipping of this.

GOOSE HANGS HIGH

"The goose hangs high" is an American proverbial saying or observation.

It means "all's well," "everything promises success," or "the prospects are bright."

Most etymologists are inclined to regard it as a corruption of the word "gander," meaning high. The thought back of this notion is that in fine weather the gander is likely to commit the characteristic act which he honks, honks and honks. Hence honk high it is a sign of fair weather and good prospects. There is no evidence that "honks" was used in the expression before "hangs" and the origin of the word in question is pure conjecture.

The saying may have originated in connection with the tournaments, held in many parts of the South since Colonial times.

In these tournaments rings are suspended some distance apart and the gallant knights armed with long lances and mounted on gaily capar- a noble goose."

Three Members of King Government and Others Said Not in Running

By R. K. CARNEGIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 10 — (CP) — Dissolving of parliament — probably late this week — will mark the voluntary end of the political trail for many prominent members of the House of Commons, some of whom have filled vital roles in the governing of Canada in peace and in war.

Three Cabinet ministers are among those who have announced they will not stand for re-election. Of the others who are dropping from the political scene, some are the House's most forceful debaters, men who have championed their causes in the Commons for many years.

3 Cabinet Members Retire

The three members of the government dropping out are Resources Minister Crerar, State Secretary McCarthy and Navy Minister Macdonald. A former minister, Col. J. L. Ralston, also will not seek re-election to his Prince Edward Island seat.

Others who will not run again are G. G. McGeer (L—Vancouver-Burrard), Arthur G. Slaght (L—Parry Sound), A. W. Roebuck (L—Toronto-Trinity), W. A. Fraser (L—Northumberland), W. E. Kelly (PC — Kootenay W.), and A. W. Neill (Ind. — Comox-Alberni). W. H. Taylor (L — Norfolk) who was chief government whip was one of the most important men in the Commons, will not run.

Hon. R. B. Hanson (PC — York Sunbury), former opposition leader in the House, has frequently stated he hopes to drop out because of indifferent health but has not finally decided. Others who still have the matter under consideration are W. H. Moore (Ontario) and Hon. H.-A. Bruce (PC — Toronto Parkdale).

The next House of Commons will not be the same with so many of the men who have played important parts in the debates these many years no longer there.

NEW FARM LOANS mean MORE city Jobs

All Canadians today are thinking about jobs after the war for themselves and the men now overseas. Something is being done about it—many things! One of them is the new Farm Improvement Loans Act. It will mean a lot to you, even if you live in the city.

How? Because this new act sets up machinery by which farmers can now get bank loans of a special type to modernize their farm with many things made in cities and towns.

That is not all. When farmers get new equipment and improve their farms to make them more efficient, they will raise more foodstuffs. This means more work, jobs and wages for workers engaged in industry and transportation.

It means more goods for export, too...You see how the circles widen and widen until there are better markets for everybody. So everybody will benefit from these new loans which the banks are now empowered to make to farmers!

Donovan, became the bride of Cpl. Stanley Vincent Amo, R.C.A.F., Vancouver, BC., son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Amo. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson united the young couple in marriage.

Mrs. James Grant presided at the console of the organ, and Mrs. Gerald Clapp delightfully rendered "Ave Maria" and "Because".

Seasonal Routine for Beauty

Ruth Warrick uses a wash cloth and a bland soap to cleanse her face

By HELEN FOLLETT

SUDDEN. climatic changes may cause the complexion to kick up a fuss. We get them in early spring sometimes. It is nice and sunny and we fancy we hear birds singing and buds bursting and along comes a left-over winter wind that is shortly chased away by a summer zephyr. It blows hot and blows cold and pretty soon you are sneezing and blowing your nose. The nose takes on a fiery surface, cheeks go pale, and then what? A session with the jar of massage cream, if you would save your face.

Harsh winds and strong sunlight create the same kind of havoc; they dry and flay the flesh. The human hide is a delicate structure and needs care. It is constantly undergoing a state of renewal and decay, dead cells flaking away, new ones forming. It stands to reason that regular lubricating, together with gentle massage, will prove comforting.

Every night, wash the face thoroughly with a bland, pure soap, see to it that every bit of the suds is rinsed away. All soaps even the best, do not agree with all skins. If your face feels drawn and starched, make a change. If a cold water rinse follows the warm one, it will have a stimulating effect upon the blood streams, but, if you are going to use a cream ,dispense with the chilly dousing.

Use of Powder

Powder is a protective agent, a sort of weather proofing against cold winds and blazing sunlight. If the skin is dry, find a powder with an oily base; if the skin is oily, select a light, fluffy calcimine.

Use a cream for the removal of make-up. Cream the eyebrows, the lips and the ear lobes. Rub the creamy leavings into your hands. Hands are in a bad way at this time of the year. The routine should be done at bedtime. In the morning, just dash cold water on your face.

Mr., Mrs. Lazenby Wed 25 Years

Proudly celebrating twenty-five years of married life were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lazenby, 11 Murney St., on Sunday, April the eighth. The day was highlighted by a surprise celebration in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Lazenby arranged by three of the original attendants at the wedding who had come from Kingston, Oshawa and Toronto for the occasion. A very attractive feature of the party was the three-tiered wedding cake presented to the bride and groom of twenty-five years.

Home for the very gay event were WO.1 Wallace Lazenby, R.C.A.F., Rockcliffe, Ottawa, with his wife and family, and Clifford Lazenby from Campbellford, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Lazenby. One son, Jack, is with the R.C.A.F., overseas. Dorothy and Billy are at home. Over the weekend, telegrams, cables, flowers, gifts and messages of congratulations "poured into" the home at 11 Murney Street. Mr. and Mrs. Lazenby were feted by their family, their relatives and friends in town and those from a distance.

Mrs. Lazenby, the former Winnifred Grace Elliott, was married in the year 1920, to Mr. Lazenby in St. James' Church, Kingston, by the late Canon Jones. Originally, Mr. and Mrs. Lazenby both came from England. They moved from Kingston to Belleville in which city they have resided for the past fifteen years.

Bride and Groom Feted by Community

Rawdon—On Friday evening the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dunham, Wellman's, was filled with relatives and friends who had assembled to honor their daughter and husband, who were recently married.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron Seeley were given seats of honor and Rev. T. F. Townsend was master of ceremonies.

Miss Mina Dracup led in a round of community singing with Mrs. Frederick Beckett as accompanist. Miss Doris Pollock gave a reading.

The pastor and his wife sang a duet and Miss Mabel Sharp read a selection.

Mrs. Kenneth Thompkins sang a vocal number and Mrs. Burton Morton contributed a reading. The Misses Marjorie, Patsy and Jean Wallace of Burnbrae, sang a trio with Marjorie playing guitar accompaniment. Miss M. Dracup read the address and the newlyweds were the recipients of a large array of miscellaneous gifts. Bernice and Byron thanked their friends and invited all to visit them in their new home at Bonarlaw where the groom is engaged as cheese maker. The evening closed with refreshments and a social half-hour.

Presentation

On Monday evening, a number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bell to honor their daughter, Mavis and husband, L.-Cpl. B. Krogman.

During the evening Mavis and Burton were seated beneath a large white bell and pink and white tapers. Mrs. T. J. Brown read an address after which Mrs. Maurice Reid and Miss Hazel Greatrix presented the happy couple with a large basket of gifts for which Mavis and Burton expressed their appreciation and invited all to visit them at their home in Toronto.

Refreshments were served and dancing and euchre were much enjoyed during the evening.

BRIDGE STREET CHURCH W.M.S.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Bridge Street United Church held its regular meeting in the church parlors on April 6th. "God so loved the world that He gave His Only-Begotten Son. . . ."were the words used as the Call to Worship by the President, Mrs. R. D. P. Davidson.

After the routine of business, members of Mrs. Hamm's group were in charge of a Wartime Easter program, the theme being, "No man liveth unto himself."

Mrs. N. Montgomery, as leader, read the Easter story from St. Luke's gospel. A discussion on the relation of religion to tragedy followed revealing the fact that suffering from war is caused by man's fumbling efforts to work out his relationships with his fellowman. The answer of religion to suffering may be found in the fellowship of a world-wide church—the Living Water, which Christ offered, being for all races and creeds.

Stories were told of three Chinese-Canadians, Dr. Victoria Cheung, Dr. Philip Chu and Margaret Lee, Reg.N., who became ambassadors from the country of their birth to the country of their ancestors. Glimpses into their lives prove how necessary it is that the barriers of racial prejudice be broken down. Those who sacrifice their lives for Freedom's sake are followers of the Cross and lights to guide our feet in ways of Peace. Mrs. Hamm, Mrs. Davidson and Miss Pitman assisted Mrs. Montgomery throughout the program.

PINE GROVE W.I.

The March meeting of Pine Grove W.I., was held recently at the home of Mrs. C. Marisette with a good number present. The President, Mrs. A. Tanner was in the chair.

Business consisted of bills to be paid, etc. Mrs. J. H. Frederick read a letter from Mrs. Keyes, convener for Home Economics, Belleville Convention Area which included a questionnaire.

Mrs. Rodgers spoke on Township School Area. This was followed by a discussion.

Current events were given by Mrs. Howard Dafoe in the form of a quiz.

Mrs. H. Coulter, Home Economics convener, gave a splendid paper "What a Good Home is Like".

Mrs. Dafoe read a poem "Ten Little Vitamins". This was followed by a vitamin quiz.

Collection $1.25.

Mrs. Searles gave a reading.

Mrs. Rodgers read "The Drama of the Cross", by Bishop Renison.

Refreshments were served.

BEAUTY
By HELEN JAMESON

Soap is the Queen of Cosmetics

It is taken for granted that a girl keeps her face clean, so perhaps we will be forgiven for sermonizing on the subject of complexion renovating. Facial operators say that some of the best-dressed customers come to them with dirty faces, that they are much too casual about complexion scrubbing. Be that as it may it does no harm to tell the good-looks audience that scrupulous cleanliness is important; without it the vitality of the skin is impaired, its functions retarded; circulation may go sluggish, freshness of color departs.

Goodness knows that girls spend plenty of time laying on the make-up. That's all right, too, if the commercial blushes and the gardenia finish are put upon a clean skin surface. But one must get down to bed rock, give the celestial countenance hygienic attention. The atmosphere of every city carries a certain amount of dust that lodges in the pores. During a two-hour shopping spree ungloved hands will become soiled. Hands are scrubbed, but faces often get just a soapy lick and a promise.

Some women fear soap; they need not unless there is an inclination toward excessive dryness, dermatitis or eczema.

If the flesh has an allergy to soap, use a light cleansing cream: remove it to take away surface dust, then apply a little more. Dip a large wash cloth in warm, soapy water, place over the face, moving it about gently. Rinse with warm water, dry, apply more cream-removing it only when the time comes to put on make-up. This combination of suds and cream works successfully on dry skins, keeping them soft and smooth.

If the complexion is inclined to be oily, if blackheads are present, try shaving-soap. Rub it in gently keep adding water until you have a lather. Massage lightly, endeavoring to force the suds into the pores. If you wish, you can apply the soap with a shaving brush.

If cream is to be used after the face washing, use warm water for rinsing; if an astringent is on the beauty schedule, use cold water. Creams are more effective when applied to a warm skin surface than to a cold one.

Have your rousing scrubbing at bedtime. In the morning use cold water to bring coloring.

There is one important don't: don't renew make-up without first cleansing the skin with oil or cream.

GOOD MANNERS

Duties of Flower Girl and Ring Bearer

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—I am planning a church wedding next month. I am to wear a bridal gown, and my attendants are wearing long dresses. My father is to give me in marriage. I am having a maid of honor, three bridesmaids, flower girl, and ring bearer. There is to be a best man only. What is the propert order for the processional?

2.—What are the duties of the flower girl and ring bearer?

3.—What are apropriate gifts for my attendants?

B. R. M.

1.—By "there is to be a best man only", do you mean that there are to be no ushers? If there are to be ushers, they lead the processional, walking two by two. If not, first in the processional would be two bridesmaids, walking together; next, the third bridesmaid, walking alone; next, the maid of honor, walking alone. Next may come the ring bearer and flower girl, walking together; or you may have the flower girl walk alone after the maid of honor; and then the ring bearer, walking alone, preceding you and your father. (The best man does not, of course, take part in the processional; he enters with the bridegroom from the vestry or other room in the front-right of the church.)

2.—The flower girl carries a bouquet of flowers, or a basket of flowers, but most often nowadays she carries an old-fashioned nosegay, or a Colonial bouquet fashioned of circles of tiny flowers, ually in pastel colors.

3.—Very few brides have a ring bearer nowadays. But if you're particularly interested in having one, you may have him (or her) carry a satin cushion with the ring securely held by a thread which the best man can easily break; or it may be held by a pin which is easilly opened. Sometimes the ring reposing on the pillow is a dummy one, the best man carrying the real wedding ring.

3.—Appropriate gifts for your maid of honor and bridesmaids are; bracelet, pin or brooch, necklace, jeweled comb, clip or pair of clips, powder case or vanity-case, pen and pencil set, silver or gold locket, bottle of perfume, decorative perfume bottle, dressing case, corsage ornament, ear-rings, cigarette case, ravelling clock, jewel case, silver or gold key chain, comb-in-case for evening bag, day-purse, evening bag.

A Reply Is Not Necessary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I received a formal invitation to a church wedding. This did not include an invitation to the reception. I was unable to attend this wedding. Was it necessary for me to reply in writing to this invitation for me to offer any apology to the bride for not having been present at the church? (I am acquainted with both the bride and groom, but do not know them intimately.)

C. J.

No, it was not necesary for you to reply to this invitation, for a formal invitation to the church only does not require an answer. And although you would not "apologize to the bride for not having been present at the church, it would be natural, when you chance to meet her, to say that you were so sorry that you had not been able to be present at the ceremony, and to thank her for having invited you.

The Marry Go Round

The Girl He'd Like to Come Home To

Men have always been old-fashioned in their ideas of love, marriage and women. That is one of the eternal verities. In fact, since this war started, men have become more serious about love and more conservative in their romantic ideals than ever.

That is what war does to men—and to many women. It makes other women wild, daring and independent. But, if girls appreciated their luck ,they would do everything in their power to keep men in that tender, impressible, conservative frame of mind.

Most men are naturally as old-fashioned as a spinning-wheel or an iron deer on the front lawn. They will always fall in love with the same qualities in women that their grandfathers fell in love with.

Independence, pep and a brilliant line may dazzle a man—but a soft voice, a tender eye and a warm, radiant smile enchant him.

He may stand for the frank and cynical girl who sees through him and laughs off his admiring or romantic line; but the girl he usually falls for is the one who swallows the line, hook and sinker!

He may theoretically agree with the sophisticated young woman who has discovered that "all men are alike"—half savage and half child—but he has a glowing sentiment for the starry-eyed girl who still believes in heroes; and who thinks that HE is a combination of Prince Charming and Richard Coeur-de-Lion; in fact thinks that HE is winning the war!

He may be a good pal to the girl who can carry her own golf clubs beat him at golf and like him in spite of his faults and little failings, but the girl he thrills to is the one who "adores" him for lots of imaginary virtues and "strength of character". She inspires him to try to do big things!

The girl who analyzes a man may interest him ,but it is the girl who can idealize him that GETS him! He may be afraid to trifle with the smart young woman who has his number; but when he marries, he wants to marry a girl who is convinced that HE is "Number One"!

Girls may change, manners may change, and times may change. But the last thing on earth to change will be a man's ideal of women.

Sometimes I wonder if those young women who have found independence in war-jobs so sweet that they are determined to hold onto them after the war is over, and those girls who have snatched at every "freedom" which war brings (and will take many more after it) won't find that this "freedom" often means frustration, and independence often means loneliness.

Sometimes I wonder if the old-fashioned "Ideal Woman", who believes in love and loyalty and unselfish devotion, isn't the happiest woman, after all. Modernism has its points; but, in love, the eternal verities will always persist. Always!

Advice to the Lovelorn
By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The Question of Furloughs

A young wife who has written me for advice is in despair about the remainder of her life.

Her soldier-husband, recently home on furlough, had a disappointing visit, and she herself is constantly in tears because she was not able to make it a success. The couple are young, full of health and energy and in love with each other. What is the trouble, then? Why, simply that they have a three-months-old baby and that the soldier isn't ready for the responsibilities of fatherhood.

"The baby seems to mean nothing to him", writes Dorothy G. "We have nobody to leave the little thing with, evenings, but he wanted me to go out with him just the same. I couldn't do it. But one night I got a girl friend of mine to go out with him and they both enjoyed it, thought I didn't. What he came home for was to have a little fun, he said.

"Next time he comes, what shall I do? Do my duty by my baby? Or neglect her and do what my husband asks? Or let him go out with some other woman. I love both my husband and the baby, and I want to do the right thing by them. Please, Miss Fairfax, tell me how I can avoid spoiling all our lives".

With all my heart I am sorry for this girl. The young husband is of course, selfish, thoughtless and, you might think, heartless. But he is hardly grownup yet. And it's hard work being a soldier. His wife loves him and cannot bear to lose him, so for the present she'll have to do all the thinking and planning. Later on, he will wake up to the fact that it's great fun to have a baby.

Just now I think Dorothy will have to confide either in her own or her hubands's mother and arrange that one of them shall take care of the baby, evenings, next time the husband has a furlough. It won't do at all to introduce another girl into the situation. Dorothy and John must share their life together.

But when the war is over I am sure the wife will have to do no more contriving. John will be so glad to be at home again that he will agree to their leading the normal life of all young parents. It's just a question of gently holding his hand, so to speak, during this dark period of the war.

Fashion Flashes

THERE'LL BE NIGHT LIFE aplenty for cotton this summer. A charming jacket, guaranteed to turn any long slim skirt into a dinner dress, is of Guatemalan hand-woven cotton in violet, gray, yellow and black lightly touched with tiny multi-colored crystal beads. A set-in sash ties in a loose knot above a peplum which is pleated in front.

DID YOU EVER SEE so many pretty hats in one season? Fine millinery shown for summer wear includes diaphanous fabrics mounted on wire frames. One hat of this type is a deep bowl-breton of white maline with white narcissus pressed between the layers of tulle. Perfect for a garden wedding.

VERY PRETTY and entirely feminine play suits and dresses will gladden the summer scene. Rows of tucks between bands of red embroidery dress up a sheer cotton top made with deep off-shoulder neckline and puffed sleeves. The wraparound white cotton twill skirt has a curved high waistline with a red cord pulled through to tie at one side.

Real conservation is emphasized by a new fabric. It consists of ninety per cent dog hair mixed with ten per cent cotton or wool. The materials are made from the clippings, combings and pluckings of dogs, and it makes up into a soft woollen.

Summer weather finds chambray doing yeoman's work. A charming dress of pink and gray chambray, made with pink plastic button closing all the way down, has the stripes pleated to mark a wide wing shoulder, and also for edging the square neckline.

Different customs, different costumes! The curfew has brought the street length afternoon-into-evening dress back again. But instead of black, many women are turning to dressed-up prints, and wearing them with big black hats and long gloves.

Sergeant Eino Luhta, Finnish-Canadian graduate of the Yoho Valley army school for mountaineers, was an instructor in mountain tactics to the Lovat Scouts.

By Wm. Brown-Forbes

Scottish officers and men of the Lovat Scouts, a mountaineering battalion now active in the battle of Europe, learned their skiing and mountain tactics from Canadians high in the Canadian Rockies at Jasper Park.

Led by prominent mountaineers, the Scouts made the first winter ascent of some of the highest peaks in the Rockies, took training in rock and ice climbing, skiing, hill tactics and small arms fire. On the three four-to-five day "schemes" which the men performed, climbing peaks, traversing dangerous terrain, digging snowholes for the night, commuting manoeuvres, they each carried rucksacks stuffed with sleeping bags, Arctic rations for three days, white camouflage outfits, crampons, rifle, ammunition, ice axe and a primus stove—some 60 pounds to lug a few thousand feet.

At night they dug their igloos about 16 inches under the snow's surface, with bunks, tables and seats carved out of the walls of the subterranean shelters. A ski pole, jabbed handle down through the roof, provided ventilation and let the fumes of the stove escape as dinner was cooked. The underground hut would soon be as warm as any home.

The Lovat Scouts were sent to hold the Faroe Islands at the beginning of the war and for two summers were on guard duty at Balmoral Castle, the King's Scottish residence, training in the hill country of the region, climbing the peaks of the Grampians.

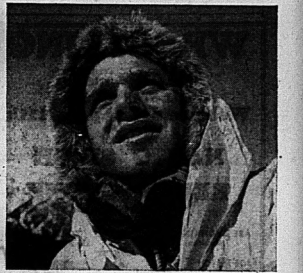
It was in the Canadian Rockies where dozens of peaks pile up past the 10,000-foot mark that the tough mountaineering began. In temperatures often colder than 50 below zero, with winds almost whisking them off their feet, snow whirling about them in blinding rays, and slippery, treacherous ice underfoot, the Lovat Scouts roundrons climbed many of the toughest peaks in the range.

Many Canadian mountaineers and visitors from other countries had scaled these peaks before but seldom in the same weather, and rarely had such large numbers of men climbed them at the same time, each burdened with a load which the average man could hardly carry downtown, without help.

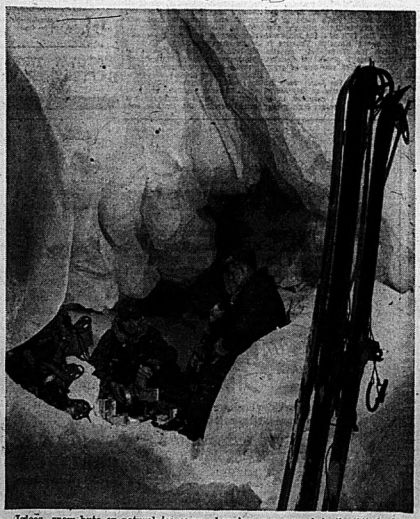
It was a tough, gruelling job, three months of freezing cold and back-breaking work, but it made them the crack regiment they are, experts in sharpshooting, mountain climbing, observing, able to ski and do the innumerable tasks that such a group of shock troops might be called on to perform.

The Lovat Scouts regiment was raised in 1899 by Simon Fraser, 15th Lord Lovat, a Highland landowner, to counteract the Boers' knowledge of outdoors and their familiarity with the terrain on which the South African war was being fought. Stress was laid on observing and sniping as the Scouts' main task and the regiment was composed of stalkers, gillies and gamekeepers—and even some poachers—from the Scottish estates.

Canada made fast friends in these Scotsmen who trained here. Many a Canadian overseas these last five years will make friends of these men in battle zones when they hear in burring accents how Athabaska looks as the sun comes up and tints the snow and the rock rust red, that the deer in Jasper are still gentle-eyed and tame, that Edmonton is a busy western metropolis, that the snow is keen and cold, the sun-glare bright, the air fresh and the wind sharp as your skis carry you down the long slopes of the mountains of home.



Up the long fan of the Athabaska Glacier high in the Canadian Rockies at Jasper Park go these members of the Lovat Scouts, crack Scots regiment which played a vital part in the invasion of Europe. The men, trained by Canadians, carried 65 pounds of equipment, kept going in the world's most rugged terrain for ten hours a day. On long ascents, which sometimes took five days, the men slept in the snow.



Mortar fire training was given the crack Scots regiment by Canadian troops in the Rockies at Jasper Park. These explosives are used to break up threatening avalanches.

L/C Mackenzie, has been in the Lovat Scouts for six years, is now fighting in Europe. A game-keeper in civilian life he is a crack shot, works as a sniper.

Igloos, snow huts or natural ice caves were used as dwellings by the Lovats. In an ice cave formed by snow cornice hanging over a crack in the Athabaska Glacier, these one-time Scots gillies and gamekeepers "hole up" for the night.

Vital weapon in mountainous terrain is the weasel. Similar to the Bren carrier, it floats, climbs 60 degree hills, can travel on ice at 36 miles an hour.

Isolated or lost sections of Mountain troops training in the Rockies were sent ammunition, supplies, by plane and parachute. Men made packsacks into symbol on the ice and took cover until the 'chute landed.

Don Barrett Leads Belleville Juniors in Scoring with 33 Points, Bernie Meagher Second

Barrett-Meagher Brothers' Line Bagged 48 of Team's 85 Goals Scored in 16 Games; Scoring Averages Given for the Season.

Proving that assists are equally as valuable as goals in the final analysis, Don Barrett became the leading scorer with the Belleville Bears throughout their 1945 Junior OHA campaign. Barrett notched 13 goals, but had 21 assists to his credit to give the smooth-skating Belleville gentleman a total of 33 scoring points.

Trailing Barrett in second place was line-mate and right winger Bernie Meagher, who flashed the red light behind opposition goalies 23 times in 16 games and had eight assists for a total of 31 scoring points. Next in line came defenceman Billie Holway and Al Meagher, who teamed with Barrett and Mr. Bernie, each getting 22 scoring points throughout the past season.

Score Over Half

In 16 junior OHA games the Bears scored a total of 85 goals, while having 77 scored against them. In this category the trio of Barrett, flanked by the two Meaghers, accounted for over one-half of the Belleville goals as this trio rang the bell for a total of 48 goals. Besides being the leading scorer, Barrett also led in the matter of assists when he piled up 21 in 16 games, while B. Meagher notched 22 goals in 16 games played.

The Belleville juniors played a total of 16 junior OHA games, winning ten, tying one and losing five. From the 19th day of January until Coach Toots Holway's local kids met the fast Kingston Victorias in March, the local kids did not lose a single game in the 'Little Six' which included four play-off matches won in succession. They scored 91 goals in their 13 games played in the 'Little Six' and had 35 scored against them. When the Kingston-Belleville scores were added to these figures the Bears had a 60 goal advantage against them while shooting 90 into the opposition's nets.

76 Penalties Here

George Reeves played the entire season without a single penalty being called against him in the Bums Arena, while Al Meagher went three 15 game and only once was shoved to the "sin bin" for a minor two-minute rest. Collectively the Bears served a total of 139 minutes in penalties, an average of a little over eight minutes per game. There were no badmen on the club as Doug Green picked up a total of 32 minutes in penalties, two or which were majors, Billie Holway was next with 31 minutes, one a major hockey crime. Up front Jerry Mosher and Bernie Meagher served 27 and 22 minutes respectively in the rest box.

Toronto, April 10 —(CP)— Pretty Peggy Sellars, long associated with swimming activities in Quebec, has followed in the footsteps of thousands of other women in taking over executive positions from men during wartime. This weekend, Mrs. Sellars was elected president of the Quebec section of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association.

The Quebec section has never before had a woman president—but followed the example set by the Manitoba section when they elected Mary McDonald prexy in 1942.

With the retirement of bachelor Bert Davey, it was expected that Norman Sherriffs would take the presidential post. But Norman is about to give up bachelorhood and begged off so that he could set up home. Other bachelors of the executive—Sherriffs is the first benedict in the lot — were content to remain in their former posts.

So Pegy, former swim champion and competent diving judge, has taken the reins. The C.A.S.A. is sure of continued success in Quebec.

Bucks, and Whistle.

Wilfred (Bucko) McDonald, one of the few men in pro hockey who made good after an inauspicious career in amateur hockey, is going to give up his players' uniform for the white awealer of an NHL referee. Or so they say.

Bodychecking Bucko, who last played with Rangers, is going to hospital in a few days for an operation and figures on giving up the active life of a hockey belter. He made his first start in hockey with Toronto Maple Leafs — and it is one player hockey before that there is no record of it.

Born in Sundridge, Ont., he developed into one of Canada's best defence stars. He was with Kingston Excelsiors in 1931 when they won the Mann Cup in New Westminster. After a short spell with Leafs, Bucko was sent to the Buffalo Bisons and attracted so much attention as a withering bodychecker that Jack Adams bought him and sent him to Detroit Olympia, before taking him into the Red Wing lineup.

His best years were in 1935-36 and 1936-37, the years Red Wings won the Stanley Cup. But after that Bucko lost his touch. He went back to Leafs and finally wound up with Rangers.

Former Rangers and Bruins Featured in R.C.A.F. Hockey Games at Bomber Stations

With the Canadian Bomber Group Overseas, Feb. 10 (CP)—Goalie Jean Louis Dion of Sherbrooke, Que., was mobbed by his jubilant teammates after he scored a shutout against a crack team from the Royal Air Force National League stalwarts. Jean's team, battling terrific odds all the way, had scored three goals and won the Canadian Bomber Group hockey championship.

The 1-0 triumph gave Dion's club, from a station commanded by Group Capt. J. E. Millward, D.F.C. and Bar, another Edmonton luminary, the best-of-three series by two games to one. The win, the opener 3-2 but took a 7-1 beating in the second. The losing finalists, from a station commanded by Group Capt. Harold Miles, D.F.C. and Bar, Toronto, won the title last season.

The mighty grim for Millward's men because they started the third game without their ace forward, Alfie Pike formerly of New York Rangers, who was hit in the face by a puck in the first match Prospects became more grim when Jack Cain of Sault Ste. Marie, outstanding forward and team coach, limped off with a leg injury midway through the second period. Up to then there had been no score.

But the lighter Millward Club beckoned their forwards and used attack after attack led by the "big three", Mitt Schmidt, and Roy Conacher, former Toronto Maple Leafs, Jimmy Haggerty of Montreal, Canadiens, who made good use of his get in on goal they were outsmarted by finally judging the game of his life in the nets.

Deadlock Broken

Then, halfway through the final period, Sergeant Jimmy Colter of Hudson, Que., broke away on an enemy gagging attack and beat Sergeant Flattery of Ottawa with a low drive from close-in.

Then Sergeant Dion, the Millers outfit, led by the three professionals, would add two more to make it 4-0 and Sergeant Dion would be carried off the ice on his teammates' shoulders.

The final tally came on the stick handwerving of Lloyd Brouder, former Boston Bruin from Kelvington, Sask., who broke away alone in the final minutes and beat Pinkney out of the nets before pushing the puck past him.

The game was on an outdoor rink in Northern England and despite a few puddles, it was considered the best of the entire season.

COBRA EXPONENT

Staging the comeback trail with covetous eye on the British Empire wrestling title, Nanjo Singh, that unpredictable and unscrupulous Hindoo of the wrestling world, moved a step towards his goal by winning over Ivan Rasputin in Toronto last week. In order to make the claim more solid Singh accepted a challenge to meet "Red" Vagnone, the "California Rocket" to open wrestling hostilities at the Hume Arena here on Wednesday night. Vagnone has been cheating Frank Sexton in quest of the Pacific Coast title, while Singh wants Watson's crown. To make it a natural and give the Belleville patrons a shocking match Promoter Frank Tunney signed this pair to prove which shall have the privilege of "going their way" and one must gain a decision regardless as to the unpredictable result of such a match. Two strong preliminaries precede this shooting match.

Junior Scoring Figures.

It was quite a race between Don Barrett and Bernie Meagher for the leading scorer of the Belleville Bears this past season. The official scoring records released today shows Don edging Bernie out by two points, Barrett has a total of 33 scoring points in 16 games played, while Bernie picked up 31 points in 15 games. Meagher's big forte was scoring goals, 23 as a matter of fact, while Don proved assists are just as valuable when the figures are added up as he went a helping hand on 22 of the Bears' 85 counters. Billie Holway and Al Meagher were tied for third place with 22 points each.

In 16 junior O.H.A. games Coach Toots Holway's kids scored 85 goals while fishing 40 from out of their own nets. Of the 95 goals scored in their favor, Bears' Don Barrett, flanked by Bernie and Al Meagher, accounted for 48 goals, over one half of this number, this line scoring 23 goals between them. The Moher-Day-Greatrix line picked up 42 goals between them, while the remaining 11 were shared and scored by Lyall, Reeves, Green and Bush. Coach Holway only used 12 players all season and for the greater part of the year dressed but ten.

After getting off to a shaky start the Bears struck their stride and didn't lose a single game in the Little Six until the title was won. From Jan. 10th until the locals met the strong Kingston Victorias in March the Holway-led sextette didn't lose a single decision, which included two sets of group playdowns.

As a team the locals were fat from being ruffians as they served 139 minutes of penalties in 16 games, which averages slightly over eight minutes per game and includes some major trips to the sin bin during the Kingston series. The individual scoring records of the kids are given elsewhere in today's issue.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 623
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Good bridge partners are hap-hazard, who are in harmony with each other. They click in their bidding. They can count with each other the exact number of cards they have in each suit.

There is a simple standard rule every act in bridge. One is: with two same length suits, bid the higher rank; with two suits of different length, first bid the longer.

Another standard rule is: An unlimited rebid suit contains at least five cards. When two suits are bid one of each rebid, it is to show the length of each.

Will the length of your suits in this hand:

♠ A Q J 7 6 5
♥ K Q 10 8 6 5
♦ None
♣ None.

You have two suits, they are not of the same length (6), first bid the longer; hearts. Then bid spades, that tells partner you are longer in hearts. Else you would have bid the higher rank first.

Thus, you say you have at least five hearts and at least five spades but on the third round you bid spades again. That says your spades are at least five but more than five.

If your spades are five long and your hearts are longer, you must have at least six hearts. So, since you have more than 11 cards, you have no more than two cards in minor suits. One is probably a void.

You can see how handy that is to a partner. He may have only two spades and two hearts. Now he knows which of those two suits he must show first.

His would then know the partnership has eight hearts and seven spades. Therefore, he can advise you to use the hearts as your final trump suit. And he is not in any doubt about it.

If he had a diamond or a club suit of some length, he would know that you are likely to be weak in that suit. Or at least not more than two cards in it.

There is no distribution of cards that a player is unable to show in this manner. Corny players do too much guessing.

Stanley Cup Means More Than Championship to Red Wings

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press, Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 10 —(CP)— For Detroit Red Wings, winning the Stanley Cup this year would mean more than just another championship. It would make them champion of champions among modern professional hockey clubs — their fourth championship in the last seven years, the original Winged Wheelers and world champions from 1897 to 1903. Their nearest rivals, Montreal Maroons hold it twice and Montreal and the Ottawa Silver Seven hold it three times, but Detroit and Ottawa Senators won it three in four years in the early 20's.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at the headlines on the front page of the sporting section and ma said I saw quite a good movie down town today, William. It was Essence of Ashes, with Rita Hallow, in person with Clarence Darrow. It's a very popular picture, and while we were waiting to get in we had time for a long serious heart-to-heart discussion about how we all ought to cooperate with ourselves in living in a free country instead of under a dictator, Pop said.

Yes by golliee, were a purty clever bunch of folks to get ourselves born in the land of the free, Pop said, and ma said, Maud and I both agreed that there is no greater blessing than living in a country where everybody has a vote and a say, and you elect your own rulers by the free and secret ballot instead of having them elect themselves by lies and brute force and might is right, in other words we've got freedom of action, but what have they got, pa said.

Regimentation is the word usually employed, pop said, and it describes exactly. From the helpless cradle to the unwilling grave they're told what to think and what to say and where to go and what to do when to get there and what to say and if they try to protest and raise their voice in a single protest they get it.

Double padlocks, pop said, and ma said, Precisely so, William. The contrary we can do what we wish when we want in the way we choose, and as far as I'm concerned, regimentation is a forrin word in another language. And then Maud and I both suddenly realized that they were forcing us to march in step to find out in the cold instead of allowing us to wait inside in the warm lobby for the next more propitious so-called fire lay, as if anybody ever got to the warm friendly lobby for land sakes, and the idea made us burst out laughing, we both agreed we might as well of been in Germany or some place, ma said.

Which by that time pop was beside himself with rage and refused to listening or not hearing.

Plans for training "man-of-the-future" leaders to meet the needs of Wales as a whole, provide a broad cultural background, and eliminate the one-sided outlook of foreign college principle, have been placed before the Welsh Universities Education Committee.

Chief exponent of the proposals is Dr. Oliver Wheeler, professor of education at the University College, Cardiff. There are six training colleges in Wales. Some are for a single sex, others for a single area. "I oppose any system which puts students into separate institutions where they meet only interesting their own sex," says Dr. Wheeler.

To interpret the social heritage to the next generation, teachers must have a broad, liberal outlook during training, must meet intending leaders in agriculture, industry, commerce, agriculturists, and so on.

"We must have a co-ordinated system of development, some national body that will help," Washington, 181, Washington, outpointed Reggie Williams, 184, Baltimore, 10.

He said a senior official of the Hydro-Electric Board had stated publicly that if they submerged the pass along the Tummel the public must not complain. Instead, they would be given an equally good one along Loch Ba. Glen Etive, he continued, unenticed, unenvied and tradition must be more ghostly and shadowy if imagined an erasis path and a synthetic bridge and a mechanical waterfall would be substituted for the Scottish public in return for old and loved features.

The trust has lodged its objection with the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Ulster Program: Northern Ireland has three main objectives in post-war reconstruction, first by Prime Minister Sir Basil Brooke is rehabilitation of old established industries. Second aim is a great diversification and industry by attracting new forms of manufacture and third, a substantial housing program, development of power supplies and other public works, to meet disbanded forces' demands.

Hong Kong Established: Little is known of St. Boniface, except that he brought Christianity to Germany in the 8th century, but on his day (June 5) Hong Kong's spirit of the country finds expression. This is the conclusion of a 25-word postcard message from the military internment camp, giving Hong: "Choir practising program March 1."

AT THE BELLE

"Master Race" — Thrilling

Exposing the real aims of German-style "democracy" with a dramatic mission to bring about a third world-wide conflict in the future, "The Master Race," now on the Belle screen, presents a startling and thought-provoking picture of unusual timeliness. With a fine cast headed by George Coulouris and Osa Massen, the film tells the story of a group of former concentration camp guards and then vividly shows how the plan is tried out in a little British village.

Coulouris plays Colonel Von Beck, a former concentration camp chief and one of the principal proponents of the "master race" democracy theory. As he and his fellows see that the current war is lost, they resolve to defeat their love by stirring up trouble between the victorious Allies and then, with the help of complete arms and iron stocks such a state of unrest and dissension that, in another twenty years, the rearmed Germany can once more march forth to world conquest.

In accordance with this plan, the "master race" fanatics go "underground" disguises to liberty and outside the German borders. Von Beck, posing as a wounded Belgian patriot, goes to the Nazi concentration camp in the little village of Lidice in Czechoslovakia, where he is welcomed by the villagers themselves. As a first step he induces some of his guards to blow up the prison camp in which a number of German soldiers are held, and thereby tries to put the blame for this on the Allied commander. However, the truth is revealed in an exciting climax and Von Beck is unmasked and sentenced to death for his treachery.

Edward G. Robinson, who made "Hitler's Children," produced the new film for United Artists. By the light on the little-known but authentic schemes of the Teutonic leaders for eventual world domination. Osa Massen plays a victim of the Nazis, Coulouris is cast as the evil German commander, Carl Esmond a Russian doctor, Nancy Gates and Lloyd Bridges carry the romantic interest and two of the village's young people.

Three Varied Featurettes

Three varied and entertaining featurettes have been booked for exhibition on the same program, including The Canadian Belle Newsreel; a Walt Disney Pluto Color Cartoon "T-Bone for Two," and a smart Western Musical featuring Ben Willa and His Texas Playboys.

Expect Announcement On Income Tax Balance

Ottawa, April 10 (CP)—Present arrangements are that the government will make an announcement later this week on whether balances due on income taxes must be paid on or before April 30th. It was learned definitely today. Returns must be filed in any case by April 30.

A year ago final payments did not have to be made until Aug. 31 so as not to clash with the seventh Victory Loan campaign at the end of April and beginning of May. This year the eighth Victory Loan campaign will be in progress in a similar period, but much larger proportion of taxation due has already been collected and the question is the situation is not quite the same.

It was learned that the cabinet, however, is giving serious consideration to postponing again the date of final payments, but decision has yet to be reached.

NO NATIONAL SERBIES OF FAIR INFLUENCE

Calgary, April 10 —(CP)— Lord Swinton, British Minister of Civil Aviation, said Thursday there would be no national sphere for air influence after the war and that small nations as well as large ones have a fair share of civil air traffic.

Baseball Banterings

New York, April 10 — (AP)—The "new" Yes Lindy Menon, old longer the playboy, stress promise of converting the York Giants into a National League pennant contender. Yesterday he pitched the Giants to an 11-0 gratuitous over Nowak Braves. He went the route, yielding five hits and permitting only one runner to get as far as third.

Other training camp items:

Boston Braves: Manager Casey pleased over batting southpaw Ken Raffensberger of Pulk. Pumpkiers were amazed at club last season.

Pittsburgh Pirates: With first game week away manager Frankie Frisch is recovering from serious illness. Outfielder Dahlgren's feet are troubling him. Lloyd Weiner has wrenched leg and southpaw Art Cucciurullo has pleurisy.

Brooklyn Dodgers: Ben Chapman, who may be club's starting pitcher in opening game, announced he had been classified 4-F by review board in Washington.

Chicago White Sox: Chirps again lost exhibition game with Detroit at Pittsburgh. Dykes's first ball and third base are up for grabs as far as Manager Dykes is concerned. Bucky Nagel, purchased from Milwaukee, is getting a chance at the initial sack, vacated when veteran Hal Trosky decided to stick on a war job. Nagel is a left-handed batter and Dykes but that position currently is being held by Outfielder Don Cross, who was obtained from Detroit Tigers.

Le Roy Schalk is operating at second base, while a couple of rookies, Cas Michalski at the initial sack, and Tony Cuccinello at third.

Dykes probably will get good pitching from Bill Dietrich, Orval Grove, Thornton Lee, Joe Haynes and Ed Lopat; his outfield will be made up of Taft Wright, Dave Philley Moses and Guy Curtright around; Infield will be rounded out at short with Vince Castino and Mike Tresh on hand.

The big question mark obviously is the infield, but maybe Mr. Cuccinello has the answer to that one.

At the request of President Ford Frick of the National League and President Will Harridge of the American loop, Leslie M. O'Connor of the baseball Advisory Council, Chicago, yesterday called a meeting of the baseball clubs for April 24 at Cleveland to deal with the report of the nominating committee for a successor to the late Kenesaw M. Landis as baseball commissioner.

O'Connor, who was executive secretary to Landis, said the Cleveland meeting would take any action necessary concerning the report from the committee's recommendations but gave no inkling as to any candidates for the post.

Gunder Haegg, Swedish running star, decided yesterday to call it a day, but would leave the United States for his homeland as soon as transport arrange itself, he said. He revealed he had not received permission from his employer in Sweden to remain in the U.S. for the outdoor track season as his boundary. Haakon Hakken, Lidman, planned to do.

After breaking camp at Washington to proceed to the hub, manager Bob Coleman's Senators have stepped forward to say last night he was not by any a first-division team. National League club. Coleman promised much of his batting string of five twirlers, Jim Tobin, Nate Andrews, Al Gerheauser, Charlie Barnett and Johnny Hutchings.

IRISH DOWN ROYALS 4 TO 3 TO LEAD SERIES

St. Mikes Need One More Game to Capture Eastern Canada Crown and Meet Moose Jaw

Montreal, April 10, (CP)—Turning on the steam in the last period in front of 8,000 Royals for their first time in their best-of-seven series for the Eastern Canada Junior Hockey title and the right to advance into the Memorial Cup series against Moose Jaw Canucks, St. Mikes, one of the two major league favorites over the lightly-regarded Royals, need only a victory in Tuesday night's game to capture the title in the eastern finals, but they had to fight to the final bell last night before defeating Royals 4-3 in the fifth game of the series.

The victory gave them a 3-2 edge, two-thirds of the way to the championship. Royals took the first and third games in Toronto, dropping the second.

Royals jumped into a one-goal lead in the first period, but were behind 2-1 before the period ended. They dropped to 3-1 in the second, then came steaming back to tie things up in the third. Ted Sloan settled the issue.

Manny Bernett opened the scoring with a goal that should be entered in the lucky class. His low drive from the left was a fluke of the puck, but the shot hit defenseman Gus Mortson's skate and bounced into the net. St. Mikes tied it up on a goal by Ted Sloan on a pass from Captain Frank Tuttle's pass for the goal. The visitors went ahead before the first period ended, however, during a ganging attack while Royals' Doug Harvey was serving a penalty. Wilbert Cary got the goal. They increased their lead in the second with another long drive by Bob Solinger.

Royals came back with a brace of goals in the third. Cliff Malone started the ball rolling with a close-in shot, and Doug Harvey tied the count with a long drive from center from a sharp angle after grabbing a loose puck on the boards.

The Royals let down a bit then, and the more wise Ted Sloan crew, resting in after intercepting the puck on a blue-line play, and beat Goalie Rowe with a long clearly for the winner at 18.24.

DANCE OF DEATH

CHAPTER 15

Foyle took the telephone. "Assistant Chief Inspector Foyle speaking."

"Are you in charge of the Jowett case? The police was plobbed low, but it was resonant with repressed pain.

"Yes."

"Well, I'm Kitty Jocelyn's uncle Bobbie Jowett. I talked to Commissioner Arthur on Sunday and he told me to call you this morning. Look here, Inspector, there must be some mistake. That girl whose body was found in the sewer Wednesday morning can't be my niece Kitty because I saw her at the opera Friday night. Dozens of people saw her there. Her stepmother refuses to see me now and General Archer actually asked me to believe some nonsense about Kitty's cousin being at the opera in her place. I know there's a mix take somewhere, and I will not have the Jocelyn name butchered to make a Roman holiday for the yellow press! I—"

"If I could see you and talk with you, Mr. Jocelyn . . ."

"All right, I'll be at your office in fifteen minutes."

Foyle looked at the pile of letters and reports and inter-departmental memoranda on his desk, and he had not had time to touch since yesterday.

"If I could see you this afternoon, Mr. Jocelyn, about three o'clock . . ."

"I can't leave my office this afternoon! I have a board meeting at four-thirty. Now—"

Foyle cut in sharply. Unlike Archer, he was no respecter of persons. "I could come to your office any time this afternoon, Mr. Jocelyn but I can't make it this morning."

"Make it two-thirty!"

"Two-thirty will suit me perfectly."

"Well, it doesn't suit me at all, but I must see you. You know the address? It's in the Hodgkins Building under Industrial Finishing Company."

Edgar Jocelyn hung up without saying good-bye.

That story, in the papers this morning, sure got results," ventured Detective Tims. "Mr. Archer and now Jocelyn."

"Am I to have interested in the guys who don't want to see me than I am in the guys who do," retorted Inspector Foyle. "See if you can get hold of a mug called Philip Leach, who writes for some newspaper under the name 'Lowell Cabot.' Gossip columnist."

The inspector began going through the papers on his desk. The first was a report on the X-Why bottle found in Rhoda's bathroom from the fingerprint department.

"Ovidn't get that guy Leach, Chief," announced Duff. "Got his office and thought we'd catch him and they dunno where he is."

"No?" Nothing ever surprised the inspector. "Well, get Alfred Hagar down here some time this morning. His fingerprints were found on the X-Why bottle."

"OK. And here's the dope on Dantie, Chief."

The inspector took two slips of paper, and began reading. First paragraph from "Who's Who."

"Dantie, Nicholas, Order of Merit, Commander of the Legion of Honor., Stockbroker, b.1884, Educ., Paris. Numerous gifts to the Victoria and Albert Museum and the Oriental Section of the Louvre Museum, including Hispano-Moresque fairness and Chinese early painting of the Yuan dynasty. Address: 21 A Carlton House Terrace, London; also Villa Beau Rieu, Alpes-Maritimes. Clubs: Marlborough; Cercle de l'Union."

The second slip of paper was a cable from Scotland Yard.

"I never heard of any one having so large a dose without dying, but there are certain variations even in reaction to any drug. Some we don't understand and some are not. For instance, drunkards and maniacs seem more susceptible to thermal than normal people."

Foyle brought his big fist down on the table in the glass ressonance.

"It may interest you to know that Kitty Jocelyn was subject to chronic malaria," said Beall, slowly.

Lambert was interested. "That's rather horrible, it seems. almost planned—doesn't it?"

An idea came to Beall. "How does thermal effect drug addiction?"

"Depends on the drug—naturally!"

"Well—let's say morphine."

"I don't believe there's any specific effect. But we'd better find out."

Lambert went over to the bookcase and took down an index volume of "Merck's Materia." Then he searched through another volume.

"Hello! Was that a guess or second sight? Here's a Professor Cabot, Cambridge, Mass., who, his, habituated to morphine, and then subjected to thermal shock like normal rabbits. The experiment has never been tried on human beings yet. It is possible that a habit of morphine addict would be immune to shock more than a rabbit than the ordinary people."

Foyle's eyes met Foyle's. The same question occurred to each, but it was Foyle who voiced it:

"Kitty supposed to have died all along?"

The newspaper that employed Philip Leach was housed in its own building, with editorial offices on the eighth floor.

Foyle showed his gold badge to the boy on guard at the entrance. "I want to see Philip Leach."

"Aw, gee!" The boy's eyes shone. "He ain't here, Inspector. Has he bumped somebody?"

"What's his home address?"

"Search me, Inspector."

Then take me to the managing editor."

The managing editor was sitting at a desk about a third of the way down the huge city room.

"Well, Inspector?" His eyes were weary.

"I'm looking for Philip Leach. I tried, to reach him by phone here this morning and I was told he couldn't be reached. How come?"

The editor smiled. "Mr. Philip Leach has not honored us" with his presence since last Thursday, and we can find no trace of him. Darkin's getting his staff. When he does show up, he'll be fired."

Foyle collected his thoughts. "Leach was here at the Jowett dance. "Then that article in this morning's paper on Kitty Jocelyn as I knew her" was not written by Leach at all, but by one of the boys that it was signed 'Lowell Cabot.'"

"Of course not. It was faked from clippings in the morgue."

"Where does Leach live? Has he no home address?"

The editor threw down a horseshoe on his blotter. "The Ravens and Club, Inspector. But Annie doesn't live there any more. He left now and then for letters. They don't know where he lives. They have only the address—his office. Lots of people have been asking for him here. Some of them, armed pretty hard, too."

"He must have a lot of invitations and phone calls doing work like that," said Foyle. "Do they all go to his club?"

"Yes. He was usually at the club in the evening, and at the office in the afternoon."

"When was he last at the club?"

"Tuesday afternoon. Early." The editor was watching Foyle's face. "Interested?"

Foyle answered with another question. "Have you been inside the police when Leach disappeared?"

"The police?". The editor drew another horseshoe. "My dear Inspector, I don't get mysteries and yell 'Police!' every time one of my men goes on a bit binge. Leach has done it often enough. But this time he's been gone too long, and if you find him, you can give him my compliments, and tell him to go boil his head."

"He's changeless, Inspector. Permanent." The editor drew a third horseshoe.

"How would you describe him?" The editor smiled. "Slippery."

"Then what was his height and weight? And the color of his hair and eyes?"

"About five feet eleven, and about a hundred and fifty pounds. Brown hair and eyes."

"Don't you know anything about him? Where he came from and what he was?"

"I'm afraid not, Inspector. He was here a few days one day and with a scandal story. It was hot news and it got printed. After he'd brought in several more stories it gave him a column. He had a talent for ferreting out scandal and other's. His scandal stories always reminded me of Wm. Gaylo's sunflowers and cornfields. No mistaking the odor when you get what I mean. . . . And that's all I know about the lad."

"Any photos of him?"

The editor consulted the photograph department by telephone. "Just one. A Press Club party. Sort of Leach, but it can be enlarged. Are you going to tell me why you want to see Leach?" The editor's drawl was slow.

"I'm afraid I can't at present. It's nothing much."

"Nothing much!" And an assistant chief inspector is making inquiries in person!"

"When did you last see him yourself?" insisted Foyle.

"Tuesday—about 7.45 P.M." "Where at the time?"

"Positive. He had an appointment with me at 7 to map out some stories on the season in Florida, and he was only three-quarters of an hour late. Said he'd forgotten to wind his watch. . . ."

Foyle seemed thoughtful as he re-entered the police car. "You really just Edgar Jowett's last performed Duff. "I'm going to drop in on that ward secretary dame, Miss Jowett."

Mrs. Jowett's office on 87th street was spacious and spaciously furnished in cool, neutral colors. The only touch of bright was a small oil painting while elongated figures on stilts. With a round, noticeably chubby face. Served below it was very like what Mrs. Mother Hubbard.

Foyle liked Mrs. Jowett the moment he saw her. But then he had always liked women who made their living women who made their living or small farm kitchens and freshly baked bread. Her mother had used to give him a slice of such bread with butter and brown sugar, and he could imagine Mrs. Jowett giving the same thing to the girl in the photograph when she was a few years younger. He wondered what quirk of fate had transformed such a woman to become a social secretary.

She didn't look clever, but she did look immensely capable, and— Foyle suspected—a very feminine. wouldn't do. It implied weakness and there was nothing weak about Mrs. Jowett.

"I want to see Philip Leach."

"Aw, gee!" The boy's eyes shone. "He ain't here, Inspector. Has he bumped somebody?"

"What's his home address?"

"Search me, Inspector."

"Rather short notice, wasn't it, ma'am?"

"Very short notice, but—money can do almost anything. It has been a help—especially right now," she said, as I say, Mrs. Jocelyn offered to double the fee I generally receive. So I decided to stretch a point in Kitty's favor, comforting myself with the reflection that people are much more tolerant of self-advertisement and other things today than they were even a few years ago.

"I didn't know social secretaries were so—so businesslike," remarked Foyle.

Mrs. Jowett smiled. "You must be thinking of my predecessor. Poor Florence! She was one of the assistants until she retired. She was a member of a New York family; she had a great many friends here, and it was all a labor of love to her. I am a very different sort of person, Inspector—the widow of a country doctor with few friends in New York, and no pretensions to the social importance of my own. I don't particularly enjoy the work. To me, it is simply one of the few ways I can comparatively untrained woman can earn her bread and a little butter. I turned to it when my husband died, because I knew Miss Severance, Her brother has a place in the country near the village where I used to live."

"You mean something else, ma'am. Do you know any way we can get hold of Philip Leach?" interjected Foyle asked.

"If you can't reach him through his office or the Harvard Club, I really can't suggest anything else." Mrs. Jowett said, readjusting her pince-nez.

"Do you know where he came from in the first place?"

She shook her head. "He's one of those people who well dressed young men who appear suddenly in parties and night clubs without any one knowing just who they are or where they come from. The scarcity of responsible young men is responsible for it, I suppose."

"What about the other folks who had cocktails at the Jocelyns' the afternoon of the dance? Can you give us a line on them?"

"The only one I knew at all was Edgar Jocelyn. I have had charge of several weddings and coming out parties for the younger sisters of his and I've always liked him." "What about Mrs. Claude? Have you worked with you the day of the party, didn't she?"

"Yes, and I did rather sorry for Ann. It must have been hard for her to watch her father entertaining at her cousin's party when she had been looking forward to giving her own. But if she was envious she didn't show it. She has character."

CANADIAN ARMOR

Even when Emden is captured from the land side, the port cannot be used until the Frisian Islands off Borkum and Norderney, which command the entrance to the estuary leadingto Emden, are cleared. They are known to be defended too. (Reuter, Wide Variety).

In northeast Holland further contact has been established with the Allied paratroop force operating behind the line south of Groningen. The 12th Manitoba Dragoons, Canadian armoured regiment which has been doing a fine job all along the sector, linked up with the small mobile parties and other Canadian army troop moving north from Corporaal. Also reached airborne detachments.

Typhoons dropped supply canisters to groups of paratroopers who were still isolated and pilots reported they saw the small parachute figures pick up the canisters, load them on carts, mount bicycles and drive off, waving to the air-craft.

Jas. Kerby, C.N.R. Engineer, Retires From Service

After serving 42 years as a railway employee, 31 a last 26 as a locomotive engineer, Mr. James Kerby, 1 Bridge Street, Shannonville has laid his last throttle for the Canadian National Railways. He retired on when he stepped down from his locomotive cab at the Belleville station, following the completion of his run from Toronto. He began in his retirement with the knowledge of a lifetime of railroading.

Born in Belleville, Mr. Kerby started with the railway back in 1903 as a fireman and three years later, in March of 1906, he was classed as an engineer. Since then he has driven the engine he has pulled mixed freights, freights and passenger trains, by day and night the years he has been on the passenger run out of Belleville and completed his service without a mishap. In pulling the noon mail train in from Toronto.

Special note of service in addition to his regular duties of duty as engineer, and through which many lives have possibly been saved, have been his observations and his officials. On one occasion by bringing his train to a stop at the Bridge Dearborn station he saved the life of a woman who failed to notice the locomotive as she walked up to the track. In another instance he put track gangs on their guard in time when he found them temporarily out of action.

Although a man of no particular hobby interest, Mr. Kerby nevertheless does not intend to take the actual retirement despite the fact his railroading days are over.

Asked what he intended to do Mr. Kerby jokingly replied "I don-no, maybe I will go with my aunt on a cortwood. I'll be able to keep busy that way.

Mr. and Mrs. Kerby have four married daughters.

Midcon, the day's market leader, trading in heavy volume on an advance of 50 cents to 1.05. Hardcastle was an afternoon feature as it doubled 14 cents to 42 in active trading. Other strong golds were Macassa, McKenzie, O'Brien, Toburn, Hoyle, Beattie and Bralorne.

Mining Corporation weakened 30 cents under the influence of Gobrent's ally back to 46 for a loss of 9 cents. Falconbridge and Labrador were gainers in the base metals list.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, April 10 — (AP)— Stock market prices declined today. Small investment funds in today's session apparently thought leaders still suffered from neglect. Though small in number, the price cuts were well distributed near the fourth hour today, losses of 64 points were plentiful.

In front rank of the lists were U. S. Steel, Western Union "A," Standard Oil (N.J.), Douglas Aircraft, Monsanto and American Can.

Late offsets were up ¼ while Distillers-Seagrams slipped ¾.

NO SIGN GERMANS CAN ORGANIZE DEFENCE LINE

Civilian Morale and General Soldier Morale Seen in Utter Collapse

With the U. S. 9th Army in Germany, East of the Leine River, April 16 —(AP)— There's no indication here that the Germans can or will organize any good defensive line between this area and Berlin.

Civilian morale and the general soldier appear to be in complete collapse, although certain Nazi elements are fighting with ferocity.

Prisoners have been pouring in at an unprecedented rate.

Veteran army men expressed the opinion the Germans are incapable of putting up an organized line because they simply lack the manpower to do it.

During the last 125 miles of its forward drive the—2nd Armored Division has not encountered a single organized German division.

One reason for the German lack of fighting manpower is seen in the fact that Maj.-Gen. Isaac D. White's command alone overran 12 hospitals filled with Germans wounded — the fruits of six years of war.

ACCENT PLACED ON RECREATION AT GOOSE BAY

Sports and Study Groups Figure Prominently in Battle Against Boredom at Big Labrador Airport

Goose Bay, Labrador, April 10 (CP)—A discerning newspaper attaching at this big R.C.A.F. postwhich has been in winter immediately notices two things—the great depth of this snow and personnel carrying sawed-off brooms over their shoulders.

The 30-foot snow piles are normal for this part of the northern country but the sawed-off brooms are secret weapons in the battle against boredom in the lives of the isolated 3,000 men maintaining this vital air staging point. The brooms provide the only equipment needed to play Goose Bay's own broom ball game.

Boredom is one of the deepest concerns of the commanding officer, st Goose—Pipe-smoking Group Capt. E. A. McCrowell of Saint John, N.B. and Kingston, Ont., a member of the famous pre-war Rinkin flights of air force aerial acrobats. Possibly the isolation of the station is responsible, but anyhow there is no greater enthusiasm anywhere than for the educational and recreational programs offered here.

Men at Goose have no sedentary town where they can go to dances or shop. It is a station that rules sardines from its barracks area as a punishment similar to confinement to barracks in any other station. It is more punishment to send a man to the guardroom than to confine him to the relative comforts of the Goose barracks.

Group Captain McCrowell, quietspoken R.M.C. graduate with an understanding twinkle in his eye, has tackled the sizeable question with a drastic-blasted ground. His immediate concern is the R.C.A.F. personnel, but R.A.F. men Canadian troops manning the radio conferences and Americans have enrolled in the classes and sports.

The education program is in charge of a small, serious man with glasses — P.O. George Firth, 32, Winnipeg. He was a prairie school teacher and police chief personnel clerk at a cordite plant before joining the

A full sports program has 18 volley ball teams, 13 hockey teams and 13 basketball teams competing, and the athletic director, Flying Officer Bill Hodgson of Blackmore, brother of the famous M.H.L. star Bobby Bauer, and fgt. Johnny Fripp, Ottawa, former Rough Rider footballer and rail champ.

Flt. Lt. Harry Bull former Toronto school teacher is the sports officer and he introduced this reporter to broom ball. All that is required is some sawed off brooms, a volley ball and a hockey stick around the air from 7 a.m. to 12 midnight with recorded transmissions of the best Canadian and American radio programs sent to play. There are also news broadcasts.

The big laundry is run by P.O. Norm Wellbury of Winnipeg and St. Catharines. Cpl. Ke keeps the lads clothing clean at a rate of $1.20 a month for bag-wash and 95 cents for uniform dry cleaning. One of his staff, Cpl. Ellin Barrington of Vancouver has invented a sock mending gadget that has some commercial value.

Every night there is a dance with each mess, but there we are told, "no passes" said genial Station Officer Barbara Ravimson of Toronto.

FEDERAL ELECTION

"But I do not see consideration from all sides of the House with respect to the public business of Canada at a moment when Parliament is about to dissolve, when matters pertaining to the war are very much in mind and many questions have to be considered and when the Prime Minister of the country is called to be absent on a public mission of the country for a period of a month in these particular circumstances."

"May I say that I see no reason why this House should not conclude its business rapidly unless there is a desire to keep the government from going to the country."

"The sooner you get the better," interjected George Fraser (PC — Peterboro West).

"I think reasonable friends will conclude the business of this House today. I will announce the date of the election tomorrow," said Mr. King.

Delegation

The delegation if addition to Mr. King included, Justice Minister St. Laurent and Mrs. Cora Casselman (L—Edmonton West) from the government side of the Commons; Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, and M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader from the opposition side; and two from the Senate, Dr. J. H. King, Liberal leader, and Hon. Leader, Liberal leader, and Hon. Leader, Meighen of Toronto.

This lineup drew protests from Mr. Graydon because John Bracken, National leader of the Progressive Conservative party, was not included; and from John Blackmore, Social Credit party, because no representative of that group was included.

Mr. King said it was necessary to consider representation of special interests there were a great many special interests who might have claims. Actually, it was important that the advisers be men of special qualifications such as the men with long experience in the government service.

Special interests would be protected and this was kept in mind by the general character of the delegation chosen.

Senior Advisers

The senior advisers to the delegation are Norman Robertson, under-secretary of state for external affairs; Hume Wrong, assistant under secretary; L. B. Pearson, Ambassador to the United States; Jean Desy, Ambassador to Brazil; L. R. Wilgress, Ambassador to Russia; W. P. Chipman, Ambassador to Chile; Major Maurice Pope, Military Staff Officer to the Prime Minister.

Mr. King said there would be a party of "technical advisers."

Mr. Graydon said the Progressive Conservative party felt that Mr. Bracken could best represent the party at San Francisco.

Mr. Graydon said he had anticipated that he might be designated to represent his party. He consulted Mr. Bracken and was advised that he had no wish to be party and to the nation. Therefore, he was ready to accept of the delegation, although the duty would be heavy and onerous, if it would serve to expedite the best service he could.

Mr. Coldwell said he appreciated the invitation but for personal reasons but because he hoped it would lay the foundation for future co-operation among all parties in working for a lasting peace. He would accept the delegation in any way he could."

Blackmore's Declination

Mr. Blackmore said he would challenge any member to say where there was any difference at all between the Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives or "any material difference between the friends of Liberalism today and the avowed policies of the C.C.F."

"It is clear," he said, "that the Prime Minister has effectively eliminated opposition."

During discussion of army estimates Douglas Abbott, parliamentary assistant to Defence Minister Mackenzie said up to about a month ago 20% of the home defence soldiers sent overseas by compulsion had proceeded to the front.

Mr. Abbott said he could not say how many had volunteered for general service after leaving Canada. A total of 180 home defence troops had volunteered while absent after 24 hours without leave and 44 more volunteered after their arrival overseas.

Emmanuel D'Anjou (Ind — Rimouski) complained that many farmers' sons in his constituency were being drafted and arrested as delinquents when they did not answer draft calls.

Mr. Abbott recalled that last week John Diefenbaker (PC — Lake Centre) had charged no serious attempt had been made to enforce the law on the call-up and said he was glad Mr. Diefenbaker now could understand Mr. D'Anjou's speech which, was in French.

Edwin Fulton (Ind — Lillooet-Two Mountains) said the government's statement that psychoneurosis in the Pacific war would be on a comparable basis was "only elected to the House of Commons" and not to the people." He was supported in that statement by Mr. D'Anjou.

Maxime Raymond, Mico Papineau dairy leader, suggested that Canadian soldiers overseas should be recalled gradually and replaced by Canadians stationed in Britain. Practically all countries that had been occupied by Germany would be liberated and Canadians shouldn't be kept in Germany as occupationaires after the victory.

Col. J. L. Ralston, former defence Minister, said that if the reinforcement situation overseas was 76 per cent better than forecast last November he believed it should follow that a greater number of men could be brought home on rotation leave.

Mr. Abbott replied that the number of men being returned home on leave was being increased as fast as shipping would allow. He was satisfied that the reinforcement figures given the House by him were correct.

Arthur Ralston said that when he was in Italy last autumn some 10,-000 or 11,000 men were entitled to leave. Actually, about 4,000 had been brought home so far. Rotation leave was most important and efforts should be made to increase the number coming home.

Beautiful Blond Puts Soldier 'On The Spot'

By CHARLES LYNCH

With 9th, 1st Canadian Army in Holland April 10 (Reuters)—This is the story of Corporal Cecil Brown, of St. Catharine, Ont. Immediately after he went into the Netherlands town of Lochem a beautiful blond found her arms around his neck and cried "save me, save me!" While all Germans and nearly townspeople wanting to cut her throat, she said.

In his own words "it about me." Lochem is just south of the Twente canal and while the Canadians fought their way four days ago, Sergeant Brown, a tall, well built Canadian who speaks Dutch fluently, arrived in the town immediately after it had been liberated.

He arrived in the town square and the first thing I saw was this girl, he said.

"Well, it seems this beautiful blond had been having a little too much to do with the Germans, and the townsfolk were proposing to cut off that golden hair.

"I can tell you I was in a spot. The last thing I was good to spot the girl had her arms around me—and all round us were the townsfolk, shouting and all worked up with scissors and a razor.

"Finally with an effort I made my decision and said:

"Turn round, babe.' With tears in her eyes she turned to face the crowd and those shears went to work. In two minutes I had a beautiful girl hadn't a strand of hair—it was all on the ground. They shaved her close.

"I got out of that town in a hurry. I still feel sad about it, but I guess she had it coming to her."

9TH ARMY LESS THAN 100 MILES FROM BERLIN

Breach Senio R. Defences on Broad Front

Lugo, Fusignano, Costignola Taken In Opening Phase

Units Astride Road Running From Ravenna to Bologna

Rome, April 11. (AP)— British 8th Army troops, paced by flame-throwing tanks, have captured Lugo, Fusignano and Cotignola in the opening phase of their offensive across the Senio river on the eastern flank of the Italian front, Allied headquarters announced today.

Fall of these towns represented advances on a front of at least seven miles in the eastern Po Valley astride the highway running from Ravenna to Bologna. Lugo lies a mile west of the Senio on the highway. Bologna is some 30 airline miles north.

In Western Italy, Americans of the Allied 5th Army cleared the enemy from the road hub of Massa and pushed on in the direction of La Spezia, major Italian naval base a dozen miles away.

"Our troops have breached enemy defences on the river Senio on a broad front", an Allied communique said.

In the early hours of the new attack, 8th Army infantry, moving up behind a heavy air bombardment, captured more than 1,200 Germans. Veteran New Zealanders took a prominent port in the assault.

The 8th Army also was on the move south of Highway 9, the major communication thoroughfare up the Po Valley from Rimini, on the coast, through Forli, Faenza and Imola to Bologna. A bridgehead as secured across the Upper Senio near Cuffiano, four miles from the highway southwest of Faenza.

Ontario Election Date is June 19 Toronto Report

Toronto, April 11 —(CP)— There was speculation today in political circles at Queen's Park that the date of the Ontario general election may be announced tomorrow.

The election date hinges on arrangements now being made in Ottawa by Attorney - General Blackwell, Chief Election Officer Alex Lewis and other officials for the taking of a direct overseas vote. Mr. Blackwell is expected to return to Toronto tomorrow and it is considered likely the voting date will be discussed at a cabinet meeting in the afternoon.

Official circles declined comment on one report that the election has been fixed for June 19.

The election follows defeat of Premier Drew's Progressive Conservative government March 22 by combined C.C.F., Liberal, Labor-Progressive and Independent forces and dissolution of the legislature March 24.

Says 102 Luftwaffe Officers Were Executed To Halt Revolt

12th Army Group Headquarters, April 11—(AP)—Reliable information reaching this headquarters today said that 102 members of the German Air Force were executed March 31 in an effort to stop an officers' revolt.

Colder Weather Retards Seeding Operations

Toronto April 11—(CP)—Heavy rains followed by colder weather retarded seeding operations throughout southern Ontario last week, it was announced in the weekly crop report issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Light frosts were reported but no damage to crops was in evidence. Growth was said to be ahead of normal. Some livestock already were in pasture.

A serious shortage of experienced farm labor was reported.

YANKS INVADE JOLO ISLAND IN SULU GROUP

Quickly Capture Capital City and All Airdromes on the Island

Manila, April 11 — (AP)—Complete control of the Sulu Archipelago, which stretches between Mindanao and Borneo, was proclaimed today by Gen. MacArthur. U. S. 41st Division troops invaded the key island of Jolo Monday and quickly captured the capital city and its airdromes.

MacArthur also announced the liberation of perhaps thousands of ill-fed lepers from the Culion Colony of the West-Central Philippines and reported the end of organized resistance on southern Luzon, where thousands of crack enemy troops are trapped.

The veteran 41st, which captured the big harbor of Tawitawi in the Sulu chain April 2, swept ashore at the Jolo city waterfront, on the 20-mile-long island's north coast. Another force landed four miles northeast of the capital. Opposition was negligible as the invaders drove 3 miles inland.

Another swift landing was made at Culion Island, north of Palawan. This resulted in the liberation of lepers who had lacked proper food and medicine for three years. Ten years ago the Culion leper colony numbered 7,000, including a few whites.

Although the adjoining anchorage in Coron Bay was used by the Japanese fleet during operations against the American invaders of Leyte, last November, resistance was negligible and a supply ship steamed in immediately with the first medical supplies the lepers have received since the Japanese occupation.

Heinies Must Work On Adolf's Birthday, Himmler Decrees

London, April 11—(CP)—Hitler's 56th birthday will not be celebrated by Germans in the usual manner this year, Himmler decreed today in his capacity as Interior Minister.

"In view of the war situation," said a broadcast of the German D.N.B. Agency, "government offices and all other public services will work as usual April 20, Hitler's birthday, according to a decree of the Minister of the Interior."

403 HUN PLANES ARE DESTROYED BY YANKS IN DAY

Worst Air Blow of War Hits Enemy—798 Nazi Machines Lost in Four Days

London, April 11 (AP) — Allied airmen, who destroyed an average of almost 200 German planes a day for the past four days, swarmed back over enemy territory today to continue the biggest airfield wrecking job in history.

A total of 63 German airdromes have been beaten up in the four-day period, during which a total of 798 enemy planes have been destroyed aground or in the air.

Germany's once-feared Luftwaffe appeared well on the road to obliteration.

Hopelessly outnumbered for months by the Allies and now virtually grounded for lack of oil, the enemy air force was given its worst blow of the war yesterday when American fliers destroyed 403 of its planes and damaged countless others.

In the last four days 16 German air fields have been bombed and strafed and at least 798 enemy planes destroyed.

Setting up several new records, the Americans yesterday knocked out 336 German aircraft on the ground and shot down 61 in attacks on 36 or more enemy fields. The cost of the U.S. 8th and 9th air forces was 25 heavy bombers and 16 fighters.

The air assault raged on late yesterday and last night with undiminished fury. British and Canadian heavy bombers attacked railway yards at Leipzig and at Plauen, some 90 miles to the south. R. A. F. Mosquito bombers again hit Berlin.

Twelve bombers and two fighters were lost, the Air Ministry said.

How many of these were Canadian was not immediately known.

Canadian Group Active.

London, April 11 —(CP Cable)—Lancasters and Halifaxes of the Canadian Bomber Group teamed up yesterday in the big all-Canadian attack on the Leipzig marshalling yards yesterday—one of the longest daylight operations yet undertaken by Canadian airmen—and today the R.C.A.F. reported the raid was "exceptionally successful."

The Lancasters struck Englesdorff and the Halifaxes struck Mochau. These are suburbs of the city which has become the key point for military transportation within Germany.

After the attack a column of smoke towering over the yards was visible for 100 miles. Returning pilots reported visibility excellent and bombing extremely accurate.

R.C.A.F. Mosquitos on intruder patrol destroyed three enemy aircraft south of Berlin without loss last night.

All three kills were made by members of the Lynx Squadron, two of them—a HE-111 and a JU-88—by Flt.-Lt. P. Etienne of Montreal.

The third—an unidentified twin-engined machine—fell to FO. Donald McConnell of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Vienna is Encircled, Doomed Hun Garrison Holds But Small Area

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

London, April 11 — (AP)—Russian forces completed the encirclement of Vienna and with tommy-guns and grenades compressed the doomed German garrison into the eastern 1/10th of the tottering Austrian capital, front dispatches to the Moscow press reported today.

These accounts also said the right wing of Marshal Rodion Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian Army had invaded the Central Czechoslovak province of Moravia at points less than 35 miles from the great city of Bruenn (Brno.)

Farther north, the Germans said other Soviet forces, in an all-out assault to reduce the Oder River fortress of Breslau, had stormed into Richthofen square in that Silesian city.

Inside Vienna the rag-tag enemy force, including schoolboys, pilots and sailors fighting as infantry, had been pushed back on an island against the Danube by Russian storm units sweeping forward in hand-to-hand fighting. Elimination of this enemy holdout group appeared likely in a matter of hours.

Soviet front dispatches reported that German artillerymen surrounded in the famed Vienna woods fired shells into the city's ancient ring, smashing buildings and stores before they finally were liquidated.

Ukrainians, Russians and White Russians, brought as slave labor to Vienna by the Germans, were liberated from the city's cellars.

Moscow announced last night that 2,800 Germans were captured Monday along with 72 tanks and 75 field guns inside the city. In one sector, 3,000 German dead were counted.

In Slovakia, units of Malinovsky's army slashed ahead northeast and north of Bratislava. They captured Trencin, on the east bank of the Vah River barely 80 miles from Gen. Andrei Yeremenko's 4th Ukrainians advancing from the north.

Recapitulating the losses inflicted on the enemy in the capture of the East Prussian capital of Koenigsberg, Moscow announced that 42,000 Germans had been killed and 92,000 captured in the five-day final assault. Fifty thousand prisoners were taken when the city fell Monday.

TSUGEN ISLET OFF NAKAGUSUKU HARBOR OVERRUN

Japs on Okinawa Mainland Expend More Troops in Effort to Dislodge Yanks

Guam, April 11 — (AP) — U. S. 10th Army infantrymen overran Tsugen Islet off Okinawa's big Nakagusuku harbor today while Japanese on the main island expended more troops in repeated counter-attacks which were costing them heavily.

U. S. 24th Corps troops who landed at Tsugen against light opposition yesterday killed the entire garrison of 250 troops. Pre-invasion naval shelling knocked out most of the enemy's artillery, mortars and machine-guns.

Tsugen, about 10 miles off Okinawa's east coast, gives the Americans control of Nakagusuku Bay, former Japanese fleet anchorage.

The excellent harbor now can be used for unloading supplies and equipment designed to develop Okinawa into an air base only 325 miles south of the Japanese home islands. Marine fighters already are based there for air defence.

Americans fighting in rain and mud on Okinawa gained up to 2,500 yards in the north but were virtually stalemated in the rugged southern sector for the sixth straight day amid the fiercest artillery duel of the Pacific war.

Several Japanese counter-attacks, supported by artillery and mortar barrages, were thrown back on the south. The counter-blows were costing heavy casualties and materially increased the Japanese toll of dead since the official count of 5,009, plus 222 prisoners of war taken up to Sunday midnight.

This bitter fighting in the south along a 4 1/2-mile line was increasing the rate of American casualties, estimated unofficially at the rate of one American killed or wounded for every two Japanese killed.

Defer Income Tax To August 31st

Ottawa, April 11 (CP)—Time for payment of income tax has been extended from April 30 to Aug. 31, Acting Revenue Minister MacKinnon announced Tuesday in the Commons. The 8th Victory Loan was a factor in the decision.

He tabled an Order-in-Council, passed Tuesday making the change. Income tax returns still must be filed by April 30, as was the case last year.

GENERAL CRERAR AMONG 14 MENTIONED FOR GALLANTRY

Ottawa, April 11 —(CP)— Fourteen members of the Canadian army serving overseas have been mentioned in dispatches for gallantry in action, Defence Headquarters announced last night.

The list included Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, commander of the 1st Canadian Army. Other awards went to a brigadier, a captain, seven lieutenants and four ranks.

HOWE PREDICTS LABOR SHORTAGE WITHIN 6 MONTHS

Munitions Minister Initiates Discussion on Departmental Estimates

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(CP Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 11—(CP)—Canada's greatest labor shortage will probably occur in the next six months, Munitions Minister Howe told the House of Commons last night as he initiated a discussion on munitions and supply departmental estimates.

He predicted the shortage despite recent reductions in the number of people engaged in war industry due to more efficient production and some reduction in output and a prospective cut-back of 35 per cent in munitions production after the end of the war in Europe.

Mr. Howe got the floor after a long discussion on army estimates spread over four days.

That debate yesterday turned chiefly on the retirement of Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, V.C., as Commander in Chief, Pacific Command. In reply to opposition charges that Gen. Pearkes was retired against his will and demands for correspondence, Douglas Abbott, parliamentary assistant to the defence minister, said the general made five requests that he be "compulsorily" retired.

No action was taken on his first requests which date back to last November because it was felt he was an efficient officer, but last March his later requests were acted upon.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner who has figured in controversy over the Pearkes retirement disclosed that he had differences with the general in obtaining farm leaves for troops in the Pacific Command. He said Gen. Pearkes might be the best soldier in the world, but did not understand the government's policy on food production.

As Canada's munitions production proceeds, Mr. Howe said, an increasing proportion is for other Allied countries whereas in the early stages it was concerned largely with supply of Canadian forces.

5 MILLION JEWS MURDERED

Near Erfurt, Germany, April 11 — (AP) — Dr. Bela Fabian, president of the dissolved Hungarian Independent Democratic party, said in an interview today that 5,000,000 Jews had been gassed and cremated at a murder factory at Auschwitz, in Upper Silesia.

Women Feel Strain of Swing Shift In War Plants Says Mrs. Rex Eaton

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(CP Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 11. (CP)— Rosie the rivetter is beginning to feel the strain of 3 1-2 years of hard work in Canada's humming war plants and it's the swing shift that is getting her down.

"Our women have been feeling the strain and many have asked to be changed to just as essential war work which has only one shift a day", Mrs. Rex Eaton, associate director of National Selective Service in charge of women workers, said today in an interview.

"The three-shifts-a-day system has been hard on them".

Of the women who answered the calls of patriotism and high wages to join production lines and fill gaps in industry left by the enlistment of men workers, many were housewives, office workers and clerks whose previous jobs had not fitted them for the physical strain of high gear war production.

Occupational diseases such as anaemia and nervous debility caused by long hours of hard work are being combatted by rest periods and nursing care in industries employing women.

"As far as it is possible they are trying to give them relief and in industries generall yit is the custom to provide rest periods", Mrs. Eaton said.

Latest estimate of the number of women employed in non-agricultural industry is 1,077,000 as at Oct. 1, 1944, compared with 744,000 at Jan. 3 last year. Of the latter figure 93.4 per cent, or 695,000 were full-time employees, and if this percentage is applied to the total at Oct. 1 an estimate of 1,006,000 is obtained for full-time female employment and 71,000 for part-time. Of the full-time employees, 196,000 are married women.

CANADIANS TAKE DEVENTER LAST HUN STRONGPOINT

Drive On Emden Closes Door on Large Force Of Germans Still In Holland

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army, April 11 — (CP Cable) — The 3rd Canadian Division has captured Deventer — last German strongpoint on the east bank of the Ijssel River between Arnhem and Zwolle.

After resisting stubbornly until dark, the enemy suddenly withdrew across the Ijssel during the night, and this morning the "water rats" held the whole town, 12 miles south of Zwolle.

The capture of Deventer is an important development in the Canadians' campaign in the northern Netherlands.

The regiments which shared in the fighting advance on the town included the Canadian Scottish, Victoria, B.C., the Royal Winnipeg Rifles, the Regina Rifles and the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, Toronto.

All these units have previously been identified as taking part in the current 1st Canadian Army offensive.

Armor Swings East

At the same time as Deventer fell, the 4th Canadian Armored Division in Germany swung east from the north-south highway leading to Emden which it had been following and gained upwards of six miles to place leading troops 15 miles east of the highway and the Ems River.

With the 4th cutting its way east and the British 7th Armored Division — the Desert Rats — operating in the Bremen area under British 2nd Army Command, there remains a gap of only 30 miles between them, and a strong force of Germans still fighting in the salient to the south of these two armored prongs may be trapped.

As Gen. Crerar's and Lt.-Gen. Dempsey's columns thrust toward the German North Sea coast, enemy forces were breaking up into pockets of resistance.

Aluminum Record Enough to Build 197,000 Lancasters

Montreal, April 11 — (CP)—Aluminum Company of Canada Limited in a press release today reported that 3,356,990,000 pounds of raw aluminum in ingot form or enough to build 197,000 Lancaster bombers was the record of the Canadian aluminum industry during the five war years ended Dec. 31, 1944.

The statement said that only six per cent of Canadian production was consumed in Canada while the United Kingdom was the largest buyer, having purchased approximately 55 per cent of production. The United States was second with approximately 32 per cent of the total. Russia took 4.3 per cent and Australia 1.2 per cent. Other United Nations absorbed the remaining 1.5 per cent.

German Resistance in West Has Collapsed—Eisenhower

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 11 —(AP)— The United States 9th Army advanced to a point less than 100 miles from Berlin today, captured Essen—largest city in the Ruhr—and crashed into the aircraft centre of Brunswick on the high road to the German capital.

The swift-moving United States 1st Army sped across the Thuringian plain south of the Harz mountains to an unspecified point 120 miles from the Russian lines in a supreme effort to cut Germany in two and bar access to the Alpine redoubts from the north.

Essen, a blackened ruin in which 659,174 persons lived before Hitler loosed his armies, is the home of the sprawling Krupp Munitions and Iron Works. It is the birthplace of Reichsmarshal Goering and was the sixth largest city in Germany.

Unconfirmed reports reached Supreme Headquarters that Brunswick had been captured.

The U. S. 30th Division fought into southern Brunswick and the U. S. 2nd Armored Division crossed the Oker river in force south of the aircraft manufacturing centre, and the 5th Armored Division crossed in strength to the north. The Oker flows through Brunswick.

Maj.-Gen. Leland S. Hobbs, 30th Division commander, issued an ultimatum for surrender of the city and attacked when the German commander asked 24 hours in which to remove troops.

Encountered Heavy Opposition.

Five miles due south of Brunswick (pop. 201,306), the 2nd Armored Division encountered heavy opposition in the Hermann Goering Steel Works, but captured the town of Salzgitter where the plant is located.

The nearest approach to the Russians was at an unspecified point 19 miles southeast of the supply base of Nordhausen, 115 miles from Berlin. Gen. Eisenhower said "German resistance in the west had collapsed."

Gen. Bradley's armies were within 57 miles of the great Saxony city of Leipzig, also menaced by the Russians.

The German communique said the U. S. 9th Army had broken into Bochum (303,288), a coal, steel and rail centre in the Ruhr trap. The enemy asserted that the U. S. 7th Army had been driven from Crailsheim, 94 miles from Munich and 42 from the Danube.

White Flags Flutter

White flags fluttered in front of the 9th Army in Brunswick, 105 miles from the capital.

The 1st Army was a bare 110 miles from Berlin at a point east of the great supply base of Nordhausen, where street fighting progressed.

The 3rd Army was about the same distance away.

The British 2nd Army, beating toward Hamburg and besieging Bremen, was 123 miles from Berlin on the outskirts of the Aller River town of Celle.

Important cities fell. Hannover, 12th largest in Germany and a major communications centre of 472,527, fell to the 9th Army.

Deventer (40,300), last Dutch strongpoint on the Ijssel River between Arnhem and Zwolle, toppled to the 1st Canadian Army.

The 9th took Salzgitter and its sprawling Hermann Goering iron works near Brunswick. Luetgen in the Ruhr and Wildeshausen, near Bremen, also were captured.

"German resistance in the west has collapsed," Gen. Eisenhower declared.

The actions of his nine charging armies made it appear that the battle had become a mopping-up operation.

Centre Shattered.

The centre of the German front was shattered, the north and south flanks were laid open to annihilating attacks. The German plan of withdrawal to mountain redoubts in south Germany was imperilled by the swift drive across the waist of Germany toward Russian lines.

The border of Czechoslovakia was 46 miles away. Canadians were within 10 miles of the North Sea and driving hard with British to spring a new trap on 200,000 Germans in Holland and northwest Germany.

The Elbe, last river before Berlin, which flows within 50 miles of the capital, was 52 miles from American vanguards many hours ago. The Heligoland Bight of the North Sea was 30 miles away from British forces.

42 Miles of Danube.

Armies in the south were 42 miles from headwaters of the Danube, 57 from Leipzig and 94 miles from Munich. The French 1st army was in the foothills of the Black Forest.

The Harz Mountains of central Germany were being by-passed. Every remaining city and factory in Germany was threatened by armies of the west, east and south moving in for the final kill under British, Canadian, United States, Russian and other Allied banners.

The British drive from Italy in the Po Valley menaced the redoubt country from the south.

Large and historic cities were being by-passed by tanks and left for infantry to storm.

Report Nazi Party "Throwing Over" Hitler in Favor of Gestapo Himmler

London, April 11 — (CP) — A report that Hitler has been assassinated circulated in Britain today, but Foreign Secretary Eden said he had heard nothing of it.

Capt. John H. McEwen raised the question of the rumor in the House of Commons, declaring he had heard the Foreign Office was "directly responsible" for it and asking for confirmation.

Mr. Eden replied: "As usual the 1922 committee knows information before the foreign office." The 1922 committee, of which Capt. McEwen is secretary, is the extreme right-wing faction of the Conservative party.

The Press Association had reported that a grave split was developing among the Nazis and said evidence had reached official quarters in London that the Nazi party was "throwing over" Hitler in favor of Gestapo chief Himmler.

Without specifying the source of its information, the news agency's diplomatic correspondent said he had been authoritatively informed that there were good reasons to believe that Hitler already was being superseded by Himmler.

Foreigners who have been in the closest touch with Germany are convinced that Hitler is a "dying man," the correspondent added.

The foreign office said it was operating on the theory that Hitler still was in control, with Himmler in command of defence forces. One spokesman said that nothing definite had been received of a split among Nazi leaders.

As to Hitler's condition, he said, all kinds of reports are heard — that he is dying, insane or even dead and "any one of them may be true, but probably most of them aren't."

Vital Need For Full Support Of 8th Victory Loan Campaign Workers Told by G. Towers

Wartime Stability to Certain Extent Depends on Success Of Loan Drive

Tells Post-War Aim

Flying the country yesterday, Graham F. Towers, governor of the Bank of Canada, addressed a meeting of the National War Finance Committee, and a gathering of key workers in the Victory Loan campaign, on the importance of the Eighth Victory Loan drive. Mr. Towers' address was one of vital need for full support of the loan, which opens on the forthcoming campaign.

Speaking in Toronto, Mr. Towers declared that stability of Canada's economy after the war depended to a certain extent on the success of the Victory Loan. He said that it was necessary to maintain employment to the highest possible level, and that the part it had played in financing the war effort would be a great help in attaining this objective.

Mr. Towers' address was broadcast over a national network.

He spoke of the sustained effort that had been put forth against wartime inflation and indicating that reasonable progress had been made. Wartime stability to a certain extent is carried into the post-war years, Mr. Towers said, but the necessity of full employment in the post-war period is fundamental, and of the part which individual participation in Victory Loans would play in attaining full employment. "One million jobs above the pre-war level is the post-war time goal," he said.

Reviews War Effort.

Reviewing the background to Canada's war effort, Mr. Towers indicated there were a number of years two years ago that the war with Germany would not mean a great cut in the gate of Canada's war effort. Many people, he said, would naturally disappear, but other could prevail on and many new posts would entre the picture.

The enormous task which has been made of thousands of soldiers must be brought back home from overseas, Mr. Towers declared, and this would take time and in the meantime new jobs must be found and prepared for in many ways. The sick must be brought back to health and the maimed must be taught ways to a good life. Thousands of boys must be brought back to turn to school and trained for new jobs. Thousands of girls must return to Canadian life.

In addition to outlays for these purposes, hundreds of millions will be paid out to veterans in the form of gratuities, pensions, and re-establishment credits. And the Japanese war, which will be long and fighting, Canada must play her part.

Must Buy Supplies.

Further, in the post-war period Canada will be required to pay for her to a large amount of supplies to send to other countries either as gifts or on credit. Such assistance will help speed the final victory and will help to prevent the outbreak of war on their feet. Finally there are a host of other measures to be taken, such as social security measures and interest charges on the public debt.

"With these facts before us, we can see that the task of maintaining employment is not simply one of understanding why the need for money will be small and urgent, and why there is no early prospect of an important cut in the amount of governmental activity."

The ability of Canadians to buy the Victory Loan bonds will be large, according to Mr. Towers. Personal incomes have increased greatly and steadily increased with industrial employment. Personal savings have continued at high levels. Farm income had never been higher. Savings deposits are at record levels in the hands of the public would reach the $3,000,000,000 mark before the loan. Savings accounts were increased by $600 millions higher than at the opening of the last loan, it was stated.

Set as Higher Levels.

Continuing high levels of outlays for purchasing power together with the increased amount of money available for investment was the answer for loan objectives to be set at higher levels than ever before.

Turning to the future scheme of things, Mr. Towers reviewed the initial steps that have been taken in major nations during the last war. After paying a terrible price for mistakes in the last war Canada learned that intaking your hand in hand with war. The result was that, with destruction of war in 1939, Canada also declared war on inflation.

To conquer inflation a stern financial policy had been laid down. It was undertaken to raise huge amounts of money needed for war in ways which strengthened, not weakened, the country, and in ways which distributed the costs of war in a fair and equitable manner. This meant that as much money as possible of money needs had to be raised by taxation and by borrowing from the public, and as little as possible by borrowing from the banking system.

How Money Financed.

Illustrating this the speaker showed that each $6 of ordinary since 1939 had been financed, $3 by taxation, $2 by public borrowing and $1 by borrowing from the banking system. Supported this policy part of this financial policy and of the Government's measures had paid real dividends in that the war time rise in living costs in Canada has been less than in most countries.

Further, stabilizing the country's economy was the policy of the Government of the Dominion of Canada in the matter of foreign exchange. Canada's foreign exchange position was such that in 1939 $1,000,000,000 in gold and foreign exchange was at the disposal of the country. Of this amount $400,000,000 had been absorbed by the United Kingdom in the purchase of Canadian products. Investing and selling by the banking system and the public had reduced this to $100 millions by the end of 1943.

Can Carry Larger Debt.

The speaker differentiated between personal and national debt. He said that prohibition of the taxation of the nation to itself, while personal debts can be paid by borrowing from others. Canada's national debt was not comparable in taking its relation to national income. The country was comparatively small debt. Canada, he said, could carry a larger debt than it has today.

Great as had been the problems confronting the country during wartime, however, the speaker warned that probably the most difficult period, of demobilizing the armed forces and readjusting industry to peace time conditions, with other countries, seeking to re-establish their own work at a fair income for all who are able and willing to work is one to be dreaded. Mr. Towers said was the greatest danger of the future. Canada, he said, could carry a larger debt than it has today.

Train Part-time Order For H.S. Boys 18½ Years Old

Ottawa, April 11 —(CP)— High school boys, who have reached 18½ years of age and who are on part-time training, will be ordered part-time military training by virtue of an order issued late Tuesday extending previous orders requiring students of 18 to serve in home part-time units.

Douglas Harkness, Parliamentary assistant to Defence Minister Mc-Neil, announced the decision in the Commons on the subject and later explained the order in effect, he said, "The date of the initial order of June 30, 1944, he said, students of 18 years attending high schools or officers' training corps or come in those years previously designated as "designated persons."

While this order had been in effect for nearly a year it apparently wasn't until yesterday that officials in the province of Ontario received a letter from Brig. F. J. Booth, Kingston, district officer of Kingston military District No. 3, applying its contents to high school boys. Brig. Booth's letter said the students must enlist in Reserve Army units.

Reason for Amendment.

Mr. Abbott said it was realized this placed the student at a disadvantage with those students who had accepted jobs. Hence, the order. Representatives of Her Majesty's Canadian army regulations apply to students of 18 years of age, he said, "who were on deferment.

"In this way we discriminate against no one," Mr. Abbott added. "We get the boys in training."

Brig. Gen. Jones, an office worker who is just over 18 doesn't have to enlist unless he wants to and now his chum, Bill Smith, who is 18 years and 6 months of the same age, is in the same position.

"When they both turn 18½ they are subject to military call-up, but Bill, because he is in high school, he is a student he can be called on for part-time training in the reserve army, according to join a part-time militia unit such as the Reserve Army."

Letter Unauthorized.

Earlier, in an interview, Mr. Abbott said the letter was "unauthorized" and "unjustified" the letter sent yesterday to the Ottawa Board of Education and to other high male students more than 18 must join the Reserve Army for part-time training.

The Montreal despatch disclosed that similar orders were received by four high schools there.

Brig. Harkness, it said in a telephone interview from his Kingston headquarters, had a letter which contained nothing new and was "merely a reminder" to bring to the attention of all schools what is really the law of the land."

Brig. Explains.

"All the letter did was to draw attention to the regulations, to interpret them. The regulations say that a boy must begin training at 18. He becomes a designated person at 18. The letter was only issued the other day, but the regulations are over a year old. You know how it is. Some of the schools get the letter and fail pushing them up."

Mr. Abbott repeated in the Commons a prepared statement he had already given on the subject. He was replying to questions from George S. White (PC, Hastings-Peterborough).

Mr. White asked if the amended order would apply to all military districts and not just M. D. No. 3.

Mr. Abbott replied in the affirmative but added that the officer who had issued the letter from M. D. No. 3 was probably under the impression that the strict letter of the regulations would call for."

CANADIANS TAKE

Gain Six Miles in Night

Leading on the 5th Canadian Armored Division in its thrust eastward and one column pushing beyond Pisa, Canadians added six miles last night and was last reported in Werfle, 4½ miles east of Pisa.

Another force was four miles north of Pisa, entering the village of Bourger. The battle group which was racing north along the Magra-Serchio corridor to the Ligurian coast when within 26 miles of the Genoa-Spezia port and now is north of Bourger.

The 6th was encountering artillery, mortar and machine gun fire during the night, and was last reported in Werfle, 4½ miles east of Pisa.

The mopping-up of northeast-Holland — which the troops call "Canada" — is proceeding well. Advanced units were one mile north of Leeuwarden, 15 miles northwest of Oosterzee, and 26 south of Groningen. Contact has been made with Canadian troops in the advancing groups dropped in that area.

Sweep Through Broad Area

The 12th Manitoba Dragoons of the 4th Canadian Armored Brigade, between Westerbork and the Zuider Zee, swept through a broad area and has been liberated. Only two more provinces remain in enemy hands — Groningen in the Canadian Army to enter Friesland and Groningen.

The 1st Canadian Division is clearing up the area east of Roselle and is moving on Ancona, 20 miles east, of Roselle, on the Vechi River. German stragglers and small scale rear guard action was made with the sweep of Canadian Army south-east and Roselle has been cleared and are being rounded up.

The 3rd Division, pushing south of Ancona, has reached Osimo, 12 miles south into the northern part of the country.

As the Canadians drove onward the resistance increased terms became progressively more delirious. The town was by an artillery bombarding while red, white and blue flags were everywhere.

Aboard Uganda

Herman Goering's daughter, Emmy Sonnemann, and her husband, Ernst Tuengeth, son of Mrs. H. Tuengeth, Munich, Germany, are pictured aboard the M.S.S.R. Uganda, Canadian cruiser detailed to the Mediterranean area. Mr. Tuengeth, 34, has been in the navy less than 8 year.

CIVILIANS LOOT SPOILS OF WAR

When a German freight train carrying wine and clothing was halted in its tracks by an Allied air attack near Frankfurt, Germany, German civilians, Russians, Poles, a few French and some Italians all rushed to the train and began to look over some of the women almost hysterical with joy as they try on their new hats and clothing.

TRENTON

Comforts Sent To Injured Men By Red Cross

Trenton, April 11—Work at the Red Cross rooms was resumed on Tuesday following the Easter recess and though the attendance was good, others are still urgently needed for this important work.

A letter was read from a Lieutenant C. S. Glassco of the R.C.N.V.R. formerly commanding officer of the "Trentonian," recently sunk on active service, telling of the loyalty and bravery of his men during the sinking of their ship. Mentioning two of the crew Petty Officer Melvin Thorogood and Stoker Sydney C. Atkinson, R.C.N.V.R. who are now in the Royal Cornwall Infirmary at Truro, County of Cornwall, England, as the result of severe injuries sustained at the time of the sinking, Commander Glassco said he was sure message of cheer and any comforts which might be sent them from Trenton would be greatly appreciated.

With this in mind the local branch immediately packed and dispatched a box to these boys containing candy, gum, playing cards, reading matter, socks, sweaters and a beautiful afghan, which had just reached the work rooms, and a donation from Mrs. A. Tweddy, Trenton. While the local branch will, in all probability, again send messages to these unfortunate lads of Trenton's current schoolchildren if they would appreciate hearing from any others in town, who might be kind enough to write them.

In addition to the afghan donated by Mrs. Tweddy on Tuesday a donation of $1.00 was received from Miss Walker's class of College Street School.

President R. F. Joyce presided over the regular monthly meeting when the minutes were read by Miss F. Nelson, recently appointed secretary and the treasurer's report given by Mr. G. McAvoy. Total for the recent drive has reached $6,-000.00 with the South Station of the R.C.A.F. yet to report. Undoubtedly Trenton's quota of $6,000 will be near $10,000.00.

Shipping report read by convener H. Beasley showed 382 articles to have been shipped to headquarters during the months of March at a total value of $622.20; consisting of two seamen's turtle neck sweaters, 1 pair ski stockings, 40 pairs sea socks, 10 army sweaters, 20 pairs army and airforce socks. For civilian relief, 10 pr. G. Rompers, 4 baby nighties, 2 mothercraft gowns, 46 articles in babies' wool sets, 30 pairs boys' short trunk pants with braces, 5 pair boys' flannel shorts, 15 boys' tweed jackets and 10 caps, 6 boys' lumberjacks, 9 pr. girls' slacks, 5 L. patchwork quilts, Special donation: 26 crocheted wool pullovers and 23 crocheted wool slips.

CANADIAN ARMY TESTS EQUIPMENT FOR WINTER FIGHTING

CANADIANS CROSS RHINE INTO GERMANY

The crossing of the Rhine by the First Canadian Army has gone down in military annals as one of the outstanding feats of the war. Men and equipment were ferried across the historic river in Ducks, their crossing being covered by smoke screens, attack boats, artillery and air cover. Top picture shows troops marching to point of embarkation; for the dash across the Rhine. Note the attack boat on lorry. Lower shows ferry service by these Ducks of the army's amphibious fleet taking battle troops across the river.—Canadian Army Overseas, Photos.

HOWE PREDICTS

Estimates Rose 12 P. C.

Under present conditions 24 per cent is for expenditure not, 42 per cent for Defence and other direct commitments, 28 per cent for the Dominion-Provincial tax agreements and 6 per cent for other United Nations.

He said the total production in the fiscal year 1944-45 at $6,200,-000,000, a drop of 35 per cent from the previous year, was a record that he had estimated a seven per cent drop would be the case. The reason was due to changes in military requirements and increased efficiency of production.

"We have made great strides in the last five years in the development of our industrial technique," he said. "It is safe to say that the report to the Canadian taxpayer that efficiency of management and skill in labour now is better reflected in lower costs."

Mr. Howe gave no over-all estimate of war production in the present year, saying uncertainties and this responsible for restricted industries in airplane and ship construction, but more steel production than in any previous year due to improved demands from European basic fronts.

Small arms production will be down, but chemicals and explosives will continue to be produced at a high rate, he said.

Will Show Decline

Guns and small arms will show declines and a reduction of 17 per cent in mechanical transport is anticipated. Radar, jet and internal-type production will be stepped up.

In shipbuilding production the Dominion plants will concentrate on front-line planes from a number of trainer types are being demobilized.

Out of the Victory aircraft plants at Malton, Ontario, now producing Lancaster bombers will come the new Lincoln, a longer four-engined bomber, believed to be a British type developed to the Boeing Super-Fortress for use against Japan.

Mr. Howe stressed the gravity of the coal position which results from reduced output in Canadian mines and from cutbacks from the United States. He predicted next winter's heating would present problems just as acute if not more so than those of last.

"Our manufacturing industries are now operating at peak production, consuming more electric power, and this level of production will continue at least until the end of the war in Europe," he said.

Concert by Civilian Use

"After that, the war with Japan will demand a large percentage of the output of our manufacturing industries. Any capacity not required for war will be converted to civilian production.

"The strength of Canada's productive industries in time of war has astonished the world and must be a source of pride to every man and woman who has had a part in war production.

"I consider it a privilege to have been associated with men and women so conscious of their responsibilities and so diligent in carrying out their daily tasks. It has been a grand association and a grand accomplishment."

Mr. Abbott, speaking after John Diefenbaker (PC — Lake Centre) repeated a request that correspondents dealing with Gen. Pearkes' retirement be tabled, told the House the former Pacific coast commander first requested retirement in a letter that was dated Dec. 8 and signed Jan. 8, Jan. 23, Feb. 12 and Feb. 14.

Advised of Retirement

In his letter of Jan. 23 General Pearkes took the stand that he "did not feel that he could conscientiously continue to carry out the policy of endeavoring to convert N.R.M.A. men to general status," Mr. Abbott said.

Finally on March 14, Gen. Pearkes had been advised by the Adjutant-General that he was to be retired and that there was no post in the army to which he could be recommended.

Mr. Abbott said the result of this action was that Gen. Pearkes "retired on a pension $5 per cent higher than he would have received had he voluntarily retired."

He added it was perfectly obvious that an officer who states he has no confidence in the policy of the government is not — and he himself realizes it — suitable to receive another command.

J. A. Ross (PC — Souris) said he saw no reason for retiring General Pearkes for disagreeing with government policy when Gen. Alan Waughton remained as defence minister while disagreeing with government policy.

Mr. Abbott replied the difference was that "a soldier may disagree with government policy and yet accept that policy. He does not attempt to impose his will on the civil power."

Stewart Green (PC — Vancouver South) said there was no justification for attacks against General Pearkes who had a "perfect record." He was Canada's outstanding soldier of the First Great War and had done a "splendid" job as Pacific commander in the Second.

Would Not Grant Farm Leaves

Mr. Gardiner, in referring to an order he said was issued by General Pearkes a year ago, that no farm leaves were to be granted in Pacific Command except in "unusual and most urgent circumstances," said Gen. Pearkes had done this despite the fact the government's announced policy was to grant farm leaves.

"He may have been the best army officer in the world, but he did not have a proper appreciation of the importance of participation in the Dominion of Canada if this war was to be carried to a successful conclusion," said Mr. Gardiner, "by having that appreciation, of course, he was not the proper person to continue to carry on as head of the Pacific Command."

Mr. Green said that it fit behooves the ministers to try to smear General Pearkes. Mr. Gardiner replied that "there is no man who has been more completely smeared than Gen. Mackaughton, and he will need protection at any time with General Pearkes in connection with his activities."

German General Claims Hitler Postponed Intended Invasion Of Britain Against Leaders' Advice

By HAL BOYLE

(Southern Germany, April 14 (AP)) — A small, square-jawed German general who holds the stars for the biggest bluff since the invasion of Britain told me Monday that Adolf Hitler postponed the supposed invasion at the advice of his military leaders.

The Bluffing major-general said he had been relieved of his command a month ago because the Nazi dictators no longer trusted him.

The Wehrmacht officers who want to make peace no longer have any real power in the German army," he declared.

Explaining his role in the abortive invasion, he said:

"You Remember wanted to attack Russia immediately after Poland fell in 1939 but he was over-ruled by Hitler. Instead we were ordered to wind up our campaign in Yugoslavia and prepare to attack Russia."

In 1942, the high general declared, the Russians thought the grandest opportunity had been missed and that Britain was too strong to be invaded. But in 1943 the Nazi leadership wanted to establish a bridgehead in Russia and prepare for a blow against Britain.

Because of his skill and knowledge, the Nazi general was given the job of organizing invasion attempt. Nevertheless, he said that thousands of barges were concentrated but that the invasion proper finally was abandoned.

"Only two barges of two things," he said. "The R.A.F. bombing attacks on our barge concentrations and the invasion of North Africa by the Allies."

Soon Settle Details For Overseas Vote

Toronto, April 11 (CP)—Premier Drew of Ontario said that details for taking the overseas vote in the Ontario general election should be settled soon as a result of a conference in Ottawa between Dominion and Provincial election officials.

"After the details are settled, we will fix the date for the election," said the Premier.

Regulations regarding the overseas vote were not prepared, until after dissolution of the legislature March 28. The government had assumed it would be drafting them in relation to a new voters list Act and a new election Act. But dissolution came before these Acts were passed and it became necessary to draft regulations under the new Active Service Voters' Act in relation to the old voters Act and the old election Act.

"The ground has been carefully covered by letter, telegraph and telephone and the meeting in Ottawa is the culmination of these exchanges," said the Premier.

Berlin's Mosquito Scourge

R.A.F. Mosquitos have been raiding Berlin this year whenever flying is possible. During February and March they made thirty-six raids in a row, without missing a night. Last year there were sixty-seven Mosquito raids on the German capital, and 2,400 tons of bombs were dropped. By the beginning of February this year, before the non-stop series of raids began, the figure had risen to more than 3,000 tons. Thus R.A.F. Mosquitos alone have dropped nearly half the tonnage that the whole of the Luftwaffe has dropped on London since the war began (7,500 tons).

A Mosquito can carry a 4,000 lb. blockbuster from England to Berlin. That is four times heavier than the largest bomb the Germans dropped on London and equal to the entire bomb load of one of the Junkers, Heinkels or Dorniers that carried out the original Blitz on Britain from bases in nearby France. The blockbuster is also twice as powerful as the inaccurate V-2 rocket which, when aimed at London may fall anywhere in the home counties or even miss England altogether.

How do these raids fit in with the general strategy of the air war? In the first place they go after specific targets in the capital, mostly railway terminals and other communication centres; they also hit at the administrative sections of the city and special factories that are known to have been missed in the big raids. The Mosquitos have been steadily picking off these targets for more than a year, but there are still a lot of them left.

The other purpose is to divert German war effort, and in this the Mosquitos are singularly successful. So long as they keep coming over the Germans must do what they can to stop them, and this costs the Reich many hundred times as much manpower as the Allies need to lay on the raids. The Germans have tried out jet-propelled night-fighters; they have had to design and build a special high firing anti-aircraft gun. Their fire-fighting and air raid services must be always up to strength.

In the spring of last year when Berlin was left alone for some months the Germans withdrew their defences and used them in other cities. The Mosquitos have forced them to bring guns and night-fighters back to the capital. That alone justifies the effort these raids entail. A Mosquito raid is one of the cheapest methods yet devised for placing explosives on a given target. A London newspaper calculated that a thousand-bomber raid costs about £3 million ($12 million) to put on. A Mosquito raid costs only a few thousands Mosquitos are so fast that few night-fighters can touch them, and with their modern pressure cabins they can fly above the effective range of anti-aircraft fire. In R.A.F. Bomber Command a Mosquito trip to Berlin is looked on as relatively safe. The aircrews of heavy bombers usually take a six-months' rest from operations after thirty missions, but the Mosquito crews make seventy missions before going on rest. There are some squadrons that have raided Berlin regularly for months on end without losing a single man or aircraft.

Mosquito bombing is also accurate. In addition to its bombs a Mosquito can carry all the modern equipment needed for accurate blind or visual bombing. They are sometimes used as pathfinders for the Lancasters on specially difficult jobs. From their operational height they can place a bomb inside an area not much bigger than a football field.

Treasures in Merkers Cave

German hiding of untold wealth in the earth has been revealed these past few days with the discoveries in the Merkers salt mine of not only works of art but what is said to be the entire gold hoard of Nazi Germany. The weekend brought news of the wholesale find of gold in bullion and of coins which filled the floor of the hidden chamber. At the time it was revealed by the curator of the German state museum that two-thirds of the Reich's national treasures were stored in the cave at Merkers, Germany. It was said by him that a Titian Venus was there stored. Then again yesterday came further news of the finding in this salt cave of a great art treasure, the sculptured head of the Egyptian Queen Nefrere, consort of Rameses II. It is reported that in this cave are thousands of art works, such as those of Leonardo da Vinci, Botticelli and the Rembrandt as well as a complete set of the German Albrecht Durer's drawings.

Against Germany's solicitude for these art works can be set her thieving and looting of art works over occupied Europe. For the years of the war Germany has been systematically stealing such treasures and carrying them back to Germany. Goering is said to have enriched his fancy with treasures of art and fine furnitures of priceless value from over occupied Europe. Where he and other German looters have these treasures will likely be discovered to prevent Germans disposing of them for it is the Allied intention to see that treasures of this kind will be returned to their rightful owners.

The secreting of the art treasures from Berlin in the salt mine shows that war, for which Germans have a propensity, has made them realize the hazard which war creates for such creations of the mind of man as these works of art. It is a sad commentary on their mental and moral makeup that they can appreciate the danger war creates to such things as were hidden in the cave while they utterly and callously ignored the right of the people of the free lands to freedom and all the fine things of democracy. This contrast shows the essentially barbaric character of German psychology. Over against this consideration of the German authorities for works of art can be set the inhuman deeds done by Germans against what is greater than art, the lives of the peoples of Europe and the rest of the world.

A Punch to New Word

(Saturday Review of Literature)

Perhaps the most spectacular of all new words of 1944 is Maury Maverick's gobbledygook, which he defines as "talk or writing which is long, pompous, vague, involved, usually with Latinized words." He wrote as follows concerning the word's origin:

> People asked me how I got the word. I do not know. It must have come in a vision. Perhaps I was thinking of the old bearded turkey gobbler back in Texas who was always gobbledygobbling and strutting with ridiculous pomposity. At the end of his gobble was a sort of gook.

The word met with an immediate response over the country and bids fair to be a permanent addition to the English vocabulary. Typical of the new usage is a reviewer's comment that a certain author "writes the purest Gobbledygook. The Department of English at Lehigh University proposed a plan to put "all jargonists and pseudo-scientists" into a university of their own on a desert isle, and this was to be named "The University of Gobbledy Gook."

No doubt a train of derivatives will appear, for already two are in use—gobbledygooker, used by Maverick himself, and gobbledygookish, used by the columnists Van Devander and Player.

The true aim of everyone who aspires to be a teacher should be, not to impart his own opinions, but to kindle minds.—Robertson.

What is the venom that poisons the mind?
Hate.
What to the good in a foe makes us blind?

What is it maddens man; firing his brain,
When it were wiser for him to remain
Cool and collected, good-tempered and sane?
Hate.

What makes man petty and peevish and proud?

What makes him arrogant, ugly and loud?

What steals man's reason; fills him with fear;
Chills him to pity and prods him to sneer;
Drives him to folly and spoils his career?

SNOW REMOVAL BIG BUSINESS AT GOOSE BAY

Bull-Dozers, Blowers, Graders and Rollers Keep the Runways Clear in All Weathers at Great Labrador Airport

By JACK BRAYLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Goose Bay, Labrador, April 11 (CP) — Only relief from the serious business of digging this big R.C.A.F. base out of 20-foot snowdrifts this Winter was the laugh the snow-removal squad got out of the Toronto-Ottawa-Montreal argument as to which city handled the most snow with the greatest facility.

"Mayor Bob Saunders, of Toronto, made us laugh when he cried about 60 or 70 mere inches," said Flt. Sgt. Bob Cairns, 32, Mirror, Alta., as his great mastodon of a snow-blower idled under the lip of a barn-sized snow bank.

Cairns is in charge of the crew which has had to clear 20-foot slices for a length of 50 miles on the broad runways and other 20-foot pathways on the station's 50-miles of highway.

The snowfall at Goose was about 13 feet this Winter and when you're jeeping along the roadways you can't see the roof-tops of barracks and buildings hidden behind snow-piles as much as 25 feet high. Some buildings—even late in March—were still entered through a snow tunnel.

The snow began to fall in October and the first storm lasted for three days and piled up to depth of 40 inches. This halted operations for only half a day in which time the snow removal crew dug officers and men out of their snowbound barracks and by the time good flying weather arrived three 8,000-foot runways were cleared, rolled and ready to handle aircraft.

The unending drifts at Goose were found to create a hazard for pilots completing long flights over Labrador's snowy wastes. When they reached the airport area it was difficult for them clearly to distinguish runways from other airport facilities wrapped in a deep white coverlet that seemed to have no borders.

Red-Sprayed Strips

So a red mixture was created and a spray trailer improvised so that strips 16 feet wide could be laid down on each runway, thus affording pilots a contrast to the limitless whiteness of the area.

Bulldozers, blowers, graders, rollers and some manual labor do the big job in temperatures that range as low as 45 degrees below zero. It is interesting to note that in the Summer when the bulldozer crews are moving mud from the muskeg country to the sandy airport level for cultivation purposes, the temperatures are sometimes as high as 100 above.

Cairns said that the station hadn't lost an hour of good flying weather throughout the Winter due to snow conditions. "Our meteorological station keeps us posted as to when to expect the snow and we sail into it with everything we have when it arrives," he explained.

He said that when the meteorologists indicate the snowfall will be a short one, they usually wait until it is over before starting the job of removal, but when long falls are forecast they "stay with it right from the start and we are right up with the last flake that falls."

An impression of the great quantity of snow that has to be handled was best obtained by watching LAC. Simon MacMillan of Winnipeg, push the heavy blade of a giant bulldozer into a mammoth pile. The snow was so deep and the bank so steep that great white gobs were showered over the dozer's cabin and gave the impression of a corvette pushing through a particularly heavy sea.

Fleet of Amphtracks Eased Effort In Making Landing on Beachhead

By ERNIE PYLE

Okinawa—(by Navy radio)—The LCP in which I rode shoreward on Love Day morning at Okinawa was so crowded the men just stood against each other. I knew most of them for they were all from the ship that brought us up.

They had been riding for an hour before they picked us up off the control boat and they were soaked to the skin from the spray.

The morning was warm and sunshiny, yet they had all gotten very cold just from being wet. Some of them got the cold shakes and couldn't stop. They joked with each other about quaking with fear, instead of cold. We all smiled sort of sickly like.

We talked most of the way, but I can't remember much of what we said. We were all sort of tensed up inside.

* * *

These Pacific islands have one bad feature that we never had to contend with in any of the European invasions. And that is a reef that lies just under water, three or four hundred yards out. Hence a boat of any size can't run up to the beach, for it can't get over the reef.

Consequently, we had to transfer again about a half mile from shore. We ran up alongside a fleet of amphtracks—amphibious tractors—which were waiting there for us.

These are like big trucks, only they're on tractors. When in the water the tractor treads, built cup-like, propel the thing along. The moment it touches bottom it crawls along like a tractor. They can go miles to sea or miles inland, either one.

Our packs were so heavy it was hard to get from one boat to the other. It took our load about 10 minutes to transfer. And then we started the last lap, the one that really counted.

The terrific bombardment had completely stopped about a minute before H-Hour. By now almost an hour had passed, and the ships were again firing, spasmodically.

Small fires were burning inland and a great cloud of black smoke rose from the airport, up on high ground. But the pall of smoke and dust which had covered the beach had blown away, and we could clearly see the men on shore and the wave ahead of us landing.

We had all expected to go onto the beach in a hailstorm of tracer bullets, mortar shells throwing sand, and artillery shells whistling into the water near us. And yet we couldn't see a bit of firing ahead. We hoped it was true. We hoped. While we were hoping, somebody took out his canteen and had a drink. People get awfully thirsty as they approach a beachhead. The canteen went around. When it came to me I took a big gulp, and almost choked. For it wasn't water at all but straight brandy!

During the bombardment and all during the landings a lone four-engined Liberator bomber flew slowly back and forth over the beach. We marveled at his audacity for he seemed an easy target for ack-ack. Yet he didn't seem to get shot at.

Liberators are too big for carriers to handle so it would have had to come all the way from the Philippines or Iwo Jima or Saipan. We presumed it carried photographers.

It seemed incongruous, lumbering around up there alone so nonchalantly.

We were musing on the Liberator when suddenly the amphtrack hit bottom, tilted way over on one side as though it was going to upset, then tilted back with a big thump that almost threw us off our feet.

We were crossing the coral reef. It was a good crossing at that. The water was smooth and there were no rollers on the reef. The gods were good to us on that invasion day.

The weather was warm and spring-like. The sun shone brightly. There was no wind. It couldn't have been better.

From the reef on in, the amphtrack joggled and tilted as it rode the rough coral bottom. Then at last it climbed out of the water and onto the sand.

We ran up about 20 feet from the water's edge. The driver let down the ramp that forms the rear end of the amphtrack and we stepped out. We were on Okinawa an hour and a half after H-Hour without getting shot at and we hadn't even got our feet wet.

The first words I heard on Japanese soil were from an incredulous marine who said,

"Hell, this is just like one of MacArthur's landings."

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

WHAT TO DO ABOUT HYPERTENSION

In a talk recently on high blood pressure I tried to indicate the fallacy of (1) restricting the eating of meat, (2) taking salts and (3) assuming that there are certain specific remedies, cures or treatments that one with high blood pressure (hypertension, hyperpiesia) must or should have, that the high pressure is what ails the patient, when as a matter of fact, it is only one sign of something wrong.

Whenever I tell what not to do about a complaint or what does not cause the trouble I am conscious of the inevitable queries that will come in—what in tarnation does cause it then, or what should one do about it? In the first place, when I say here that there is no scientific or physiological foundation for the notion of many doctors and most laymen that there is "nervous energy" apart from ordinary physical or muscular energy I'm trying to teach hygiene, how to keep well. It does not imply that I can tell you why feel so exhausted even though you do no hard work or muscular work etc.

If you insist on asking me to diagnose or prescribe for your trouble I can only remind you that the instructions printed regularly with this column bar such letters from consideration.

Now here are some things I believe every one with high blood pressure should do. Whether you do these things or not is up to you—I cannot advise your further about it, no matter how much information you may give me about your history. History—that's what I'm grousing about, folks. It is not within my province. Please spare me multi-page letters about it.

One with high blood pressure should.

1. Have a complete health examination at least once a year, preferably by the same physician or physicians every time.
2. Have a retinoscopic examination by a physician who uses the ophthalmoscope or retinoscope (not necessarily an oculist).
3. Make a must of getting sufficient exercise every day to provide a vicarious outlet for blowing off steam (emotional tension) produced by trials, worries, vexations or irritations of life.
4. Drink plenty of water — not less than two quarts a day.
5. Reduce if you are overweight.
6. Take life facetiously — but I'll explain this in the next talk.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

I have a great deal of pain in my finger joints and knees. Doctors say it is chronic arthritis. I have your booklet "Tis Called Rheumatism" but I can't seem to understand it. (Mrs. W. A. McL.)

Answer—If a reader of your evident intelligence does not understand what I say in the booklet, I'm abashed and ashamed. Won't you help me, Ma'am, by marking, say with a question mark or a cross, the paragraphs or sentences or words you do not understand and returning the booklet (I'll be grateful for your co-operation, and it may indirectly benefit many other readers.) Of course nobody knows enough about the conditions called chronic arthritis or "rheumatism" to pretend he understands it, but that doesn't excuse any confusing or obscure language in such a booklet. I have a pamphlet on "Calcium and Rheumatis" — send a stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for it, but you must ask in writing, not with a clipping.

Oatmeal

Ben Told if a person eats raw oatmeal it will cause worms. As I like to eat it raw I'm worried.

(B. J.)

Answer—Nonsense: It is a good habit to eat raw oats or oatmeal, raw wheat or cracked wheat, raw potato, raw turnip, raw greens, raw carrot, raw cabbage, raw fruit, etc., daily, if you like it. Not safe to eat raw or underdone beef, pork or fish—thorough cooking destroys possible larvae of tapeworm in meat or fish, larvae (microscopic) of trichina in pork or ham.

Eye Color

Do blue eyed parents ever have a brown eyed baby? If one parent has blue eyes and blond hair and brown hair, can the baby have brown eyes? (K. W.)

Answer—Brown-eyed parents may have a blue-eyed child; if one parents has blue eyes, the other other-colored eyes, some of their children may have blue eyes, some other colored eyes. Eyes of all newborn infants (except in negroes and other dark-skinned races) are grey-blue and the pigmentation of the iris, in those to become dark-eyed, is not completed until about the end of the first year.

KITCHEN CABINET

"Kitchen Cabinet," a phrase coined by John Randolph of Roanoke, is the popular name applied to a small group of intimate political advisers of President Andrew Jackson during his early years in the White House.

The original Kitchen Cabinet was composed of five able journalists who, as editors of influential regional newspapers, supported Jackson for the presidency and continued to support his policies in Washington.

Although these men held no important offices at that time, they advised Jackson on the real policies of the administration and had more influence on the President's political actions than did the members of his official cabinet.

They were called the Kitchen Cabinet because it was said that when they visited the President they went through the back or kitchen door of the White House to avoid public notice. John Randolf, a caustic critic and coiner of phrases, declared that this little coterie of newspapermen and minor officials decided the great affairs of state while the members of the official cabinet were asleep.

The moving spirit and the ablest and most influential member of the Kitchen Cabinet was Amos Kendall, of Kentucky, who was Fourth Auditor of the Treasury, although he later became Postmaster General. The other members were General Duff Green, of Missouri, editor of the "United States Telegraph," the administration organ in Washington; Major William B. Lewis, of Tennessee, Second Auditor of the Treasury; Isaac Hill, editor of the "New Hampshire Patriot;" and, later, Francis P. Blair, Sr., of Kentucky, who was editor of "The Globe," which in 1830 superseded the "United States Telegraph" as the "court journal" in the National Capital.

The personnel of Jackson's Kitchen Cabinet is not always given as the same because the term continued to be applied popularly to a continually changing group of his intimate advisers.

E. B. Jolliffe, C.C.F. Is Renominated

Toronto, April 11 (CP) — His renomination to contest York South constituency in the coming provincial election secured, E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario C.C.F. leader and opposition leader in the recently-dissolved Ontario legislature, said he will place a "definite, clear-cut and sound" election platform before Ontario voters.

Mr. Jolliffe, who carried the constituency in the 1943 election with a plurality of more than 2,500 votes, received his renomination by acclamation at the riding C.C.F. meeting. In his speech of acceptance he said the C.C.F. platform consists of a program to guide Ontario in the transition period following the war and in the post-war years. It deals with Dominion-Provincial relations, agriculture, health and education.
